Angling with Live Bait Fish Now Banned in Algonquin Park

HUNTSVILLE, Ont. (CP) — Angling with live bait fish has been banned in Algonquin Park, one of the province's major recreational areas, in a move to preserve the speckled trout from such undesirable fish as perch.

The ban, which announced Monday, said many of the province's major resources, which is the 2,000-square-mile park have become heavily populated with perch that were introduced into the waters by anglers.

The ban applies to minnows being taken into the park from other waters and also to minnows caught by trap in the park itself.

Carman Douglas, regional biologist for Algonquin Park district, said perch have stunted the growth of fish so many lakes in the park that something had to be done.

The ministry also said two lakes in the park, Lavielle and Jack, have been closed to angling this year to help natural fish reproduction. Lavielle is designated for lake trout angling.

Royalties and Taxes Could Wipe Out Profits

TORONTO (CP) — A bigger federal tax bite on the mining and petroleum industries, proposed in Finance Minister John Turner's budget, raises uncertainties, some executives said Tuesday.

John Bonus, managing director of the Canadian Mining Association, said new federal tax plans together with higher provincial royalties could strip some companies of 100 per cent of their profits.

Jerry McAfee, president of Gulf Oil Canada Ltd., said more time was needed to sort out implications of the tax changes "but it doesn't sound like they (the government) are anxious to help us explore for more petroleum."

Mr. Turner said in his budget address Monday that effective immediately, no deduction would be allowed for mining taxes, royalties or other arrangements . . . paid to or derived by a government body in production from a resource operated by the corporate taxpayers.

The corporate tax rate on profits of mining and petroleum companies will be raised to 50 per cent from the 1974 rate of 48 per cent. That rate originally had been scheduled to decline one percentage point a year to 46 per cent in 1976.

It was the interpretation of the clause on provincial royalty deductions that appeared to cause most concern in the industries affected.

Mr. Bonus said new provincial tax proposals in British Columbia, if not allowed as an expense by the federal government, could in effect wipe out mining company profits.

A spokesman for Noranda Mines Ltd., after a preliminary reading of the budget, he added, said the two levels of government could, in theory, demand more than 100 per cent of profits. "This would lay final waste to the mining industry."

Mavety's Not Ready To Trade in His Stick

Those of us who admit to pulling for Toronto teams in hockey, football and, yes, in the old days sonny, baseball, have grown used to the barbs hurled by others who know nothing of loyalty.

But would you believe a well-aimed shaft has failed to find the mark?

It was Tuesday morning.

No. He didn't try any of those approaches.

What he did come out with was meant to sting.

It didn't.

"Argonauts, Maple Leafs, Toros," he paused here, and then (with a note of triumph) "Toronto teams just haven't got it."

With that, he was gone.

The point he was making of course, was that the night before, another Toronto team had expired in the playoffs. Toros were downed by Chicago Cougars.

It's just as well our friend wasn't around long enough for a rebuttal. He would never have believed we got a charge out of seeing Larry Mavety and company qualify for the World Hockey Association finals.

Really, it was great seeing a local product play a major role in a pro hockey team's big moment.

While we were watching, courtesy of Global (Cable 3), Mavety picked up a pair of assists and looked very good doing it.

A defenceman, Larry took a regular shift and saw duty on the Cougar powerplay where he made his hard, accurate shot from the point pay dividends for the Pat Stapleton-coached Chicago squad.

But there were others in the Quinte area who were interested in the result of the game for a far different reason.

During the summer months, Mavety is sought after for his talents on the ball diamond. The way Cougars are going, the Quinte Fastball League will be off and running before the player in question is ready to trade his hockey stick for a bat.

Last season, Mavety did the catching for George Ferguson and the Trenton Auger Men's Wear team.

Wayne Drake, spokesman for the Trenton entry in the QFL, is confident these days. And Kit cites the weather that has the coach upset.

Rumors are flying. And Mavety isn't on the scene to verify or deny.

Word has it the heavy-hitting catcher may sign with one of the Belleville entries in the league.

Naturally, Mr. Drake would like to have Mavety's signature on an Auger card again this time around.

First, there's a shot at drinking champagne from the Avco Cup. To do that, Cougars must upset the plans of the Howes, Gordie, Mark and Marty, who have made hockey a family affair.

Besides, if this is ball playing weather, we'll take ours on television.

SLICES — Ask anyone involved in sports and he or she will tell you a league secretary plays an important role in the operation of the organization.

Secretaries of bowling leagues are especially important to their programs. Not only are they concerned with points won and lost, league standings, and preparations for banquets, they must keep each bowler's average and handicap compiled weekly.

Belleville seems to be blessed with many conscientious bowling secretaries.

One of these is Sandy Barnes who also finds time to help out with the White Cane Bowling League.

But we're losing Sandy. The Barnes family is moving to British Columbia.

Our loss is "the Big Country's" gain.

Olympics Shake The Injury Bug

Well, they finally made it. The two Belleville Olympic soccer teams that is. Tuesday night, they made it through a practice without an injury cropping up.

The teams have had three serious injuries during recent training sessions. Two of the injured players will each miss about one month of the season. The third could be out of action for the balance of the 1974 campaign.

Bob Watson, playing-coach with the Premier League Olympics, was shelved when he re-injured a shoulder. Ricci Johnston may not be back. He's hobbled by torn knee ligaments.

Ed Van Rompey, goalkeeper with Golden Mile Restaurant Olympics of the Bay of Quinte Soccer Association (BQSA), is also on the limp. He has a cut leg.

"We have the players who can do the job, given a little more experience," says O'Neill.

Because of the injury to Van Rompey, Zoltan Vigi will see double duty. An accomplished goalkeeper with some pro experience, Vigi will handle the chore for both teams when there are not conflicting playing dates.

Golden Mile is scheduled for its first BQSA start Thursday night in Trenton at Centennial Park. Trenton's Whitley Insurance team will supply the opposition in the 8:15 match.

First Premier League play in Belleville will take place Saturday, May 25 at the Zwick's Island pitch. Other teams in the grouping are from Kingston, Oshawa, Oshawa and Peterborough.

RACES SCHEDULED

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Jockey Club has set dates for the Quebec Derby and Fleur De Lys Stakes, two thoroughbred races temporarily transplanted to Toronto's Woodbine track from Montreal. The Quebec Derby for three-year-olds will be run June 2 and the Fleur de Lys on June 28.

WON'T RELEASE SMITH

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Los Angeles Rams of the National Football League say they won't honor running back Larry Smith's request to be released from the final year of his Rams contract so that he can play with Jacksonville Sharks of the World Football League.

ROBINSON SIGNS

CALGARY (CP) — Calgary Stampeders announced Tuesday that all-star place kicker Larry Robinson has signed his 16th consecutive contract with the Western Football Conference team.

Ladies' League Points to New Season

The Belleville and District Ladies' Softball League will operate with at least six teams this season. Entered are Belleville Yardmen Benefit Fund, Belleville Broadloom, Quinte Antenna, Lambert Construction, Simpsons-Sears, and A & D Esso-Dundas Car Wash. League executive members Margie Scanlan, vice-president; Carol Merrill, treasurer; Janice Lucas, president, and Liz Reid, secretary, have set May 20 as the opening date for league play.

ANAF Dukes Repeat as Champions

The winner of the trophy in 1973, Dukes got an argument from Dave's who gave it a good shot in Tuesday's second half set.

After a convincing 7-2 win at home on April 21, Dukes went into last night's play at Gilbert Hotel needing only three more games to wrap up the title.

Dave's took three of the first five by scores of 21-15, 21-20 and 23-20.

Then Dukes erased any hopes of a Trenton comeback by recording their 10th win of the series. And there was no doubt of the outcome at the game that clinched the championship. Final score was 23-2.

Earlier Belleville wins were by scores of 21-12 and 21-20.

Members of the winning team were Fred Browning, Hugh Northey, Ron Culloden, John Cole, Bob Reid, Ronnie John, Junior Golka and Russ King.

The win capped a very successful season for Dukes who finished in first place in the A Division of the Belleville and District League and then captured top honors in the playoffs.

BOSTON (CP) — Bobby Orr saved Boston Bruins and the oddsmakers Tuesday night.

His goal with 21 seconds remaining in the third period gave the favored Bruins a 3-2 win over Philadelphia Flyers and a 1-0 lead in the Stanley Cup playoff final.

The second game in the best-of-seven National Hockey League series will be played Thursday night in Boston Garden, starting at 7:30 p.m. EDT, with the third set for Sunday afternoon in Philadelphia.

The Bruins got the winning goal following a faceoff in their own end. The puck sailed into the Philadelphia end and was followed by Wayne Cashman of the Bruins and defenceman Andre Dupont of the Flyers.

The play started innocently enough, with the Flyers applying pressure after rebounding from a 2-0 first-period deficit. But when Cashman and Dupont got tangled up, Boston's Ken Hodge pounced on the loose puck and fed Orr who was coming unguarded by Frock of the Philadelphia goal.

"I saw Cash and Dupont going into the corner and I was coming behind slowly," Orr said. "They ran into each other and I saw Hodge float in on the puck so I started to float in."

The shot appeared to strike one of the players bottled up in the Philadelphia goalmouth, but Parent didn't offer any alibies.

"It was just like the other two I didn't get my eye on it," he said the goalie who went into the game with a playoff goals-against average of 1.97.

Orr — Fires 25-footer game since eliminating Chicago Black Hawks in six games the previous Tuesday, stormed over the Flyers in the first 20 minutes and got goals from Cashman and Gregg Sheppard 53 seconds apart.

The Flyers, who finished a tough seven-games series with New York Rangers Sunday, appeared to get their second wind about the halfway mark of the second period and started to take the play. They tied the score on goals by Orest Kindrachuk and Bobby Clarke.

"We spent the first period thinking we were still playing the Rangers," Parent said. "It took us that long to adjust to the Bruins' style, which is ours."

Hitting and persistent forechecking by the Flyers upset the Boston attack. But Coach Fred Shero figured it was a game the Bruins had to get out of their system.

Philadelphia centres won 46 faceoffs to 35 for Boston and Bobby Clarke, who had the assignment of shadowing Esposito most of the night, won 23 of 30.

"As the games go along, we'll get more accustomed to their faceoffs," Goddoin said. "We lost too many.

"It could be we weren't working hard enough on them in practice while the Flyers are coming off a series where they had to win most of the faceoffs."

He shrugged off suggestions that the Bruins looked tired.

"That faceoff just before we scored was in our end of the ice. Did you see those guys go up ice?

"If that's what you call tired, I'd like to see them moving when they're not."

He said the only problem the Bruins had was that "we stopped skating in the second period."

"When you buzz around like we did in the first period, there's no way we should have slowed down."

Orr admitted the Bruins "went into a shell, just like we did in the Chicago series."

"If we don't skate against these guys like we did in the first period, we're going to be in a lot of trouble."

He called 43 minutes in penalties against the Flyers—bringing their playoff record to 414 minutes, including a game misconduct to rookie defenceman Jim Watson for being third man in during a second-period scrap.

Dupont said Cashman should have been called for holding on the game-winning score, and was given a 10-minute misconduct. Cashman pleaded not guilty to the offence. He showed a tear in his stocking, claiming Dupont's skate got caught. Neither player could shake loose before Orr's goal.

Winners Are Worried

BOSTON (CP) — Boston Bruins, along with their coach Bep Guidolin, appear to know what happened between the first and second periods of Tuesday night's Stanley Cup game against Philadelphia Flyers.

The Bruins held a 2-0 lead after 20 minutes, but when the second period began, they came out flat and needed a goal in the final minute of the game by rookie Bobby Orr to down the Flyers 3-2 in the first game of the best-of-seven National Hockey League final series.

"I don't know what it was," Orr said. "We got up a few goals and then go into a shell.

"We have to play like we did in the first period or these guys are going to take us."

"The layoff didn't hurt us, we just stopped skating," Orr said.

Guidolin echoed the words of his all-star defenceman.

"We just quit skating and working in the second period," Guidolin said. "If the week off would have showed in the first period."

Fred Shero, coach of the Flyers, said:

"I would have been bad if they had walloped us. It will do more for us than for them. A close game will do more for our young players' confidence."

Orr's goal was scored with 22 seconds remaining in the game, on a play with Wayne Cashman and Ken Hodge. He beat Bernie Parent with a 25-foot drive from a bit side to block Orr's drive but the puck "ended up between my legs."

"I think it hit someone or something on the way in."

Guidolin felt that a second-period fight between Philadelphia defenceman Ed Van Impe and Cashman was good for the Bruins because defenceman Jim Watson of the Flyers drew a game misconduct for being the third man into the altercation.

The loss of Watson left the Flyers with four defencemen, Joe Watson, Van Impe, Andre Dupont and Tom Bladon for the remainder of the game.

Shero was asked what he could have done if he had lost another defenceman for any length of time.

"I was thinking of pairing Rosa Lonaberry back there and perhaps alternating three at 30-second intervals, especially if we were playing shorthanded," he said.

Shero said centre Bill Clement, sidelined with a knee injury during a Flyers' practice a week ago, might be ready to play in Thursday's second game.

Royals Erupt in 3rd To Whip Barrie Flyers

CRANBROOK, B.C. (CP) — Cranbrook Royals rebounded with a vengeance in the third period Tuesday night, scoring seven unanswered third period goals for a 9-5 win over Barrie Flyers in their best-of-seven Canadian senior hockey final.

The Flyers will take to the ice here tonight, behind in the series, and still wondering what happened to them in the third game Tuesday.

The teams battled to a 1-1 tie in the first period before Barrie surged to a 5-2 lead in the second, only to be bombarded with the seven goal Cranbrook outburst in the third period.

Fewer penalties were called in the third game, with Barrie drawing 10 of 16 minors, two of them to goalie Ernie Miller. The opening game featured 31 penalties, including eight majors and five misconducts for fighting. In the second game, there were 19 penalties.

Cranbrook laid down a 57-shot barrage on Miller Tuesday, taking 19 shots in each period. Barrie replied with 32 shots on Wayne Doll and Leo Karchie.

Doug Acomb opened the scoring for Barrie at 3:07 of the first period while Cranbrook was a man short. Then, when Barrie was playing with five men, Jim Miller evened the score at 10:12.

Playing-coach Eric Sutcliffe began the Cranbrook assault in the third period, scoring at 6:12.

Wayne Gibbs and Bob Mayer quickly added singles—Mayer scoring the tying goal and his first of three at 8:39.

John Price scored the winning goal at 10:36.

Marv Ferg added one goal, then Mayer scored two more, the first into an empty net when Barrie pulled their goalie with less than a minute to play and down 7-5. Then Miller returned and Mayer got his third for the night.

Pitchers Can't Find Bases

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Tom Griffin and Fred Norman were brilliant while pitching to the plate Tuesday night, but their throwing to other bases left something to be desired.

Griffin hurled a one-hitter while Stargell's second-inning single—but his Houston Astro team-mates made up for his throwing error by rallying to edge Pittsburgh Pirates 2-1 in a National League baseball game.

Norman wasn't so lucky, although he allowed only six hits and struck out 13, most by a Cincinnati pitcher in six years. His wild pickoff throw set up the game's only run in the ninth inning and St. Louis Cardinals nipped the Reds 1-0.

Elsewhere, San Francisco Giants swept a set from New York Mets 4-3 and 3-0, San Diego Padres beat Philadelphia Phillies 5-3 in 13 innings and Chicago Cubs shaded Atlanta Braves 2-2. Los Angeles at Montreal was rained out.

Pittsburgh took a 1-0 lead over Griffin in the fifth inning without a hit when third baseman Doug Rader committed two errors and Griffin made a wild throw attempting to pick Richie Zisk off second base, allowing the run to score.

The Astros tied it in the sixth on Bob Watson's single, a wild pitch, a grounder and Rader's single. They won it in the eighth on a single by Watson and a triple by ex-Pirate Milt May.

"I threw a lot of fast balls, but I didn't have my real good fast ball," said Griffin, who walked one and struck out seven in hurling the second one-hitter of his career. "But I had excellent control and I could put it where I wanted."

MILT MAY

The Cardinals beat Norman when Reggie Smith opened the ninth with a single, took second on the left-hander's wild pickoff throw, went to third on an infield out and scored on Joe Torre's sacrifice fly.

"It's ridiculous," said Norman. "I can throw home and not to first base. I was so conscious of stepping correctly and not balking that I didn't concentrate on the batter. Losing a game like that is like losing 10-0 to me."

Lynn McGlothen limited the Reds to four hits and three walks.

Gary Matthews of the Giants slammed a three-run homer off Tom Seaver in the eighth inning of the opener and broke up a pitching duel in the nightcap with a run-scoring double in the ninth. Steve Ontiveros also homered in the opener for the Giants while team-mate Bobby Bonds doubled home the other two runs in the nightcap.

Jim Barr, making his first start of the season, limited the Mets to seven hits in the second game before giving way to Randy Moffitt with one out in the ninth.

Matthews' homer was the ninth off Seaver this season.

Dave Winfield and Fred Kendall hit consecutive home runs in the 13th inning off rookie Dave Wallace, pacing the Padres to their 11th win in the last 14 games. Derrel Thomas hit a two-run homer for the Padres in the second inning.

Vic Harris had two hits and scored twice to pace Chicago. Steve Stone, making his second start, posted his first victory in a Cubs' uniform with ninth-inning relief from Horacio Pina and Jim Kremmel.

TOM GRIFFIN

Wilbur Becomes Film Critic

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Tuesday's episode of the Wilbur Wood Show was a mixture of drama and suspense with a surprise happy ending. It won't challenge many programs for top ratings, but Wood doesn't seem to mind.

A videotape machine Chicago White Sox purchased before spring training this season has helped Wood come back from a weak start. By reviewing tapes of his performances as a critic would a weekly show, Wood conquered a flaw in his style and beat Detroit Tigers 1-0 in 11 innings Tuesday night.

In other American League baseball Minnesota Twins blanked Milwaukee Brewers 3-0; New York Yankees trimmed Texas Rangers 4-3 in 12 innings; Cleveland Indians beat California Angels 5-3; and Baltimore Orioles bombed Oakland Athletics 9-3.

The happy ending to Wood's show was provided by catcher Ed Herrmann, whose 11th-inning home run gave Chicago the win.

Wood, a left-handed knuckleballer, noticed his stride was too long while looking at previous outings, and credits the electronic aid with a solution to the problem.

"Without it, I couldn't have accomplished the correction this quickly," Wood said after his two-hit, 10-strikeout victory.

"Somebody can tell you these things, but when you see them yourself, you learn quicker."

He allowed a fourth-inning single to Mickey Stanley and a 10th-inning single to Willie Horton.

He overshadowed a fine performance by Detroit's Jon LeGrow, who allowed four hits.

Joe Decker of Minnesota survived cold weather, rain and eight Milwaukee hits to shut out the Brewers behind Tony Oliva's first home run of the season.

Harmon Killebrew accounted for the other runs by doubling home Larry Hisle in the third inning and singling in the fifth for the second of his three hits.

New York's Elliot Maddox hit a 12th-inning double that drove in Thurman Munson with the run that defeated Texas.

Dave Nelson's error on Munson's ground ball set up the hit by Maddix. Nelson's two-run single in the ninth inning had tied the score.

John Lowenstein singled home the tie-breaking run in the ninth inning, and another run scored on a wild throw on the same play, carrying Cleveland past California.

With Oscar Gamble on second and Frank Duffy on first, Lowenstein singled off second baseman Denny Doyle's leg. Gamble scored when the ball trickled into short centre field and Duffy came home when Dave Chalk retrieved the ball and threw it into the California dugout.

Paul Blair collected four hits and Enos Cabell three of the 21 Baltimore amassed in handing Oakland Rs third consecutive loss.

Boog Grimsley held the Athletics to seven hits—one of them Dave Duncan's first home run of the season—in picking up his fourth victory.

Celtics Take 3-2 Lead

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Boston Celtics, sparked by 28 points each by Dave Cowens and John Havlicek, were down Milwaukee with ceaseless pressure Tuesday to win 96-87 and gain a 3-2 lead in the National Basketball Association championship playoffs.

The Celtics broke the game open by outscoring the Bucks 22-5 during a third-quarter surge, and can clinch the best-of-seven series by winning in Boston Friday.

Cowens, who scored 17 points in the second half, teamed with the 34-year-old Havlicek and Jo Jo White, who fired in 18 points, to offset a series-high 37 points by the Bucks' Kareem Abdul-Jabbar.

Ahead 67-66 early in the third quarter after a close first half, the Celtics launched their decisive surge with a pair of long shots by Havlicek, who connected on 10 of his first 17 shots.

Interrupted only by an Oscar Robertson free throw, the Celtics fired in six more points to open a 19-point lead.

Cornell Warner hit a driving layup for Milwaukee, but Havlicek scored on a goal-tending call and added two free throws as the Celtics stormed to their best lead of the night, 89-51, with 3:29 left in the quarter.

Abdul-Jabbar scored two hook shots, and Robertson hit twice from the top of the key as Milwaukee scored the quarter's final 10 points to close to within eight points.

However, White put in a pair of 20-foot shots early in the fourth, swinging the momentum back to Boston.

But Havlicek and Cowens each scored from long range, and reserve Paul Silas contributed a steal and a basket to put the Celtics safely ahead 94-71 with 5:58 to go.

Firsov Won't Join Habs

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League announced Tuesday they have been advised by the Soviet Ice Hockey Federation that forward Anatoly Firsov will not be permitted to attend the Canadiens training camp this fall.

The Canadiens invited Firsov, a top star in the Soviet Union for several years, to their camp a couple of months ago.

An official of the Soviet federation told the Canadiens Firsov had retired as an active player and now was coaching one of its teams.

ON LONG CONTRACT

DENVER (AP) — Haven Moses, Denver Broncos' leading receiver last season, signed a multi-year contract with the National Football League team Tuesday. Terms of the contract were not made public. Moses last year caught 38 passes for 515 yards and eight touchdowns.

53 WINDFALL

DALLAS (AP) — John Newcombe, favorite for the $50,000 first prize in the World Championship Tennis final, was literally mowed under with greenbacks Tuesday. As the high-point scorer in the WCT's three world tours, the Australian received $25,000 in $1 bills from a sponsoring slacks manufacturer.

RANGERS BUY SIMS

ARLINGTON, Tex. (AP) — Texas Rangers purchased catcher Duke Sims from the New York Yankees Tuesday night for an undisclosed amount of cash. Sims had been dropped from the Yankees' 25-man roster on the weekend. To make room for him, the Rangers optioned rookie infielder Mike Cubbage to Spokane of the Pacific Coast League.

TAKES THREE-POINT LEAD

Billie Jean — All Concentration

Playing - coach a Leader

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Playing-coach Billie Jean King has Philadelphia Freedoms off to an impressive start in World Team Tennis.

The Freedoms made it two in a row over Pittsburgh Triangles, winning 30-25 Tuesday night with Billie Jean beating Evonne Goolagong 6-2, 6-4 before 8,106 fans in Pittsburgh.

In other action, Toronto Royals beat Cleveland Nets 32-21; Hawaii Leis downed New York Sets 29-25; Houston Eagles topped Minnesota Buckskins 30-28; and Chicago Aces defeated Denver Racquets 33-32.

Tom Okker, playing-coach of the Royals, won 6-4 and 6-2 over Cliff Richey before 4,458 fans in Toronto.

Rosa Case beat playing-coach Manuel Santana 6-4, then topped Charlie Owens 6-3 to pace Hawaii before 4,999 fans in Uniondale, N.Y.

The Riders withstood a second-half mixed doubles surge to defeat the Buckskins. Minnesota's mixed doubles team of Owen Davidson and Mona Schallau moved the Buckskins to within 27-26 after Houston held a 25-22 advantage going into the final event.

10 Tiger-Cat Players Take Case to Court

HAMILTON (CP) — A group of 10 Hamilton Tiger-Cat football players have decided to take their salary dispute with the Canadian Football League team to court.

The players feel they should be compensated for extra games they will be required to play this season. They said they were not aware the Eastern Conference schedule had been increased to 16 games from 14 when they signed their last contracts.

We feel the validity of the contracts has been questioned," Henry Katz, their lawyer said. "The club is adamant the contracts have not been frustrated, so we're going to let a judge decide."

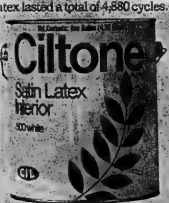
Years of washing and scrubbing.

Without washing itself away along with next year's smears, stains and fingerprints.

So when an independent laboratory was testing our Color Your World interior latex paints against some of the greatest (and most expensive) latex paints in Canada, we asked them to perform a special test.

Our paint had already passed the Government Specifications Board test — 500 cycles in the washability machine without wearing away. So had CIL's top-of-the-line latex.



So we told the labs, "Leave the paint samples in the machine and go on scrubbing them until they start to wear through!"

What happened?

After 2,669 cycles in the machine, the CIL latex was finished.

Worn through.

$9.35-$13.00

Now that's pretty amazing performance.

But the most amazing thing about Color Your World is that you can buy a gallon of interior latex at your nearest Color Your World home decorating supermarket for $7.69 Any day of the year.

And CIL's regular price ranges from just under $10 up to $13 a gallon.

Is Color Your World the greatest paint in Canada at any price? It depends on how you read all the test results, taken together.

Always

Is it the best paint buy in Canada?

We think so.

Regina's Laird Earns Praise

CALGARY (CP) — Scouts from virtually every hockey club in North America gathered Tuesday for the annual Memorial Cup luncheon and most of them talked about unsung Rob Laird of Regina Pats. Instead of higher-priced, better-known junior prospects.

Laird, who set a team penalty record with Regina Pats of the Western Canada Hockey League this season, did enough Monday night in a 4-0 victory over St. Catharines Black Hawks to make many observers overlook his lack of stature.

A 165-pounder who stands five-nine, Laird got a goal, earned an assist and won two fights against a Black Hawk player at least 15 pounds heavier—all in less than 24 minutes.

He was banished with a game misconduct at 3:44 of a brawl-studded second period for refusing to enter the penalty box after hi second fracas, with St. Catharines defenceman Larry Fink.

As all three clubs in the 1974 Canadian junior hockey playoffs rested in preparation for a game tonight between Regina and Quebec Remparts, many of the Pats were still angry over the tactics of St. Catharines coach Paul Emms in the Regina victory Monday night.

Seldom-used defenceman Don Labreche, a six-goal man during the regular Ontario Hockey Association junior season, attacked Regina's top-gun Dennis Sobchuk after a face-off early in the second period.

"I don't mind that," said Sobchuk. "If they're looking out for me, they're not looking at the puck."

Sobchuk, Clark Gillies and Greg Joly are Regina's top players—if you disregard the scrappy Laird who graduates this season because his birthday is two days before the eligibility deadline. Gillies and Sobchuk each spent much of the first two periods fighting or defending themselves.

Quebec needs a victory tonight to create the possibility of a playoff Friday. If the Pats win, as expected, Regina will meet St. Catharines Sunday in the decisive game.

ESCAPE CRASH

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Rookie drivers Lee Brayton and Tom Bigelow, duelling at a speed near 180 miles an hour, were involved in a fiery crash at Indianapolis Motor Speedway Tuesday. Both escaped injury. They entered the first turn at high speed with Bigelow, driving a Vollstead-Offenhauser, slightly ahead. Bigelow's car began to swerve and Brayton, driving an Eagle-Offy, rammed it broadside, with both cars spinning into the outside wall.

John Bradshaw says:

"You'll be amazed at the difference when you feed your plants with CIL Flower & Vegetable Food.

"I've used it for years and I'm completely satisfied with it. My vegetables are bigger, juicier, tastier; my flowers bloom more profusely."

Turner Budget Doubles Taxes on Oil Industry

OTTAWA (CP) — Budget proposals by Finance Minister John Turner would more than double the federal tax take on the booming profits of the oil and gas industry, finance department officials estimated Tuesday.

They said the rate of federal tax would increase to 15 per cent from five per cent, but the provincial tax share also would increase—to 43 per cent from 40 per cent.

Both the federal and provincial tax share also would increase for the mining industry, meaning that in each case less profit would be left in producers hands. In both cases the higher profits are in part caused by sharply higher international prices.

For the mining industry, the federal tax share would be 16 per cent, up from 11½ per cent, and the provincial portion 27 per cent instead of 25 per cent.

That would leave the oil and gas industry with 44 per cent of production profits instead of the current, 53 per cent, and the mining industry with 43 per cent rather than 51.5 per cent.

Mr. Turner said in his Tuesday night budget speech that proposed changes in taxes on these profits would increase federal revenue from the oil and gas industry by $410 million and from the mining industry by $60 million during the next fiscal year. Together, they account for more than half the expected additional income of $790 million predicted for all his corporate tax changes.

Some corporate sectors, such as manufacturing and processing and small businesses, were exempted from his net of tax increases. That means the resource industries would pay for a major share of the total increase in revenue.

The projected budgetary increase in government take from the corporate sector is 40 per cent comparing the 1974 budget and the estimate for 1973-74.

By comparison, the projected increase in total government spending is about 13 per cent, excluding the flow-through effect of a planned export levy on crude oil and support payments to bring higher priced offshore crude oil down to the Canadian price level.

Mr. Turner justified the heavier taxes on these industries as coming from those enjoying rapidly rising profits.

Canada's six major oil companies last year reported profits up 44 per cent over the previous year. The four that have reported first-quarter 1974 results are up more than 83 per cent.

Oil company spokesmen, on the other hand, say they need these higher profits to help pay the massive costs of new exploration.

Prepare for Showdown

Royal Assent Given 6 Bills

OTTAWA (CP) — Royal assent was given to six bills in the Senate Tuesday, the eve of what might be the last day of the 29th Parliament.

The assent came as the Commons prepared for a crucial vote today on a New Democratic Party non-confidence motion that might topple the minority Liberal government.

High on the list was a bill enabling the federal government to help cities move railway facilities from their cores.

Chief Justice Dora Laskin also signed into law a bill creating five new national parks, a bill raising the amount farmers, fishermen and small businessmen may borrow under federal guaranteed loan programs, plus one amending the Export and Import Permits Act to restrict exports of natural resource products.

Bills changing the names of two Ontario federal ridings also were approved.

The riding of Huron, held by Conservative Robert McKinley, will be called Huron-Middlesex. The name of Middlesex riding held by Conservative Bill Frank, is changed to Middlesex-London.

With passage of the railway lines bill, cities such as Vancouver, Edmonton, Winnipeg and Sudbury, Ont., are expected to go ahead with relocation plans.

For the first time, the Canadian transport commission will have authority to expropriate land to facilitate moving rail yards and lines from core areas.

Amendments to the farm improvement loans, fisheries improvement loans and small businesses loans act will raise the maximum loan available to $50,000 from $25,000.

The amendments to the Export and Import Permits Act authorize the cabinet to restrict exports when domestically produced raw materials can be processed at home. It also allows restrictions on non-agricultural, raw or semi-finished materials during times of surplus and depressed prices.

'Fuddle-cuddle Ends' Is Comment by Dief

OTTAWA (CP) — Former prime minister John Diefenbaker was asked Tuesday how the atmosphere in the Commons compares with the atmosphere just before the 1963 general election in which his government fell.

"It doesn't appeal to my olfactory organ at all," Mr. Diefenbaker said.

He did not think much of the chances of the NDP and the Liberals co-operating to keep Parliament alive. There is a chance the government might be defeated today over its budget.

That was a reference to Prime Minister Trudeau's famous "fuddle-duddle" crack several years ago.

Calling for order, the Speaker said:

"If we have to go, let us go in peace."

IN MEMORIAM

RAYELL — In loving memory of my dear husband (Jim) Ferrell who passed away May 5, 1964.
Sweet memories linger as one so dear, I treasure still with a love sincere. In my heart he is living yet, I loved him too dearly to forget.
—always remembered by his wife Lillian.

REVELL — In loving memory of my dear husband, Harold Revell, who passed away 7 years ago today.
God loaned him much — it so him. Never again will memory fade. Loving thoughts shall ever wander, To the one we loved so dear.
Sadly missed by his daughter Vera and son-in-law Wes.

RAYELL — In loving memory of my dear husband, Harold Revell, who passed away May 5, 1969.
Dear God I think of you each day, You brought us all up the right way. Not wealth nor fame did you crave, But honesty, kindness and love to leave.
Sadly missed,
Dad so much a special word, because it stands for you.
—always remembered, daughter Gladys.

REED — In loving memory of a dear father Joseph Reed who passed away two years ago on May 5, 1974.
In our hearts your memory lingers, always tender fond and dear, There's not a day we don't remember, Not a day we don't shed a tear.
—sadly missed by mother Mary, son-in-law Glenn and grandchildren Laurie and Jimmy.

Sea Cadet Band Debut Pleasing

By EUGENE LANG

The arthritic-producing angularity of the BCI auditorium seats can't spoil the solid comfort of your favorite television watching chair, and as a corollary no local musical event can compete with the opening game of the NHL playoffs, nevertheless those who were in attendance at said auditorium last evening were well rewarded in what they witnessed as the Royal Canadian Sea Cadet Corps Quinte Band presented its first full-length concert.

This band of approximately 25 youthful players ranging from grades VII to XIII gave a fine performance of many selections that encompassed marches, classical suites, blues, rock, TV theme and novelty numbers. Lads manager Dale Jones has been their Director for the past two years and under his guidance they have made great progress, when we realize that some have only been in the band for less than a year. some of these still being in public school. Their ages although they enjoyed every minute of their evening's presentation to families and friends, were made up in the greater part of the sparse audience, their compensation being the solid rounds of applause that followed each offering.

Of the 17 selections rendered, our space limitations dictate that we mention those of outstanding merit. All of the marches came through with rousing appeal even though at times melody lines of the woodwinds were overpowered by ponderous brass (e.g. The Maple city). The flutes and clarinets did have a chance to show their mettle in the Dragoon and Jet Planes which they accomplished admirably. Trumpets triumphed in the Trafalgar Lassers and the RAF March Past was handled by Marilynn Jackson. One of the finest creations was the Selection of Jesus Christ Superstar in which all choirs of the band performed excellently. The part around the Clock was a disappointment as it degenerated into more noise than music and Sherwood Lawyers more bearing brash from the brass. Amparito Roca proved a pleasant if not inspiring rhythmic gait.

Over-all, intonation was remarkably good for so fledgling a group, but phrase ends were noticeably dropped or cut short when they should have been extended. Over-all a very good showing which hopefully and one that should now make the Annual List in local musical circles. Second Flutelist Jeremy Tyrell was the musical commentator with humorous homilies adding immeasurably to the evening's enjoyment with unostentatious ad libbing throughout the musical brew. Congratulations to all on a very fine showing in their first full length concert. We look forward to this from now on.

Understudy Gets Her Big Break

CHARLOTTETOWN, P.E.I. — It's the oldest show business cliche in the book the one about the chorus dancer who takes over the lead when the star becomes ill — but it's happening at the Charlottetown Festival.

Amanda Hancox, 19, of Charlottetown will open the Festival's 1974 season in the central role of Belinda when the musical adaptation of JOHNNY BELINDA plays at the Confederation Centre May 27th to June 8th, because Diane Nyland will be unable to play the role.

Miss Nyland called Festival officials from her Toronto hospital room to tell them that complications have developed after the birth of her son, and that her doctor has forbidden her to perform for several months.

Miss Nyland, married to radio announcer Frank Proctor, gave birth to a son ten days ago, her second child. She was scheduled to begin rehearsals in Charlottetown for the O'Keefe opening of the show in which she starred several years ago when the Charlottetown Festival first produced the musical version of the Elmer Harris stage hit.

Miss Hancox, a dancer with the Festival and with FEUX FOLLETS for the past ten years, had been signed as understudy in the role. The pretty blonde teenager had learned the deaf-mute sign language on her own to be prepared for any eventuality.

In the musical version, an old form of the sign language is an important element of the story of the deaf-mute girl who gives birth to an illegitimate son.

"When we first decided to revive BELINDA we had Amanda in mind if Diane were not available," said Mr. Lund. "Amanda has excellent dance technique and a very good stage presence. I know she'll be a wonderful Belinda, and I know the Company will work extra hard to support her and help her do the best possible job.

"It's always exciting when we can develop a performer from the Festival Company so they are ready when a situation like this develops."

CTV News Award Winner

OTTAWA (CP) — CTV Television Network Ltd. has been awarded the Roland Michener Award for outstanding contributions to journalism in 1974, the Federation of Press Clubs of Canada announced Tuesday.

The judges awarded the prize to CTV for its work on invasion of privacy through electronic techniques and Parliament's attempts to legislate on the practice.

The award was established four years ago by Mr. Michener, then governor-general of Canada, and is administered by the federation which links press clubs across the country.

The judges said that CTV investigated beneath the surface of facts being reported at the time. The work on invasion of privacy was "an outstanding example of in-depth reporting."

The network was criticized because it made its point by "bugging" the New Democratic Party caucus. Party caucus meetings are held secretly.

NDP Leader David Lewis said the bugging was reprehensible but he supported the network's objectives.

The award will be presented at a ceremony in Ottawa May 15.

The judges were Fraser MacDougall, executive secretary of the Ontario Press Council, Yves Jasmin, a Montreal public relations consultant, Sam Ross, a retired broadcaster and journalist from Victoria, and Bill Ross, public relations director at the University of Ottawa.

Protest

NEW YORK (Reuter) — About 25 persons protesting against British policies in Northern Ireland demonstrated outside the Metropolitan Opera House here Tuesday night as Princess Margaret and her husband, Lord Snowdon, arrived to attend the American premiere of the British Royal Ballet's Manon.

ABC Head Wants Change in Ratings

NEW YORK (AP) — The head of ABC-TV says the way children's weekend morning TV shows now rate should be replaced with an industry-wide system to measure not only audience size and makeup but also the effect of such programs and their commercials on young viewers.

James E. Duffy made the proposal in an interview. He took a much stronger stand than in a recent speech in which he urged the industry only to 'take a long, hard look at the possibility of eliminating children's audience ratings on the weekend, on a national basis."

He was asked in the interview if he personally would like to see that type of rating abolished.

"Sure," he replied. 'But' this is such a competitive business and the stakes are so high that one network can't do it alone."

The ratings employ two basic methods, said a spokesman for the A.C. Nielsen ratings service. One is a device attached to TV sets in 1,200 homes. It records the channel to which the set is tuned.

The other method is a diary, kept by 2,400 households. The residents, for a fee, note in them who watched what and when. One-third of these diaries are collected weekly for evaluation.

Despite advances in the quality of children's programming, Duffy said, this ratings system is not enough. What was needed was a "broader-based study, a much larger sample that would not only indicate popularity, but also would give (viewer) attitudes toward program and commercial content."

He said the samplings should be in depth, made every four months to allow for a more thorough audience assessment, and include 'psychographics," or the kind of reactions programs and commercials cause viewers.

Duffy said there should be a test study of the proposal, possibly lasting two years and financed either by the three networks and independent stations or by the National Association of Broadcasters, which has 331 television stations as members.

He said he has not proposed it yet to officials at CBS, NBC or the NAB because he is waiting to see what kind of action the other two networks will take.

"And if there isn't some in a short period of time, then I'm going to my management to see what kind of action we can do with it from there."

CBS was non-committal when asked if it supported Duffy's proposal. It said it still was studying the matter.

An NBC spokesman took an equally non-committal approach.

"Our policy is to do each program as well as we can."

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Thursday, May 9

Aries (March 21-April 19) A decision you'll make today will not rest easy with you. Down-deep you'll feel you should have given the matter more thought.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) Action you will take on behalf of someone else is commendable, although at the time it looked like the right thing, will later have repercussions.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) Be sure all luncheon dates are shared equally in partnership arrangements, or else most of the liabilities will fall on you.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) You'll be looking for pats on the back for something you'll be doing for another. They won't be coming, much to your chagrin.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) Today you'll have to be careful that you don't inadvertently offend a sensitive friend through some thoughtless action.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Make it a point if at all possible to repair indebtedness that obligates you to a pal. She'll be brilliant if you don't.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your ability to act on your own will be somewhat restricted today. It looks like one you'll be counting on will drag his feet.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Provided you don't spend in advance of income or earnings, your financial outlook appears to have adequate mileage to meet your needs.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) In your dealings with others you're likely to jump into things a bit too hastily. Could be an expensive leap.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Something you want to achieve is apt to slip through your fingers today. You'll not be as persistent as you should in pursuing it.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Today will not be as productive as it could be. You'll emphasize your least-important interests rather than urgent ones.

Pieces (Feb. 20-March 20) Be sure all business are shared equally in partnership arrangements, or else most of the liabilities will fall on you.

Lice Epidemics Growing Common

By G. C. THOMESSEN, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thomessen: Recently there was news in our local paper about an almost epidemic of head lice in the schools. Could you take in part to the long-hair trend.

Would you publish an article on medications and treatment of this problem? As many families may not be able to afford to consult a regular doctor, there is urgent need for non-prescription medication and treatment.V.F.

Maybe it would be better if more local papers printed news about lice. Another head, crab or body varieties, because epidemics are breaking out in many communities. Dermatological statistics indicate that one louse problem has increased 800 per cent in the last 10 years. And that's a lot of itching.

I wouldn't doubt that the long-hair fashion has played some part in it, but it's my experience that girls and women usually take pretty good care of their hair. The boys sometimes have to be reminded now and then.

As to non-prescription treatment, I'll suggest two or three. Because the non-prescription treatments have come along so that they are more powerful (hence require prescriptions) and more effective. Generally speaking, the treatments with the new medications do a pretty good job of getting rid of both the lice and the eggs, and the home remedies aren't as certain to get rid of the eggs. If you have some eggs adhering to hairs, brush them and you'll have a new crop starting.

One home remedy was equal parts of kerosene and vinegar applied to the hair for several hours. It makes an irritating mixture, to say nothing of being inflammable and messy to use.

Ointments containing copper or mercury also were used. Also messy. Tincture of larkspur had its day, and I gather is still being used. How much, I don't know.

Likewise there are non-prescription preparations in the drug stores but I am not familiar with the ingredients.

Remember, lice can be lurk in seams of bedding and clothes, but can be routed by laundering in hot water and ironing. The ironing is a necessary part of it if you want to be sure.

Dear Dr. Thomessen: At my yearly checkup my doctor took a Pap smear and said I have polyp. He didn't say any more about it and just continued with the Pap test. He told me I was healthy and should come back in a year for my Pap. Just what is a polyp and what causes them? Should I go to another doctor for another exam? I have the worst fear of cancer.—Mrs. H.N.S.

A polyp is an overgrowth of a mucous membrane—a protrusion resembling a small grape on a stem. Polyps are common in the cervical canal and are malignant. Sometimes they can cause bleeding.

Removal is a simple office procedure. I doubt that you need to see another doctor. You might ask your present doctor, when you see him next year, whether there is any point in removing the polyp.

Exact cause of polyps is not known.

Dear Dr. Thomessen: Is it true that, if one eats a small piece of dried beef times a day, it's good for people with heart trouble?W.J.M.

Dear Dr. Thomessen: Can lifting heavy objects or working hard affect the prostate?D.G.

No.

By Oswald and James Jacoby

Thus, when dummy hit the table in an important 1960s match in the mid-'70s, Charley looked it over for a moment and then spread his hand with the remark, "I am going to win this trick and play dummy's ace at trumps. If the king does not drop I will make the hand on a squeeze."

East studied for about five minutes and offered to bet that Charley could not make 12 tricks.

Charley said, "I won't take your money."

He threw East in with the king of trumps. East could do no better than lead a second spade. Charley ruffed; cashed three trumps while discarding three clubs from dummy. Then he played king, queen and ace of diamonds.

Charley was left with jack-10 of clubs and a trump; dummy with two spades and the ace of clubs and East with a mild case of apoplexy.

If he chucked a spade Charley would ruff a spade and get back to dummy with the ace of clubs; if East chucked a club, Charley would cash the ace of clubs; come to his hand with the last trump and make the contract with his club jack.

Editorial Cartoons Feasible for Television

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Most persons are used to seeing editorial cartoons only in newspapers, but this form of journalism also is feasible for local TV news shows, says an artist who has tried it.

All you need are a good cartoonist and strong backing from the station, said William Saboe, whose Acid Test cartoon appeared on KGW-TV here for more than three years before it was cancelled.

"Find the best cartoonist available . . . give him freerein and suffer the consequences," he said. "Sooner or later, if he's good, he's going to nail somebody to the wall. . . . It was not that which caused his cartoon's demise on TV. The station, pinched by economic considerations, said the public was not reacting to the feature as it once did.

Forest Amsden, general manager of KGW and a Sanderson fan, said he was surprised by the lack of positive or negative reaction to the Acid Test feature the last year it was on the air.

Sanderson's theory is that public reaction to his artwork-with-a-message fell off as irate critics vealued their complaints were to no avail and the cartoon had become an established fixture.

Amsden, a former newspaper editor, observed that an editorial cartoon on TV has a big drawback its newspaper. versions do not have: "A (newspaper) cartoon is something you sit and look at, think about, turn back and look at again later.

"On televisign, it was there and 18 seconds later it was gone."

Sanderson agreed, but said brevity is one of those things that viewers and TV cartoonists alike have to live with.

Sanderson, whose feature appeared weekly in the Portland Oregonian before KGW bought the idea, said there is no way to print or TV to avoid the problem of cartoon ideas that flop, particularly if one artist does the cartoon five days a week.

But it may be more of a headache for TV, he conceded.

"Because it is on television, people expect it to be super every day," he said. "Mediocre newspaper cartoons are expected."

Questions and Answers On Highway Travel

Ontario Motor League
Eastern Ontario Club

QUESTION: What is the latest situation regarding gasoline availability in the U.S.? — ANSWER: The odd-even plan, based on the car's licence plate number, is now mandatory in only five States — Delaware, Hawaii, Maryland, New York and Virginia. The plan began effect on a voluntary basis in some areas in Massachusetts, Rhode Island, North and South Carolina, Louisiana, Oregon and Washington State.

In New York State, however, drivers on the New York Thruway, who can prove by their toll tickets that they have driven 177 miles or more are exempt. The J. F. K. Memorial Highway, Delaware and Massachusetts Turnpikes" policies are mandatory for local traffic, but out-of-state motorists can purchase gas on any day. The Delaware and Massachusetts policies are not in effect on the weekends.

Dealers along most major turnpikes are still limiting purchases to customers from a low of $2 to a high of 19 gallons. However, stations along the Illinois Tollway, J. F. K. Memorial Highway and New York State Thruway no longer limit the amount of fuel a customer may purchase in a single stop at the pump. Dealers along the Florida, Ohio and Pennsylvania Turnpikes, as well as the Kentucky Parkway, report only a few stations limiting purchases.

Motorists travelling the Florida and New Jersey Turnpikes and the Garden State Parkway must have less than half a tank of gasoline before purchasing additional fuel. Pennsylvania Turnpike has discontinued its half-tank requirement.

The New Jersey, Delaware, Florida, Kansas, Pennsylvania, Connecticut and Ohio Turnpikes, the Garden State and Kentucky Parkways, the Indiana and Maine Toll Roads, the J. F. K. Memorial Highway and New York State Thruway report stations operating 24 hours per day, seven days a week. One station in each direction on the Oklahoma Turnpike is open 24 hours per day, seven days a week. All other stations are open from 7 a.m. to 11 p.m., seven days a week.

California, Hawaii, Illinois, Mississippi and New York share the highest average price for regular fuel — 56 cents per gallon, while three states — New York, Illinois and Hawaii — report the highest average price per gallon for premium at 60 cents. Texas holds the lowest average price for regular gasoline — 49 cents — and for premium at 53 cents.

Tax Credit For Papers Hard to Get

OTTAWA (CP) — Whatever President Nixon does under United States law, don't expect to get an income-tax credit by donating your papers to a Canadian institution, no matter how big a name you are.

"This is a very tricky business," said Dominion Archivist Wilfred Smith, "especially in two classes—literary and public service."

"A manuscript is of value, certainly, but also it's part of that man's job, like the furniture a cabinet-maker leaves. The papers a public servant accumulates in the course of his job are, in effect, public records. We have referred the matter to the department of national revenue and are awaiting a decision.

"So far we have been very cautious and have given no tax credits."

The hottest research subject these days is the status of women and Dr. Smith said the national archives are ahead of the general onslaught in search of past records.

They have the papers of broadcaster Kate Aitken, politician Agnes Macphail and of author Catherine Parr Traill, discovered in an attic last year. They are looking forward to getting the papers of Anne Francis, status-of-women commission chairman; former Speaker Muriel Ferguson, MP Grace MacInnis and former Ottawa mayor Charlotte Whitton.

Recently the Canadian Federation of University Women joined the many Canadian associations that have donated their records to the archives.

The National Council of Women was the first. Others are the King George and Queen Mary Maple Leaf Club, the Canadian Women's Golf Club Association, the YWCA and the Montreal Society for the Protection of Women and Children.

One of the major problems facing the national archives is that people are not saving things the way they once did.

"When people move every two or three years, they just don't accumulate," said Dr. Smith.

Soviet Film a Shock To Audience Ideology

MOSCOW (Reuter) — In a Russian provincial town, a plingling restaurant waiter rounds up an ugly mob of prostitutes and petty crooks to entertain a stranger flashing money and looking for a good time.

A former peasant turned criminal lies prostrate in a green country field sobbing for his wasted life and claws the ground in a symbolic vow to rebuild his existence as a farmer.

These are two key scenes in a new film showing to crowded cinemas across the Soviet Union and starting audiences with a view of Russian life and a philosophy that appear to run counter to official Communist ideology.

The film, The Red Snowball Tree, is the story of the last few weeks in the life of Yegor Prokudin—from his fifth labor camp term to his murder by the chief of a gang to which he once belonged but left to try to go straight.

The film's underlying theme is the depraving effect of urban existence on a man from the country and it suggests that the traditional values of Russian village life provide a source of regeneration for Soviet society.

Cultural sources here say the film's makers were concerned that it would not pass official censorship, especially after a speech by President Nikolai Podgorny calling for more ideology in the cinema.

Although the entire Soviet press has praised the film and Soviet cinema in Moscow alone featured it in its first week of release, there have been signs of disquiet at its message among official critics.

The government newspaper Izvestia noted that director Vasily Shukshin, who also plays the role of Prokudin, had told one film journal that his main concern was "the fate of a man who exchanges the countryside's system of morality, spiritual values and traditions for another environment."

It is "strange logic," the Izvestia critic added, to suggest that in our socialist life there are different systems of morality and spiritual values between the country and the town."

To many Russians and foreigners who have seen The Red Snowball Tree, the amazing aspect of its depiction of Prokudin's unyielding bid to reform himself is that the drive comes mainly from an inner impulse to recover the lost joys of his country youth, to return to his roots.

He is helped on his way by his love of Lyubov, a village woman who resembles the beauties of Russian folk tales and lists paintings.

By contrast, a pretty woman police investigator, herself born in a peasant family, rejects a flower from Prokudin because, the film seems to say, her city education has destroyed her understanding of the people among whom she was raised.

The film makes no suggestion that the Communist party has any role in Prokudin's rehabilitation. In fact, Prokudin turns down a job offered by a collective farm chairman because he objects to efforts to open car doors for officials.

What dominates the film is a mystical spirit and air of Russian religiosity, both pagan and orthodox.

A deserted bell gleaming white church dominates the horizon in many of the country scenes and when he prostrate Prokudin makes his final vow not to return to the soil, the church bonus loom his head.

After his murder, the film ends with his disembodied voice telling the grieving Lyubov: "Don't be sad. There are so many people around you and you have to live for them. If we meet, you'll tell me everything."

There is little doubt that the words suggest the two will meet again in a future life. The amazing idea to be expressed in a Soviet film.

Shukshin, 43, and himself of peasant origin, adapted the screenplay from one of his own stories. He is among a growing group of Soviet writers sometimes described as Slavophiles for their defence of traditional Russian life against new, industrial ways.

On a more prosaic level, The Red Snowball Tree surprises its audience with a picture of criminal and marginally criminal life whose existence is often officially denied here.

Prokudin's former gang and their girls are shown operating apparently successfully in a small provincial town, and have little difficulty in escaping the police in a raid on their hideout.

Survival Story Well Told

Written for CP
By DINA SUDLOW

On Oct. 5, 1972, a chartered airplane carrying 45 persons—members of a Uruguayan amateur rugby team, their supporters and the flight crew—disappeared somewhere in the Andes on a flight to Chile.

Two months later, a Chilean peasant leading cattle in a remote Andean valley was startled by the sudden appearance of two bearded and emaciated figures on the other side of the river. They were Fernando Parrado and Roberto Canessa, two of 16 survivors of the crash.

They had endured 70 days on an Andean mountain slope, existing on their faith, the will to live, and the flesh of their dead companions.

Those 70 days are recounted in a book by Piers Paul Read called Alive, The Story of the Andes Survivors. And the story is almost incredible.

A series of downdrafts had caused the plane to crash into a mountainside, losing its wings and tail section.

Starvation and killing rescue hopes resulted in the decision to eat the bodies of the dead. All the survivors were Roman Catholics and many rebelled at the thought of eating the bodies, which in some instances were those of relatives and close friends. But the will to survive proved stronger than squeamishness and guilt.

"It is meat. That's all it is. The souls are in heaven with God. All that is left here are the carcasses which are no more human than those of the dead flesh of the cattle we kill to survive."

Rather than resorting to sensationalism or dwelling on the physical aspects, Read has chosen a low-key narrative style that compels attention and compassion. He recounts the day-to-day existence matter-of-factly with a touch attention paid to human frailty as to endurance.

Control of Brain Discharges Taught

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Scanning a radar scope hour after hour for occasional blips into whose meaning the human mind reads, is the grueling task of a ship's lookout, gets bored as watch on watch passes by at sea.

Now a psychologist is study- ing a way to keep attention- alert sharp: teach him to control his brain waves.

Researchers have found that when the more alert a person is, the centrating on an object. To fewer theta waves show up on create more theta waves is an a encephalograph linked to one woman, they thought, (EEG), which measures the lazy afternoon. brain's electrical activity. The drowsier he gets, the more jects sat in a dark room watch- ful theta waves appear.

Dr. Jackson Beatty of the University of California at Los Angeles theorized that if you could train a subject to decrease his theta waves, he also would maintain attention longer.

He tested the theory success- fully in an experiment which used biofeedback. The system combining electronics with psychology, has been demonstrated later and later—which aboard a variously to aid people in con- ship might have prevent failing trolling heart rate, blood pres- to notice a dangerous obstacle. sure, brain waves and body ing. Practical applications are a long way off, but Beatty specu- lates the method might help pilots to bring in experienced persons in a number of profes- radar operators and see if sions, such as manufacturing technique helps them.

Holroyd feels he knows John well, but he met him only once.

"I happened to meet him in Chelsea. He was in his mid- six prime, a danger to traffic as he crossed the road. You felt the tremendous power of his personality; partly it was his hypnotic eyes, partly his melodic voice, partly the way he used his hands. He be- lieved in youth, he believed it was the duty of artists to re- main young. When he was un- deniably old, he found age a great humiliation.

"It was really a jigsaw, putting all the background material together. I did about 95 per cent of the research myself, partly, because au- thors aren't rich, but also be- one very big advantage in doing your own research. The outside researcher will note the relevant item in, say, an old newspaper, but the biog- rapher's eyes stray to another page, where there may well be something else which is useful, something which sheds light on the period.

"For the John biography I've interviewed more than 100 people. The sad thing is that while writing the book a number of these people died, including Dorelia, his second wife, one of his most famous models, who helped me a great deal with facts about the second half of his life."

Finding material about Shaw will be difficult for he was probably the most prolific writer of letters and postcards of his or any other age.

"Some of his letters have been published," said Holroyd. "But they are only the tip of the iceberg. I calculate that I will need seven years to complete the biography.

"At first I will concentrate on assembling and reading the books which have been written about him and his works. As soon as I've fin- ished all the work on John, I will be off to spend about a year in the United States," studying Shaw manuscripts and letters—much of the fin- est material is there—then back to England for more re- search."

After years spent on re- search, he finds it is hard to begin the writing.

"A blank white piece of pa- per on a blank white desk is a nightmare, but I do very much enjoy rewriting. I am a great daydreamer while working. My vagueness is a terrible thing. I boil an egg, shave, use the telephone, then I can't find the phone di- rectory. Eventually, after frantic searching, I find it in the fridge."

Bought Books

EDMONTON (CP) — The public library has spent almost $237,000 on 92,925 books bought from Alberta and Canadian dealers. Canadian dealers got $131,000 worth of business, Al- berta dealers $106,000. Records of librarits Brian Dale said the system bought 14,000 books from American dealers for $80,- 000 and 4,068 overseas books for $25,000.

With the fuel crisis, mandatory speed limits were imposed on all roads. But although it still is too soon to gauge the effects of these limits on accident figures, drivers do not seem over-concerned with strict obedience to the new regulations.

What is making a difference, however, is the drop in the number of vehicles on the roads each weekend.

After a winter of totally car-free Sundays the government relaxed the measures to allow cars with even-num- bered registration plates out on one Sunday, those with odd-numbered registrations the next.

Roads are noticeably emp- tier — and cars are noticeably fuller as even-numbered own- ers load up their odd-numbered neighbors and vice- versa.

RIVER TRIPS POPULAR

Speed-loving Italians Hit by Fuel Shortage

First came the oil crisis— and with it a series of draco- nian fuel-saving measures which prevented Italians from taking their traditional Sun- day car-rides into the coun- try.

No sooner was that relaxed than the government in- troduced a new piece of legis- lation which stops the under- 21s and over-65s driving the fastest cars on Italian roads.

Coupled with four gas price- increases in six months, the message seemed clear: The day of the internal com- bustion engine's supremacy in Italy is over.

Its exports have shrunk by 25 per cent and domestic sales are down 40 per cent.

But it is in the luxury mar- ket fed by such household names as Ferrari and Lam- borghini that the effect of the fuel crisis has been catastro- phic. Manufacturers report demand falling to almost zero as stockpiles of gas-hungry luxury sports cars grow alarmingly.

The ban on fast cars for the too-old and the too-young has added to their woes, although it has less to do with the oil shortage than with safety con- siderations.

Cars affected by the new rules include several foreign makes, among them the more powerful models of the popu- lar Ford Capri, the Ford Mus- tang Mach 1, three-litre BMWs, the bigger versions of the Jaguar XJS and XJ12, and even the somewhat stately Rover.

Italy hardly has a road safety record of which it can be proud—more than 12,000 deaths on the road a year and some 250,000 injured.

Biographer's Profession Comparable to Acting

LONDON (CP) — Biogra- pher Michael Holroyd, who will soon embark on the job of writing the official life story of George Bernard Shaw, finds there is much in common between his vocation and that of an actor.

"The biographer leads two lives," the 38-year-old writer said in an interview. "He puts on the clothes of his subject, very much as the actor does. One has a curious feeling that, someone else is taking over."

His reputation rests on his two-volume life of biographer Lytton Strachey, published in 1967-68, and the six years of work he is just ending on the artist Augustus John. The first half of this two-volume study is to be published this year.

"When I was writing about Strachey I found myself suf- fering from the same sort of illnesses he did—it was as if I had caught posthumous in- fection. So I thought my next life should be about someone more robust. But of course I found that John, that vigorous heterosexual (Strachey was homosexual), had his own health problems, including bouts of melancholy."

There is something in common about the three men, although they were utterly different kinds of people. Their lives juxtaposed, for example, the best portrait of Shaw was painted by John.

"I like writing about the fairly recent past, for that past has not yet solidified into history. I like to reassess people who one reason or another have been unfairly neglected. After death the reputation of a man goes through a trough. So if one does write on the man one is seeing with a new eye."

The only way to make such a reassessment, said Holroyd, is to allow enough time.

"You discover the truth for yourself. Having got all the information possible, then the next thing to do is give the account literary shape.

"As I write about people dead not too long ago, there are relatives to meet, so I am absorbed into their world. It provides not only work, but a way of life. I would like one day to edit a book of essays by biographers on how they see their role, how they work, how they are affected by the personalities of those about whom they write."

Budget Defeated 137-123

July 8 Is Chosen As Election Date

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada will go to the polls Monday, July 8, to elect a new federal government.

The date was announced by Prime Minister Trudeau today, almost 17 hours after his minority Liberal government was defeated in the Commons.

Then he went before his cabinet to get agreement on the July 8 date.

Nomination day will be Monday, June 10, for some remote northern constituencies and Monday, June 17, for all other ridings.

As he came out of a 45-minute cabinet meeting, Mr. Trudeau said the cabinet had just signed the order in council proclaiming the July 8 date.

Asked when his election campaign will start he replied: "In five minutes, I'm just going to caucus."

The cabinet session came shortly after Mr. Trudeau met with Gov.-Gen. Jules Leger at Government House for 25 minutes to get dissolution of Parliament.

The government fell Wednesday in a predicted but electric non-confidence vote in which Conservative and New Demo-

Members of both opposition parties flung order papers into the air, when the outcome was announced by House clerk Alistair Fraser.

"Mr. Speaker: yeas, 137; nays 123."

Prime Minister Trudeau, greeted by a crush of reporters as he left the chamber, announced he will ask for an election writ, then hurried upstairs to his Centre Block office.

Minutes later he emerged to make a live nationwide television statement, which blamed the opposition for an unnecessary election but pledged strong and orderly government during the campaign.

defeat was precipitated by an NDP budget sub-amendment which won eager Conservative support. It accused the government of failing to help inflation victims, fixing problems or to bring in tax reforms.

All 106 Conservative members joined with all 31 NDP MPs to defeat the budget. The Liberals, with 108 members present, drew support from the 15-member Social Credit party.

One MP was missing, Keith Hymmen (Conservative). He was at home on doctors' orders to rest.

Brandt and Successor

Brandt Scuffs at Reports He Was Victim of Blackmail

BONN (Reuter) — Former chancellor Willy Brandt said on West German television Wednesday night that reports that he was a victim of blackmail are "grotesque".

Brandt's surprise resignation Monday after the arrest of one of his closest aides, Guenther Guillaume, as an East German spy, prompted newspaper reports that he was the victim of blackmail over details of his private life supplied by Guillaume to his East German employers.

In his first speech to the West German people since his resignation, the 60-year-old former chancellor said it is grotesque to suggest that a West German chancellor could be susceptible blackmail.

"I am not, in any case," he said.

As he spoke, West Germany's ruling parties began formal moves to fill the political void created by his resignation.

The Social Democrat party (SPD) and its minor partner in the coalition under Brandt, the Free Democratic party (FDP), have agreed to continue the alliance and will discuss cabinet shuffles at a joint negotiating commission today.

Helmut Schmidt, the Social Democrat finance minister, is expected to be elected chancellor next Thursday. Political observers here say only several members of the Brandt cabinet can be confident of retaining their posts.

The foreign ministry, at present held by Acting Chancellor Walter Scheel, a Free Democrat, will probably go to Interior Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher. Scheel is expected to be elected president next Wednesday.

The new government's policies are not expected to differ substantially from those followed by Brandt.

Two-price System for Oil Illegal Without Legislation

OTTAWA (CP) — Energy Minister Donald Macdonald rejected Wednesday New Democrat suggestions that a federal two-price oil system can operate legally without immediate legislation.

Replying in the Commons to T. C. Douglas (NDP—Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands), Mr. Macdonald said any motion continuing collection of the federal oil tax after June will have to effect once Parliament is dissolved.

The national oil agreement worked out with the provinces fixes the price of crude produced and used domestically at $8.50 a barrel, about $4 a barrel lower than the going international price.

Mr. Macdonald said Tuesday there would be nothing to prevent individual companies from charging an additional $4 a barrel. That would amount to more than $1 billion a year.

The government has been collecting the export tax since April by ways and means resolutions filed in Parliament.

Tradeau Plucks Daisy

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons opened in a noisy pre-election atmosphere Wednesday as MPs counted off the last hours before the crucial confidence vote on the Liberal government's budget.

New Democratic House Leader Stanley Knowles set the tone when he walked across the floor and attempted to pin a daisy on Prime Minister Trudeau's lapel.

Mr. Trudeau, to applause from Liberal MPs and laughter from Mr. Knowles, plucked a series of petals from the daisy and let them fall to his desk.

Mr. Lewis, in David the Daisy, plucking his petals one at one," Mr. Trudeau said when he spoke in the budget debate.

"Will we have an election or won't we have an election?"

House Committee Commences Studying Impeachment Evidence

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House of Representatives judiciary committee is getting its first look at the celectrated briefcase full of grand jury evidence relating to President Nixon's role in the Watergate cover-up.

The material, forwarded to the committee for its impeachment inquiry by U.S. District Court Judge John Sirica, has been examined by the chairman, top Republic member and chief staff lawyers, but has not been available to committee members until today.

Now, after months of being kept in the dark about it and other evidence gathered by the impeachment staff, the committee will start considering the case for and against the impeachment of Nixon.

The opening of the crucial phase of the inquiry will be marked by a round of speeches in public session, after which the committee will go into executive session to consider evidence bearing on the Watergate break-in and cover-up.

Chairman Peter Rodino (Dem.-N.J.) said Wednesday the closed sessions probably will continue through next week, after which a decision will be made on opening them.

Another decision facing the committee is what to do about Nixon's refusal to give it any more Watergate material. The committee has subpoenaed tapes of 42 presidential conversations dealing with Watergate and has a request pending for 76 more.

At a Democratic caucus Wednesday there was unanimous support for issuing a new subpoena, but divided opinion on when it should be issued and what it should cover.

The most likely course to be followed was suggested by the senior Republican, Representative Edward Hutchinson of Michigan, at a news conference with Rodino.

Hutchinson said that when gaps appear in the presentating of evidence the chief counsel John Doar says they can be filled by material sought from the White House, the committee can decide whether to request it again.

Hutchinson said that rather than issue a subpoena, he would prefer to negotiate the matter with Nixon's lawyer, James St. Clair, who will be in the committee room during the presentation.

But the Democrats and Doar appear to prefer a subpoena. Doar said at the news conference the issuance of a subpoena is the orderly, lawful way to proceed.

27 Bills, on Oil, Pensions, Wheat, Die on Order Paper

OTTAWA (CP) — Twenty-seven government bills will die on the order paper with dissolution of Parliament following Wednesday's non-confidence vote which defeated Prime Minister Trudeau's minority Liberal government.

Among them are such major pieces of proposed legislation as a bill to impose an export tax on crude oil, a bill to establish a national petroleum corporation and a bill to outlaw American professional football in Canada.

Another bill that dies is an anti-profiteering bill that would permit the government to freeze or roll back prices and force companies guilty of profiteering either to refund excess profits or turn them over to the government.

Others include bills to encourage business competition and protect consumers and to establish a federal business development bank with advisory services for small business.

Six bills of particular interest to the West also die:

—A bill to amend the Bank Act permitting provincial governments to buy up to 19 per cent of the shares of existing banks and to hold up to 65 per cent of the shares of new banks for the first 10 years of their existence. The changes were promised by the government during the western economic opportunities conference in Calgary last summer.

—A bill extending to $15,000 from $6,000 the maximum interest-free loans available to western farmers using undelivered grain as collateral. Justice Minister Otto Lang described this bill last week as "a small step, but an important step," in the government's attempt to meet western discontent.

—A companion bill amending the Agriculture Products Co-operative Marketing Act to extend advance grain payments to all storable grains.

—A bill to provide for payments on wheat produced and sold for human consumption in Canada. It would legalize the two-price system for wheat, already in effect.

—An amendment to the Canadian Wheat Board Act which would delay final payments to farmers until at least Jan. 1 of the year after their crops are harvested as a means of easing their income tax burden.

Two bills are of special interest at the North. One would ensure the Yukon and Northwest Territories each one representative in the Senate. The other broadens administrative and other powers of the Northern Canada Power Commission.

Other legislation to die includes a bill amending eight statutes to provide more equal status between men and women and a bill to amend the Canada Pension Plan.

The pension plan amendments would end sex discrimination in the payment of survivors' benefits and eliminate means tests for claimants aged 65 to 69.

Measures to aid export development and permit trust and loan companies to increase their borrowing power also die.

The other bills are mainly housekeeping items, affecting government bodies and procedures.

Concert in the Courtyard

The courtyard at Quinte Secondary School was opened for the first time Wednesday during enrichment day. A folk-singing quartet and theatre arts groups gave performances in the spring sunshine, against a background of forsythia blossoms. A variety of diversified experiences were available to students during the day.

Township Appeals To MPP

Thurlow council is expected to request Clarice Rollins (MPP Hastings) to set up a meeting with provincial housing minister Sidney Handleman to discuss possible township exemption from the ministry's recent freeze on commercial development in the rural municipality.

During such a meeting, councillors are hopeful the province can be persuaded that Thurlow finds itself in circumstances that would warrant such a move.

The township is one of 52 municipalities across Ontario that have been slapped with a stop order prohibiting large scale commercial development on their lands bordering cities. Six Quinte area townships are affected by the freeze.

Municipalities without official plans or zoning bylaws are prime targets of the minister's April 25 announcement.

However, councillors claim ministry officials were not aware Thurlow possessed a zoning bylaw when the freeze was imposed. The bylaw restricts commercial development — most specifically, shopping centres — from any area roughly bounded by Sidney St. and the Moira River, Highway 401 and the Northern and Central Gas Corp. Ltd. pipeline.

The ministry first learned of the existence of Thurlow's zoning bylaw during a joint meeting Tuesday, councillors claim. At that time, a review and a decision concerning possible exemption was promised Wednesday.

During yesterday's council meeting, the expected call from Toronto was not received.

Thurlow finds itself deeper in the stop order bind with the recent relocation of Canada Cement Lafarge Ltd. The plant, assessed at upwards of $1 million, has moved its operation from Front Anne to Bath. Only vacant commercial use assessment — at most some $400,000 — can now be expected from the vacant property and buildings.

The commercial freeze could wipe out any hopes the township might have in recouping the loss of tax dollars, councillors fear.

Later this month, Thurlow council hopes it can meet with the minister to discuss the township's predicament.

The move follows a meeting between Sidney, Thurlow and Murray township councillors and ministry officials Tuesday. Councillors learned the necessity for provincial approval could prolong any form of commercial construction in the townships.

Spring Fair Starts Tonight

"Something for Everyone" is the theme of the spring edition of the Quinte Exhibition which gets underway at the fairgrounds tonight and runs through until Sunday evening.

The official opening in front of the grandstand at 7:30 p.m. Friday will see a flag with a new Quinte Exhibition crest raised by county agricultural representative Douglas Tupper of Sidney.

Also taking part in opening ceremonies will be exhibition president Douglas Rollins and fair board executive members.

This year, for the first time, the Quinte Exhibition is being presented in two editions — spring and fall — with the programs geared to the particular season.

In keeping with the Something for Everyone theme, this week's spring show will cater to things for spring and summer.

In the livestock field there will be Pakomino, Western, and Quarter horses on parade, along with gymkhana events and pony chariot racing, a sanctioned Arabian show along with hunters and jumpers.

The Ontario Dairy Goat Society will sponsor a show on the final day of the fair.

Beef cattle breeds — Herefords, Angus, Scot Shorthorns and Charolais — will be on display and the Belleville Kennel Club will stage a sanctioned show on Saturday.

For heavy horse enthusiasts, the Carlsberg Brewery will have its eight-horse Belgian hitch and oak wagon on display.

Opportunities for youth — a new category — will include competitions and displays by students from area schools, and for the first time the exhibition program will include a Queen of the Fair competition in which girls from the Quinte area are invited to take part.

Here, however, despite the fact invitations have been circulated to all area secondary schools, entries have been fewer than expected. Because of the few initial entries, the deadline for entering the contest has been extended until Saturday night.

Interest areas will include displays of camping equipment, trailers, boats, and motors, as well as crafts and hobby displays.

Exhibition Secretary Ev Gowsell reports that interest in the spring show is exemplified by the number of entries received.

And, of course, midway action is assured by a full Conklin Midway that has been setting up on the grounds since the first of the week. Other action includes Friday night harness racing and a demolition derby scheduled for this evening.

But today's heavy rain is likely to cancel out tonight's demolition derby.

Mr. Gowsell said if the event was cancelled tonight it would be run on Sunday afternoon.

Quinte Students Look to Future

A glimpse of what school could look like in the future was given at Quinte Secondary School Wednesday when the whole school tuned out for an "enrichment day" of adventures in learning.

Everything from photography to gourmet cooking to quilting to poetry — read by Canada's leading poets — was laid before students and members of the public who cared to attend.

English teacher Margaret Byrnes planned the day to provide a broadening and deepening experience in learning.

"It was designed to show as much as possible from one day what learning could be — a resources centre for the community," she said.

More than 90 experiences were available to Quinte students on Wednesday. They varied from visits to local industries to emergency training in first aid to demonstration of police work — including a show of attack dog work.

A Blooming Novelty?

Mrs. Florence Ekbier pours final drops of water on a spring-blooming plant she figures is a rarity. It's a cirvis, whose orange blossoms last about a month. The RR 3 Belleville (Thurlow township) resident won't reveal her age but says she's been gardening about 75 years since childhood. She's had the plant about two years and can find no mention of it in flower catalogues for Ontario climate.

Inflation Main Factor in Projection

Conservation Budget Up for Four Years

PICTON — A multi-year budget adopted last night by the Prince Edward Region Conservation Authority reflects a projected increase of 13 per cent in the next four years.

Chairman of the finance committee, Jack Stenning, said that the 4975 budget figures are accurate, while figures assigned in budgets for the following three years are "loose".

A projection figure of 10 per cent for inflation and three per cent for growth was suggested in calculating the budgets.

PERCA secretary Aleda Markland reported that the 1974 budget for administration totals $38,755 and the projected 1975 budget for this department is $41,155. The 1975 budget makes provision for newly-hired Authority supervisor Ian Bellville.

The projected administration budget for 1976 is $45,161 and for 1977, $54,078. In 1978, this department is budgeted at $64,585.

Mrs. Markland said the Authority was receiving supplementary grants of 15 per cent but this figure now has been increased to 20 per cent.

"If we ever get a 25 per cent supplementary grant we would have to double our levy to the municipalities," she said.

Authority member Jack Evans said that he would not favor an increase of levies to obtain an additional five per cent grant.

Land acquisitions are budgeted at $45,000 in 1974 $12,000 in 1975, $80,000 in 1976 and $70,000 in 1977.

Mrs. Markland discussed total budget figures and said that in 1975 the projected total budget will be $127,255. In 1976 it is projected at $143,771 and in 1977 at $157,808. In 1978 it will increase to a projected $183,195.

An allowance of $1,800 is made for expenditures not eligible for grants.

$28,000 for SWEEP In Prince Edward Area

PICTON — A Sweep (Students Working in an Environmental Enhancement Program) crew will begin work in Prince Edward County this summer under a $28,000 grant.

Aleda Markland, secretary for the Prince Edward Region Conservation Authority, said that, initially, plans had been made to hire 27 students in the program. Three of these would have been technical students hired to prepare teaching guides for local conservation areas.

Also, it was hoped that one senior supervisor, two foreman and a labor crew of 20 students could be hired.

A brief was submitted for this number of employees. But because of total proposals by all Ontario's 38 Authorities, cutbacks were made.

The Prince Edward Region Conservation Authority will hire one technical advisor and a assistant technical advisor, a superintendent, two foremen and about 15 laborers. By June 24 the SWEEP crew will be in action.

Projects for the students include construction of 50 wood duck nesting boxes, improvement of signs marking Prince Edward conservation sites and clean-ups at Bloomfield, Massassaga Point, and Beaver Meadow.

If there is sufficient time, a roadside clean-up campaign will be staged.

Consecon Girl Is Enthusiastic On Youth Conservation Program

PICTON — Participant in a Junior Conservationists' Award Program, Pamela Margetson of RR 2, Consecon, has advocated the six-week course as a valuable learning experience for youth.

"As many young people as possible should go. They couldn't help being impressed by the need for conservation," she told members of the Prince Edward Region Conservation Authority at a meeting Wednesday night.

After several tours of conservation sites and recreation activities, including canoeing and trapshooting the group moved to Trent University.

Here it attended lectures on lake research and learned Rice Lake where a program to eliminate weeds is in progress.

The program participants then were divided into four group and each was assigned to a different area.

Miss Margetson travelled to the Young's Point Conservation Area near Peterborough and participated in a survey of the area. Public opinion research was done to establish the needs of the area and possible future uses were outlined by the study team.

After two weeks at Young's Point, Miss Margetson's group took a 40-mile canoe trip through Algonquin Park, completing the summer program.

"It was quite hectic but I wouldn't have missed it," she observed, speaking of her trip.

Exhibition Time

The wish of everyone these days is surely for something more akin to summer weather and especially on the eve of the Quinte Exhibition's spring event, it marks the initial effort of the exhibition as a two season effort, concluding later in the year with the fall section.

As Exhibition authorities have pointed out already, the decision to split the usual mid-summer event stems from organizational difficulties in the past, ranging from insufficient stabling facilities to the problems visitors faced in trying to see everything offered at a given time.

Certainly, breaking the event into two parts is an innovation that may go far toward eliminating these difficulties. The three-day spring presentation starting tomorrow will feature livestock, a kennel club show, a team of Belgian wagon horses, and of course all the fun of the midway and associated activities.

An interesting new category is one providing for competitions and displays by schools, reflecting the educational scene today and student interests. Also scheduled is the crowning of a Queen of the Fair, the winner being eligible for competition at the CNE for a provincial title.

There will be other attractions, but the foregoing gives an idea of what to expect in this reconstituted Quinte Exhibition. From the response to the broad program fair authorities will be able to gauge future requirements. The expanded curriculum, if we may borrow a school term, promises opportunities for many other local groups to put their work before the public. There is no reason why the fair should not continue to reflect a wide spectrum of community activity. We think of last Sunday's gathering of Belleville's various voluntary groups and realize that the public needs to be reminded constantly of both their presence and work. Too often this goes unnoticed and unsung. However, the fault lies in part at least with the organizations themselves, for hiding their light under a bushel as it were.

It is satisfying to be able to welcome yet another Quinte Exhibition — one that affords new promise, the freshness of spring, and in the knowledge that yet another round of Exhibition programming is in the cards for the fall.

Focus on Epilepsy

Epilepsy is a neurological disorder which from time immemorial has been shrouded in mystery, misinformation, and prejudice.

Stemming from irregular activity of the brain's electrical patterns, causing convulsions and, in its less dramatic form, brief lapses of concentration, epilepsy is not a disease. Hereditv does play a part in it in some cases, many scientists contend it is caused by other factors. It can develop as a result of head injuries, birth defects, birth trauma, chemical imbalance, some virus infections, and even drug abuse.

Many of the great figures of the past suffered from epilepsy, among them Julius Caesar, Leonardo da Vinci, Dante, Handel, Dostoevski, Napoleon, and Alfred Nobel. It does not affect intelligence, and because it can be controlled in many cases by medication the ability to function normally is not impaired.

This week has been declared Epilepsy Week in Ontario and the Ontario Epilepsy Association, Suite 405, 90 Eglinton Ave. E., Toronto M4P 1A6 is conducting a publicity campaign aimed at shedding more light on this condition.

Prejudice still exists in the public and official mind with regard to epileptics, a fact recognized by Premier Davis in a recent message to the Association. Urging public interest in the campaign this week Mr. Davis noted that persons with epilepsy "are constantly facing barriers and prejudices that cause constant frustrations and setbacks in their lives."

Some 200,000 Canadians suffer from this affliction. Yet in a majority of cases it can be controlled successfully. Although there is no known cure, treatment by drugs enables most to live free or nearly free of seizures, and to lead normal, productive lives.

Seeking Order in Field of Health

Health Disciplines Act Is Before the Legislature

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — Medical people field just like any other group in society, even though usually being somewhat more dignified they indulge do not do so with the verve, or brass knuckles, of some other fields.

Currently the house has been processing the new Health Disciplines Act.

This bill essentially aims at bringing order to the new huge field of health and para-health practice. It sets out in broad terms just who can do what, and in doing so has brought out some of the conflicts within the health field.

But the strongest debate probably has been over the role of opthamologists as against optometrists.

Opthamologists, fully-qualified medical specialists, have been disturbed over wider powers that the bill would give optometrists, who take a much more limited course.

The controversy has centred on one main point. The new legislation would give optometrists the authority to handle some prescription drugs.

And the opthalmologists, and some others in the medical profession, have been opposed to this.

The argument has been that the optometrists do not have the proper training to handle drugs, and that they through ignorance could do serious damage with them.

Against this the optometrists, in turn, have said they have the training to administer the drugs they want to use and that they have this authority in other jurisdictions, including the U.K.

There seems to be some one on one debate to be had with the whole situation there has to be the suspicion that personal feelings are most important.

In the eye field, for example, that the opthamologists feel they are losing some of their stature and that the optometrists, in turn, want more recognition in the community.

And we may be seeing more of this.

For the government has made it clear that it intends to encourage the growth of paramedicals, allied health personnel, or whatever term one wants to use to describe that very large group of people who do not have full medical qualification but can perform specialized services.

He said that some people seemed to think that nobody but an ultrasophisticated doctor be permitted to perform any function.

But the government, Miller said, was that to best use manpower and control costs the middle ground had be made to "come with the necessary additional training.

"Yes?"

'Borrowing' Practice Discussed in Commons

By RICHARD JACKSON
OTTAWA — It has taken nearly six months, but now it has been established and placed on the parliamentary record that people – including federal public servants – cannot just take things and say it is only "borrowing."

"The Criminal Code," says Solicitor General Warren Allmand, "makes that very clear."

Clear or not, six employees – the most senior of them earning an annual $11,000 – of Consumer and Corporate Affairs did take $1,000 worth of electric writers, desks, tables, chairs, slide projectors and tape recorders to help furnish their homes, and it was called "borrowing."

In raids on the homes, the RCMP seized the "borrowed" equipment and turned over the case to the Ottawa Carleton Crown Attorney for appropriate legal action.

The Crown has looked into it for a couple of months then dropped the case because it could not be proved that the employees had intended actually stealing the stuff since they had "signed out an annual $11,000 – of Consumer and Corporate Affairs warehouse and given "receipts."

The RCMP said it was "an internal matter for the government department concerned."

The department refused to identify the "borrowers" on grounds that the affair was not "a public matter," but suspended the six employees for periods ranging between two and six days.

Consumer and Corporate Affairs Deputy Minister Michael Pitfield let it be known that while the affair had involved nothing more than "borrowing" government property, it was, in his view, a serious matter.

And there the case rested, buried, for all practical purposes, in the departmental files, with all its unanswered questions.

He was concerned, he says, "that the impression should not be left among public servants and the public at large that they can 'borrow' things from others and not be charged."

It was, he insists, "a matter of great importance."

So he has pursued it in the Commons, and in the Parliamentary Justice Committee, assemblies of Solicitor General Allmand at length.

In his cross-examination of the Solicitor General he asked a key question – still not answered satisfactorily – as to why, "if there was insufficient evidence for the laying of charges, the six 'borrowers' were subjected to job suspension and heavy docking."

But he was more successful in establishing that "borrowing" can be a mushy word for an altogether different act.

Here is how he did it, as seen in excerpts from the transcript of evidence in the Justice Committee:

Mr. Dick: The government's term was "borrowed" in the press release by the department.

Mr. Allmand: Right. It was not put out by us, but by Consumer and Corporate Affairs without consultation.

Mr. Dick: I think the term is wrong and I am trying to clarify "borrow" because a lot of people after seeing the word "borrowed" in this instance may think they can go around to any department, or any other place, and take things home without permission and say, "Well, I saw it; you can borrow and you are not going to jail or not going to be fined because you are only 'borrowing.'" It is wrong, and I want it cleared up.

Mr. Allmand: Of course, you are correct. You cannot take things and say you are only borrowing them.

Mr. Dick: That is right.

Mr. Allmand: The Criminal Code and the precedents on the criminal law make that very clear.

Mr. Dick: But you cannot prove intent if a man is given a receipt.

Mr. Allmand: That might have been one of the major reasons for the Crown Attorney reconsidering that charges be not laid.

Mr. Dick: That is what I have been trying all this time to get out – to rectify the erroneous impression that these people were not prosecuted because they were merely borrowing the goods. I would like to find somebody else that does that and gets off.

Adrenalin Flows in Aussie Vote

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Other than the likes of Sir John A. Macdonald's stonelined outhouses on the hustings in the Nineteenth century and Pierre Elliott Trudeau's "fuddle duddle" in the Twentieth, Canadian politics and politicians are a tame lot compared to Australian.

In battle, sports, politics, probably in bed too, the Aussies are just more vigorous, more venturesome, more raucous than their fellow Canadians in the Commonwealth.

The current and totally unexpected Australian election over an issue we Canadians would solve without turning the country upside down, has turned into an incredible public downbrook with one senior Australian politician calling another in public "a bit of a narc."

The cause was the kind of political manoeuvre which could raise hell with any opposition in a parliamentary democracy, but hardly bring about an election when the party in power has three years to go.

Labor party Prime Minister Gough Whitlam who ruled with the slight majority of nine seats in the 125-seat House of Representatives, tried to obtain an extra seat in the Australian Senate by appointing an old politician as ambassador to Finland.

The political enemy in it is Senator Vince Gair of the Democratic Labor party which controls the 60-seat Australian senate with 31 seats.

Gair made the senatorial elections in Australia May 16 (where the senate is elected, not where the elected compared to appointed here), and Prime Minister Whitlam hoped to win the senator's seat for the Labor party.

Chaos resulted as soon as Mr. Whitlam's opponents and the press figured out his motive, to stop the balance of the Senate in his favor May 16 when half the 60 Senate seats would be voted on.

Mr. Whitlam's coalition of the league, Country party Leader Doug Anthony accused the Prime Minister of an unparalleled act of political cynicism. The Melbourne Age was crying away saying "it is one thing to have grudging admiration for ruthless cunning. It is another to be pleased about having a rather tricky prime minister."

The opposition using its slim Senate majority tried to bring down a Whitlam money supply bill. The angry prime minister countered and dissolved the government. Blitz then ceremony and bitter personal attacks have ensued as the campaign for May 18 national elections gets under way.

Australian domestic politics are about as remote here as are Canadian ones "down under." But Mr. Whitlam's whirlwind turn-around of Australian policy has been one of the major international events in the Pacific and in South East Asia.

From a pro-U.S. bastion supporting Americans in Vietnam with fighting troops and additional security forces in Malaysia to combat Marxist jungle guerrilla fighters, Australia under Whitlam has pursued an anti-U.S., or better still, strongly nationalistic course.

The troops have come home from Asian, anti-Communist military commitments. Australia has recognized the People's Republic of China and North Vietnam, hastening to fill diplomatic missions in both Peking and Hanoi, announced its willingness to co-operate in technical aid to Communist Asian states.

The Australian armed forces have not necessarily been reduced in size by the Labor government, the first since 1951, but enlarged with promises of new equipment following an investigating commission.

Australians at large appear to have liked Whitlam's shift. Traditionally uneasy about the big Asian powers to their north (Japan in the 1920s, the rising might of Communist China in the 1960s), they now have made peace with both.

Japan in the post-war era is a major trader and Australian investor. China has now become an accepted neighbor.

"Colossi" — Blood almost-tempted to steal the British Crown Jewels 203 years ago today—in 1671—from the Tower of London. By order of Charles II, Blood lost his Irish estate which had been granted him under the Commonwealth, and in revenge he attempted to kidnap the lord-lieutenant of Ireland and hang him on the Government gallows. During the attempted theft of the Crown Jewels, Blood was caught red-handed when an 80-year-old keeper of the regalia, though bound and gagged, managed to sound an alarm. Blood refused to confess to anyone but the king, who was so impressed with the rogue's audacity that he ordered the return of Blood's Irish estate.

Mandatory Seat Belts Would Help Reduce Highway Toll

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Seat belts will have to be buckled up by anyone riding in a car in Ontario, under provincial legislation recently proposed.

The mandatory use of seat belts is already established in a number of jurisdictions, ranging from Sweden to Australia. Statistics generally show a reduction in deaths and injuries in auto accidents after the introduction of the seat-belt rule.

Yet the rule always provokes hostile reaction from a substantial sector of the public, wherever and wherever it is introduced.

Why? One reason is obviously the resistance of a free citizen of compulsion in a part of life from which many people derive a feeling of freedom, independence and gratification.

Another is the natural human reluctance to change old ways of doing familiar things, especially when the change might involve some physical discomfort—real or imagined.

The case for compulsory wearing of seat belts is based largely on the social cost of auto-accident injuries—the untimely deaths, the cost of long recovering from avoidable injuries, the expensive, high-priced medical, paramedical and hospital services.

Australia's experience with the seat-belt law shows significant improvements in accident rates. After the introduction of the law, deaths among car occupants in the state of Victoria fell 14.5 per cent (nearly 25 per cent in urban areas), a Melbourne hospital reported a one-third decline in spinal injuries, and another hospital noted a drop of almost one-third in serious head injuries.

Opponents of seat belts can cite cases in which people have been injured when trapped by their seat belts, and deduce from this that they might have escaped injury by being thrown clear. But figures seem to confirm that the wearing of seat belts prevented far more injuries than it causes.

Volkswagen is experimenting with a passive or involuntary restraint system for bucket-seat cars that could overcome some of the opposition to conventional seat belts.

In the VW system, the occupant is automatically belted in by a shoulder belt with one end anchored to a retractor between the front seats, while the other is on the rear edge of the door and locks into the pillar when the door is closed.

Safety has been growing slowly as a public issue, ever since the 1920s when consumer activists began warning about razor-sharp dashboards and other dangerous ornamentation on cars.

At first the car makers brushed off their critics by blaming all accidents on "those nut at the wheel." But under public pressure they have since taken a less negative approach.

Seat belts or other types of restraint are only one of many measures still needed to protect the occupants—and to otherwise—in the accidents that will inevitably happen.

Both government and industry could benefit from a better quality of the safety devices that have saved countless lives in professional auto racing — safety seats, harnesses, roll cages, and especially explosion-proof fuel containers (properly position) that limit the rate of spillage in case of a rupture.

Epilepsy And The Public

Kingston Whig-Standard

Epilepsy Week is May 5 to 11, and the Ontario Epilepsy Association is organizing a special campaign to inform people about epilepsy.

In Ontario, an estimated 100,000 people have this neurological disorder. Like epileptics everywhere, they often face problems in dealing with the rest of society, and these social problems are one of the prime targets of Epilepsy Week.

According to J. J. Mackness, president of the association, the aim is to publish the fact that epilepsy makes a great deal of difference in the lives of epileptics.

"We've far too long," he says, "people with epilepsy have faced public hostility based on such mistaken ideas as epilepsy being contagious, that those who have epilepsy are mentally retarded, or even insane. These views are totally false, and we're out to say so."

Elizabeth Crescent Issue

Editor,

Belleville City council has done it again. Yet another delay in getting a decision from the OMB regarding the Elizabeth Crescent subdivision. Is this a form of "progress"? It's time they got down to city officials and did the job properly.

Incidentally, the lawyer who found it necessary to tell one of the objectors that "they were only doing politics and they were going to get the subdivision no matter who liked it or not" should realize those days have long since gone by the wayside in Belleville. People are much wiser these days.

'Oxygenated Bitters' Now Forgotten History

By TERRY SPRAGUE
Staff Correspondent

NORTHPORT — The oxygenated bitters are recommended by Physicians in their practice. A distinguished clergyman, who had taken six bottles, by direction of his Physician, states they have cured him of Dyspepsia.

At least, so says a special notice in a November, 1864 issue of the Belleville Intelligencer. The yellowed and brittle part page from the newspaper was discovered by Howard Smith, RR 2, Picton, stuck to the inside of an old house wall which he was renovating.

The paper also advertised that 200 pairs of Mackinaw and Whitney Blankets were on sale from $2.50 to $6.50 at M. Nulty and Sons.

Of particular interest was the statement of receipts and expenditures of the "town" of Belleville for the year ending Dec. 31, 1863.

A few excerpts from the statement: Taxes for the year amounted to $3,018. Licences for shops was $542.00; cart and livery licences $80; mayor's donation, $100; non-residents land tax, $370.

Expenditures were just as interesting: Salaries, $2,838.05; printing, $180.98; election expenses, $64; stationery, $172.63.

Big Culvert Is Attention-getter

The culvert, weighing 10 tons, is slated for lowering in the Big Island Causeway within the near future, at which time traffic to and from the island was scheduled to be temporarily closed.

The project, costing in the area of $10,000 was due to have been completed on May 2. But, says Prince Edward County engineer Donald Clark, construction was delayed until further soil tests could be conducted.

"The Bridge Office in Toronto felt that we should hold off," commented Mr. Clark. "As most engineering projects must have 100 or 150 per cent safety factor built into them."

Conservation Authority Hires First Supervisor

PICTON — The Prince Edward Region Conservation Authority has hired Ian Balsillie of RR3, Picton, as supervisor.

"He will be someone to tie in many of our loose ends," commented Donald Walker, chairman of the PERCA's Land Use Committee.

Mr. Walker said that hiring of a supervisor was one of the committee's major achievements to date. He feels it will contribute to progress in the authority.

IMPORTANT NEWS

to all investors in Canada Savings Bonds

The Minister of Finance announced in his Budget on May 6, 1974 that the average annual yield to maturity on all unmatured Canada Savings Bonds has been increased, effective from May 1, 1974, to

9%

The higher yield will be obtained by means of cash bonus payments which for income tax purposes will be considered as capital gains.

Who is entitled to receive cash bonus payments?

Every holder of unmatured Canada Savings Bonds is entitled to receive cash bonus payments providing that he holds his Bond up to the date that such payments become due.

When do the cash bonus payments become due?

On all Canada Savings Bonds maturing on or before November 1, 1979, a cash bonus payment becomes due on the date of maturity of the Bond.

On all Canada Savings Bonds maturing after November 1, 1979, holders will be entitled to receive two cash bonus payments. The first will be payable on November 1, 1979. The second cash bonus will be payable on the date of maturity of the Bond.

What is the amount of the cash bonus payments?

The actual dollar amount of each cash bonus payment varies with each Series. However, in every case the dollar amount payable will be sufficient to provide a yield of 9% per annum for the period May 1, 1974, to maturity of the Bond.

Where Bonds mature after November 1, 1979, the first cash bonus payment will provide an average annual yield of 9% from May 1, 1974, to October 31, 1979. The second cash bonus payment will also provide an average annual yield of 9% from November 1, 1979, to the maturity date of the Bond.

How do I receive my cash bonus payments?

To receive your cash bonus payments you simply present your Bonds to any authorized Issuing Agent of Canada Savings Bonds (including any Bank or authorized Trust or Loan Company and Caisse Populaire) on or after the date on which the payment becomes due. Of course, a bondholder will not have to cash his Bond when claiming a cash bonus payment which becomes payable before the Bond matures.

How do I treat the cash bonus payments when completing my Income Tax Return?

The cash bonus payments will be considered as capital gains. When receiving your cash bonus payments a statement will be issued to you indicating the amount of the cash bonus. This will eliminate any confusion which might arise when completing your Income Tax Return.

Can I still cash my Canada Savings Bonds at any time?

Yes. Your Canada Savings Bonds can still be cashed at any time at their full face value plus earned interest. Interest is calculated at the appropriate annual coupon rate for each full month which has elapsed since the date of the last matured coupon. These values are shown on the back of your Bond. It should be remembered, however, that your cash bonus payments are payable only on or after specific dates and you will not be entitled to them unless you hold your Bond to the date that such bonuses become due.

Will the Compound Interest Feature be affected by these changes?

No. The compound interest feature on outstanding issues of Canada Savings Bonds will not be affected by these changes. Bondholders who are taking advantage of the compound interest feature may continue to do so and will continue to be paid compound interest in the amounts specified at the time of issue of each Series. These amounts are shown on your Bond.

Will any of the other features of Canada Savings Bonds be affected by these changes?

No. Your Canada Savings Bonds continue to retain all of the features that they offered at the time you bought them. Canada Savings Bonds currently being bought by instalments under the Payroll Savings Plan and the Official Monthly Savings Plan are entitled to the cash bonuses. Payment schedules connected with such instalment purchases remain unchanged.

Can I still buy Canada Savings Bonds?

Yes. You can still buy the 1973/74 Series of Canada Savings Bonds at prices as specified under the original terms of this issue. Purchasers of this Series will be entitled to cash bonuses which will be payable on November 1, 1979, and at maturity on November 1, 1985.

Some 125 New Words May Get by Webster

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — The country seems to be suffering from a bad case of automobilitis. Not only that, but decidophobia and Leriam are rampant, the Nixnologists are out in force and logocides are filling the political air.

Loosely translated, what all this means is that the world has been changing rapidly within the last year or so and the English language has been changing right along with it.

These new words are among some 125 that have come into the language and are being studied by editors of Merriam-Webster dictionaries for possible inclusion in future editions.

Automobilitis, as though anyone has to be told, is the problem caused by the increasing use of automobiles. Decidophobia is abnormal dread of making decisions. Loserism is lack of faith in oneself.

A Nixnologist is one who studies the policies and practices of Richard Nixon and logocide is the distortion of the meaning of a word.

"This is the first time in several years that most of the new words did not come from young people, the black experience or such areas as rector for dictionaries for sports and music," said Dr. H. Bosley Woolf, editorial director of Merriam.

"Curiously enough, Watergate itself added few words," Dr. Woolf continued. Such terms as inoperative and deep six are already in our dictionaries. Even "writer gate" is, defined as a floodgate, although that definition could be expanded in the future."

Among new words found by the editorial staff, which reviews hundreds of publications in search are: sourtocracy, a form of government in which the courts make the laws; carrotize, to entice into a deal by the promise of immediate gain; economics, the application of the principles of ecology and economics to land development; ethnocide, the deliberate destruction of an ethnic culture.

No all new words come from the startling events of the time. From sports, for instance, there is sky surfing, in which participants tied to delta-wing kites glide down from cliffs.

From fashion there is baggies, high-waisted pants that flare from the thigh and have deep cuffs. From the world of drugs we get poppers, small white pills containing a depressant drug.

Some of the more colorful new words found by the editors include: administrivia, unimportant administrative duties; carbohilic, a compulsive eater; topless radio, radio programming that features sexually-oriented telephone conversations with listeners who call in; grey panther, a member of an organization of militant elderly people; "flipper freak," an enthusiastic player of pinball machines.

Aunt Tom, a successful businesswoman who is not interested in furthering the cause of women's liberation; alimony drone, a self-indulgent, indolent divorcee who lives on alimony; latenalia, graffiti found on the walls of public toilets.

South Africa Facing Drought of Red Wine

Liquor dealers have imposed rationing, prices are leap-frogging and there seems little chance of the situation improving.

Most consumers are angry over the shortage and blame market manipulation but this is denied by producers, whole salers and retailers.

They say the reason is that over the last 18 months white South Africans have started to abandon their traditional brandy and cola for the sub tleties of red wine. And there's just not enough red to go round.

Wine exporting is a negligible part of the problem: South Africa sends abroad only about 10 per cent of its total production, even though, producers have had lucrative offers from Japanese and American buyers to take over the entire annual crop of more than 66 million gallons.

In the 1950s, wine drinking was generally regarded as a low-class social habit in South Africa. People used to take their bottles home carefully wrapped in brown paper.

Then came a white-wine boom in the 1960s, and people have since graduated to the heavy red Cabernet and Pinotage wines.

And instead of sneaking home with one bottle, they buy it up in cases and lay it down to mature.

One authoritative estimate is that producers could sell 10 times more of the good-class reds if only they had the supplies.

The trouble is that the heavy reds only grow in a small area around Stellenbosch, near Cape Town, and their vines do not produce heavy crops.

Farmers are planting more Cabernet vines, but it will take from five to seven years before they start providing wine for the market.

Most liquor outlets have imposed rationing and it is expected that the price of some red wines may quadruple in the next year or two.

Millhaven Warden To Be Transferred

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — Nicholas Caros, appointed warden of Millhaven penitentiary in November, 1972, is to be transferred, it was announced today.

Mr. Caros, 47, will be replaced by Arthur Trono, regional director for the penitentiary service, until a permanent replacement can be found.

Jordan Juby, regional information officer, made the announcement saying no decision has been taken on a new post for Mr. Caros.

Mr. Caros took over the Millhaven post from warden Donald Clark in 1972.

Since then, the prison has been plagued by incidents involving both guards and prisoners.

In April, guards began booking of sick to protest what they called excessive prisoner freedom.

A parliamentary committee formed to investigate the matter declared Millhaven as one of the worst penal institutions in the country.

For Families of Alcoholics

Al-Anon—It Makes the Difference

By SHARON AIRHART

It took Al-Anon, the worldwide organization of the families of alcoholics, to make Bob realize that his wife, a 15-year alcoholic, "didn't enjoy making a fool of herself."

Bob active in Belleville's weekly Al-Anon group, adds, "I began to understand that she was fighting something stronger than she was."

He came to Al-Anon five years ago, two years after his wife had gone from an active alcholic to what he terms a person with a "dormant allergy to alcohol".

"You live with a drunk whether the person is sober or drinking," he says, "and you live with it every day."

Bob believes that this is where Al-Anon makes a big difference in the lives of the families of alcoholics and perhaps in the lives of the alcoholic themselves.

"The big thing Al-Anon can do is offer a change in attitude for the [illegible]. You find out that maybe he doesn't do much about the drinking problem itself but at least you can change the way you feel about it."

Bob says that while his wife was drinking "I was doing things that weren't right — but her drinking was a ready excuse not to change myself."

"I'm convinced that I put myself through absolute hell for two years for nothing.

"I was so irrational with worry about our home breaking up that I created enough tension to keep two or three wives drunk."

Hell is the best way to describe life with an active alcoholic, Bob says.

"You go to work and when you come home you're not sure anyone will be there. The kids are alone and you don't know where your wife is. She might disappear for two or three days.

"The last two years my wife was drinking we socialized only with the emergency ward of the hospital," he adds.

Now that his wife is not drinking, life is more stable, Bob says, but he stresses that Al-Anon teaches there is no easy cure even if the alcoholic stops drinking.

Bob talks about 15 years he "tried every trick in the book" to control his wife, to stop her from drinking.

"It made me a mean person and I haven't changed completely even yet."

The supportive role played by Al-Anon may be as important to the family's general health as Alcoholics Anonymous itself.

"There are more wives and husbands of alcoholics having nervous breakdowns than there are alcoholics having breakdowns," he says.

The reasons are obvious.

First the alcoholic is finding relief in the alcohol though it is the cause of his problem.

"Some works," Bob says "It works so well that people who are unhappy or have no self-esteem come to rely on the feeling of well-being it creates."

But the alcoholic's family experiences no such relief.

Not only must the family live with the horrors of chronic alcoholism — blackouts, violent behaviour, general ill health — but it must face society and its judgement of alcoholics.

"The attitude of our society toward the drunk is still one of rejection," Bob says.

"The shame is so great that most of us would rather talk about adultery.

"We label drunks as social misfits and sinners. Maybe it's because that way we can write people off without asking ourselves why we think we're so smart to push drinks at each other."

And until recently, the family of the alcoholic had to face all of this without much hope.

Once, in the emergency ward of a hospital with his wife, Bob turned to a doctor in what he calls a last desperate appeal for help.

"The best he could do, the most he could say was 'you have quite a cross to bear,'" Bob says.

These days, medical research is looking for a cure to alcoholism while AA and Al-Anon continue to do their work, trying to reach more and more people.

Currently the Belleville Al-Anon group, which meets each Tuesday at 8:30 p.m. at St. Thomas' Parish Hall, numbers about 35. Yet extrapolation, which would put the number of persons in Belleville with a drinking problem at more than 2,000 indicates that since one drunk adversely affects the lives of five persons, there are about 10,000 people in Belleville who could use the help of Al-Anon.

Playing euchre for the afternoon in St. Thomas Parish Hall are left to right, Nona Carter, Jean Ellis, Vera Silsbury and Sandra Carr. They were among 200 women who attended yesterday's Bridge and Euchre, sponsored by the Progressive Conservative Women's Council. A tea and bake sale followed the card games.

PC Women Hold Annual Bridge and Euchre

The annual bridge and euchre afternoon held by the Progressive — Conservative Women's Council was attended by more than 200 women May 8.

Convenors for the occasion were Joan Newman and Phyllis McGaughey. Marjory McKenna looked after the kitchen assisted by Nellie Jean Holland and several volunteer helpers.

Following the bridge and euchre games, tea and coffee were served with fruit breads and cakes. A bake table was also set up for the event.

Convener for the euchre was Ellen Vesterfelt, who drew the winners of the bridge and euchre games assisted by Vera Morphy.

Several prizes donated by local merchants were drawn by Phyllis Wing and Pearl Reid, who were ticket conveners for the afternoon, assisted by Ruth Ann Thomlinson and Beth Collyer.

Bottle-Feeding Baby - It's Only a Substitute

GENEVA (Reuter) — Attheerfore better than breast feeding, wrote Dr. Adewale Omololu, professor of nutrition at Nigeria's Ibadan University.

Omololu said governments have a duty to inform mothers that "the ideal is infant feeding is breast milk."

"Baby-food manufacturers must be made to reduce the tone and leng of their advertisements so that women are not encouraged to give up breast-feeding for the imagined advantages of bottle-feeding."

Omololu said doctors in developing countries "often believe that putting a child on artificial feeding is like sentencing him to death."

He recalled a mother from a Nigerian village visiting his clinic and complaining that her two-months-old child weighed only 5½ pounds and was not growing.

"She had heard over the radio that powdered milk was the best food. She had learned that adapted and supper - class women use feeding bottles. She had seen advertisements at health centres and on billboards showing big -bouncing babies being fed with bottles."

The W.H.O. report said: "Over millions of years, the composition of breast milk has been modified and adapted by nature so that it is fully digested by the baby and gives a good rate of growth."

Scientists attached to baby food firms had tried to modify cows' milk by sterilization, dilution and supplementation to make it more similar to human milk, "but it is still only a substitute for the real thing."

The medical profession had confirmed that breast milk transfers some of the antibodies of the mother and makes the baby less liable to infection and that breast-fed children get fewer attacks of diarrhea, vomiting and stomach upsets.

"Mothers who breast-feed develop a closer attachment to and love for their children. The children too are more relaxed, contented and happier. There is some evidence that this closeness may have far-reaching effects on the future of the child."

The report suggested that facilities should be provided in offices, shops and industries for children to be breast-fed, or that mothers get time off to suckle their infants.

Ann Landers

Love Life Is Possible For Paralyzed People

Dear Best: I hope you will not feel that I am overstepping my bounds when I tell you what the law thinks of silicone injections. They are considered dangerous and have been declared illegal. It seems that several women who had silicone shots developed tumors in various parts of the body and serious medical problems resulted.

Silicone implants, however, can be a safe and satisfactory approach to breast enlargement. Many plastic surgeons perform this operation and you can learn who in your vicinity does it by asking your own family doctor or contacting a medical society.

Dear Ann Landers: I just want your readers to know that the world isn't all bad. There are still a lot of good people around.

My mother was driving and we were going toward town. A car to the right of us ran a red light and hit us broadside. I was scared stiff. My mother's head hit the windshield and she had blood all over her face. I am 17 and thought I was very grown-up, but when something like that happens you get young again awfully fast.

People came running to help us from every direction. Someone called the police. Another person called an ambulance. Somebody brought over an ice pack and towels for mother. The kindness from these strangers was just beautiful.

The people in the other car panicked and accepted the blame. They didn't try to lie out of it like some people would. A mother was hurt in the accident. I pray to God that she will be OK. Please sign me—Things Are Good In Nampa, Idaho

Dear Nam: Of course there are a lot of wonderful people around. The trouble is they don't make news, so we rarely hear about them. Thank you for writing.

Dear Ann Landers: Thank you for printing that wonderful letter from the young woman in the wheelchair. I hope she got her chance to be someone's sweetheart or wife.

You missed an important opportunity, Ann. You didn't you relate it clear that just because a person is in a wheelchair doesn't mean he or she can't enjoy sex. Yes, even men and women who are paralyzed from the neck down. This is a fact that a great many people aren't aware of.

It's still not too late to let them know. Please print this letter and add a word or two of your one.—One Who Has Been There.

Dear Been There: Thank you for giving me an opportunity to pass on this useful information. Of course, you are right. The medical explanation is too intricate to go into here, but it is a fact that most wheelchair people are capable of having sexual relations. In some instances, special counselling to overcome psychological problems may be needed, but physically, they can perform as well as anyone else.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a 21-year-old woman who is built like a 12-year-old boy. Will you please tell me where I can get silicone injections? Please read my question carefully. I am not asking what you think of the idea. I am asking where I can find a doctor who will give me the injections. I'm flat as a board and hate the way I look.—Restless Bonnie

Tips for Baby-Sitters

By DORIS CLARK

One of the rules in our new leaflet, "Tips For Baby-Sitters" says:

"Never let any unauthorized person into the house. If a caller says he or she is a friend of the family, a repair man, or a police, utility employee, talk through the outer door. Tell the caller this is not a convenient time, and suggest that he or she come back the next day. Again, don't say that you are alone."

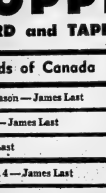
I hope all of our baby-sitters will read this, as well as the rest of our teens who at times find themselves alone at home late in the evenings.

There are "Tips" for both the mother who hires a baby-sitter and for the baby-sitter herself. Write in for the leaflet, enclosing 25 cents and a stamped self-addressed envelope.

Dear Doris: I have to arrange a wedding reception. The bride's parents are divorced and only the mother is coming to the ceremony.

Who makes the toasts at the reception? The bride and bridegroom would rather have a presentation than gifts; where does this take place?

Pinch Hitter.



Dear Pinch Hitter: I'm sending the leaflet, "Happy The Bride The Sun Shines On", which outlines duties of the bride, groom and other attendants, as well as describing three interesting weddings and how they were managed. There is a list of wedding toasts enclosed with indications as to who proposes and who thanks in each case.

If there is to be a presentation it should take place after the dinner and the toasts. This custom has been brought to us by our European immigrants, now Canadian citizens, and can be something of a surprise to the older Canadian-born English Canadians.

Be sure that either the bride or the groom is of European background before you plan to ask for money instead of the usual gifts.

(Hey, Doris helped you with a problem? Write and till her all! Address your letter in care of this newspaper.)

Happy Warrior

Paul C. Bragg has declared was on death. The 82-year-old warrior doesn't smoke or drink, eats fertilized eggs, brain breathes and can stand on his head for incredible periods of time. Mr. Bragg, author of more than 50 publications on health foods, launched the first modern health food store in the United States and introduced pineapple and tomato juice to the public. He has been out-witting death since the age of 16 when he was told he only had three months to live because of consumption. (CP Photo)

Summerside Centre Trains Fishermen

SUMMERSIDE, P.E.I. (CP) — The two-year-old Marine and Fisheries Training Centre is the most modern centre in the Atlantic region for teaching navigation and other seafaring trades.

Operated by the Prince Edward Island education department, the centre is situated in the harbor of this Northumberland Strait community.

A step away is the Kelvin-Hughes true-motion radar which can easily pick up the outline of the New Brunswick coast.

Ken Merriam, a former master with the Canadian National ferry service, heads the school and he likes to make things as realistic as possible.

Such as lifeboat drills in the winter. Next winter, air will be pumped through the water beside the school to keep the water from freezing. "That way we can schedule drills in the low temperatures that could prevail in an emergency."

There are 36 navigation students at the centre working towards seven different types of certificates. They include fishermen, ferry workers and tanker and tugboat crew members.

Besides navigation, there is a seamanship course with heavy emphasis on emergency duties such as proper use of life rafts, distress signals and firefighting procedures.

A class of would-be tuna boat skippers learns chartwork and the rules of the road. There will also be oystermen at the school.

There is a nine-month course to train gas-and diesel-engine mechanics and a two-month repair and trouble-shooting course for fishermen.

They Went North

Raw Milk Controversy Revived in California

CITY OF INDUSTRY, Calif. (AP) — An old dispute over the safety and value of unpasteurized milk has flared up here in a struggle between county health officials and the largest producer of raw certified milk in the United States.

Alta-Dena Dairy, which produces about 11,500 gallons of raw certified milk each day, was forced to pasteurize its milk for about a month because a few cows in one of the dairy's two herds were believed infected with brucellosis, which can cause serious illness in humans. The dairy went to court and had the order lifted.

Another pasteurization order—still standing—was issued when county health officials said they found a small amount of salmonella dublin, an infectious organism that can cause food poisoning, in a test sample of raw milk from the dairy's second herd.

The dairy contended the pasteurization orders—which came about the same time last month—were unwarranted and that health officials created a "panic situation."

After some of the raw milk products were ordered recalled, said Alta-Dena, "people were bringing back all of our products, even pasteurized ones."

And yet, the dairy complains, it was never proven that any of the allegedly contaminated milk reached the public or that anyone got sick from drinking the milk.

It is hard to find a non-partisan opinion on raw milk, which is what all milk was until the 1850s, when pasteurization—heating to kill harmful organisms—came into wide use.

Dr. Bernard Bellow, director of the National Arthritis Medical Center in Desert Hot Springs, Calif., and author of "Diet Digest," says raw milk is "the pure food in history."

He said pasteurizing milk removes much of its nutritional value—he couldn't say how much—as well as a "growth factor X" and an "anti-stiffness factor" that is useful in treating arthritis.

Bellow said he prescribes raw milk for patients at the small new medical clinic which he and three other doctors run.

Dr. Roslyn Alfin-Slater, director of the division of environmental and nutritional sciences at University of California at Los Angeles, said she didn't know of "any nutritional advantage to raw milk."

"It's true that pasteurization does destroy some vitamin C," she said, "but milk isn't a very good source of it anyway."

She said raw milk advocates talk about the destruction of enzymes, "but they don't say which ones they are. All enzymes are destroyed in the digestive tract, in any case."

As for the safety of drinking unpasteurized milk, Dr. Alfin-Slater said, "I think it's chancy. I wouldn't drink it unless I knew the cow personally, and maybe not even then."

Alta-Dena spokesman Paul Virgin said the extra cleanliness and closer watch on the health of its cows protects the health of its customers. It also accounts for the higher price of raw milk—about four cents a quart extra in southern California, somewhat more in other areas.

An independent laboratory tests the raw milk daily, and the dairy's own veterinarians inspect the cows periodically. The suspected brucellosis was found by Alta-Dena veterinarians, although a dairy spokesman said no brucellosis organisms were found when autopsies were performed on the cows in question.

The dairy has backed its contentions in a damage suit against the county health department.

Losing Faith

Brokers' Failure Disturbs London

LONDON (Reuter) The recent collapse of two London brokerage houses has raised some sharp questions about the effectiveness of stock exchange procedure for ensuring the solvency of its members.

No details have been released of the circumstances which led to the failure of the two medium-sized firms—Mitton Butler Priest and Chapman and Rowe.

But an indication of the exchange's concern about the financial health of its members was provided by its decision to ask brokers to submit details of their clients' loan accounts to its auditors.

The reason for this decision was a growing tendency by brokers to act not just as middlemen but also as money-lenders for their clients.

In theory, there is no reason why a stockbroker should get into serious financial trouble if he sticks to his basic business, which is to pass on stock and share from seller to buyer and earn a commission for his pains.

Against these earnings, the broker should then only have to set his expenses-rental for his office, staff salaries and general overhead.

But lately some stockbrokers have been tempted to aim increasingly for higher rewards, not only by buying and selling shares on their own account but also by acting as financiers for their clients.

Stock exchange regulations permit brokers to allow clients whatever latitude they desire before demanding payment for shares.

A common practice is for brokers to offer considerable credit to selected clients. The broker will buy shares for a client and finance him by borrowing from a bank, lodging the shares with the bank as security.

This practice both attracts more business to the broker and enables him to make money by charging higher interest to the client than what he has to pay the bank.

Difficulties can arise when, as in recent months, share prices fall sharply. The value of the security held by the bank falls accordingly and may need an infusion of additional funds to match the outstanding debt.

This can leave the lender exposed unless he enforces strict "margin" requirements on his client. Unlike the federal reserve board in the United States, the London Stock Exchange does not stipulate minimum margin requirements.

The flexibility of its rules is often justified by the unlimited personal liability of individual brokers for their debts. When a brokerage house is declared to be in default, the exchange's "official assignee" moves in and obtains powers to dispose as he wishes of the personal property of the directors or partners.

Egg Booklet Overestimates Vitamins

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont (CP) — The egg on the face of Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan may not supply 12 per cent of his daily vitamin D needs.

The minister conceded as much when he was challenged over some information contained in an Agriculture Canada booklet about the nutritional value of eggs.

The statement, eagerly copied and distributed on handy yellow cards by the newly-formed Ontario Egg Marketing Board, said two Grade A large eggs supply 24 per cent of man's daily vitamin D requirements.

The United States National Academy of Sciences recommends a daily intake of 400 International units of vitamin D, regardless of age or physical condition. So two eggs must contain 96 units of the stuff, right?

Well, not necessarily. Mr. Whelan wrote in reply to a Sault Ste. Marie Star reporter who questioned the figure. An egg may contain from nine to 90 units, depending on the feed of the hen.

Diving for Logs Is His Job

His quarry is the sinker—the log that noses to the bottom because of a density heavier than water.

Mr. Maggs, 30, dives to the bottom and feels his way across the murky mat until he encounters a log. Next, he chains a white vinyl and nylon flotation bag to the log, which he fills with air from an auxiliary hose and air gun fed from his breathing tank.

Inflated, the bags have a buoyancy factor of about 100 pounds each. That's generally all it takes to raise a sinker to the surface, although some of the bigger logs require two flotation bags.

Mr. Maggs, 30, of Fraser Burrard Diving Ltd., is a 10-year veteran of underwater industrial work. Salvaging logs from the bottom of the muddy Fraser is becoming a regular feature of MacMillan Bloedel Ltd.'s Canadian White Pine division.

"Right now it's so black down there you can't see a thing," said Mr. Maggs, who spends shifts of up to 45 minutes each an hour scouring the bottom of the booming yard 20 feet down looking for logs.

"When the Fraser really clears up I can sometimes see about two feet, but during the spring runoff that doesn't happen very often."

Mr. Maggs estimates he can float about 15 logs an hour to the surface—logs that would otherwise be lost or have to await salvage during twice-yearly dredging of the booming yard.

Bill St. John, manager of the division, said initial experiments this spring worked so well that underwater logging will become a regular feature of the division.

"We pay for the logs and if we lose them through sinkage it costs us money," said Mr. St. John. "With a diver we get those logs back. The system works quite well and we plan to continue with it."

Mr. St. John said most of the sinkers are the dense hemlock and balsam logs.

When a bundle is broken open on arrival at Canadian White Pine, a small percentage of the logs sink to the bottom, safely inside the booming area where they pose no threat to deepsea or river traffic. These are the logs Mr. Maggs brings to the surface.

Booming area foreman Bill Young said it took Mr. Maggs only four days to float all the sinkers to the surface in the first trial of underwater logging. He estimated that Mr. Maggs salvaged about 80 logs from the river mud and saved the company about $2,500.

Realtors Foresee Trouble

OTTAWA (CP) — A Canadian Real Estate Association spokesman said Wednesday that passage of proposed competition legislation would mean the real estate industry would have to be restructured.

Albert Flah of Guelph, Ont., chairman of the association's competition policy committee, told the Senate banking committee the association believes implementation of the bill would have the following effect:

—The multiple listing service, whereby real estate agencies jointly list properties to advertise the sale, would become illegal.

—Real estate boards, which are local associations of real estate agents and which set local fee schedules, would become illegal.

—Standard commission rates set now by local boards would be banned;

—The practice of requiring real estate agents to meet certain minimum standards in knowledge of industry practices as a condition of being licensed would be barred.

Mr. Flah said another area of association concern is the provision in the bill on advertised prices. This section appeared to disallow the possibility of a seller accepting a higher price when there is bidding above listed price for a property.

Allmand Doubts RCMP Bargaining Possible

MONTREAL (CP) — Solicitor-General Warren Allmand says he does not believe RCMP officers can produce a workable plan for a bargaining unit for the force.

Citing the Public Service Act which prohibits RCMP members from forming unions and going on strike, Mr. Allmand said Wednesday:

"The problem is that sometimes organizations that bargain on salaries and work conditions without the right to strike, well, sometimes they strike anyway."

Although officers pressing for some kind of bargaining unit for the force have said they do not want the right to strike, Mr. Allmand said in an interview that the very possibility, however remote, of strike action raises a definite obstacle to the union plan.

Mr. Allmand also said those active in seeking a bargaining unit "haven't really made up their minds what they want yet," but his department will take seriously any proposal officers come up with. He said he is aware legitimate problems exist.

British Industry Saved from Chaos

LONDON (Reuter) — British industry resumed to full production today after being pulled back from the brink of chaos by settlement of a national strike by 1.2 million engineering workers.

But it was still a mystery who the anonymous businessmen were who ended the strike after 24 hours by paying £62,000 ($152,000) into court to cover compensation and legal costs the engineering union had refused to pay.

"Who bailed Britain out?" asked The Sun, one of seven national daily newspapers which had been unable to publish Wednesday because the engineers had walked out.

The payment, through a lawyer, was made to the Industrial Relations Court, which had ordered seizure of the engineering union's assets.

The assets were seized to enforce payment of compensation to a manufacturing company which had been closed by an earlier strike of the engineers. The court had ruled the strike illegal.

The government is moving a bill through Parliament to abolish the Industrial Relations Court.

Speculation was rife as to who wrote the cheque. Employment Minister Michael Foot said:

"It was not the government. Whoever they were, they were acting in the interests of the national economy and I think they have deserved our thanks."

Thurlow Will Not Pay In Parkland Purchase

By AL ZARAS
Staff Reporter

In a close 3-2 vote Wednesday, Thurlow township defeated a motion calling for the township to contribute $10,029 toward the purchase of the 340-acre Potter property in Sidney township, north of Belleville.

The $770,000 property has been proposed as a greenbelt-trailer park by the Moira River Conservation Authority. The purchase price is spread across three benefiting municipalities — Belleville ($161,882), and Thurlow and Sidney townships ($19,029 each). The authority picks up $19,030 while the province provides the remainder over a three-year period.

After close to two hours of lukewarm debate, council turned down the authority's request for township participation.

In defeating the motion, councillors reiterated arguments heard during the approximate three months council has delayed action. However, when the final vote came, councillors still showed reluctance in defeating the motion.

Having cast the deciding vote, Reeve Ernest Casey said: "Capital costs are too high and the maintenance cost will run you out of house and home.

County Court Docket Heavy

There are a total of 11 charges on the docket for the spring sitting of Hastings County Court.

The court list, released yesterday by the county Court Registrar's office, lists the criminal cases that will be tried before County Court Judge W. S. Lane starting Monday, May 13th.

The list includes: one charge of rape, one charge of inflicting bodily harm on Narcotics Control Act, one charge of indecent assault on a female, one charge of robbery, one weapons possession charge, one charge of forcibly confining a female, one charge of assault with intent to commit an indictable offence, two charges of assault causing bodily harm and two charges of assault.

Court officials say that they expect the criminal cases to take up to two weeks of the court's time.

An extensive list of civil cases that will be tried before Judge Lane following the completion of the criminal work has yet to be drawn up but will be released in the future.

Tender Accepted

Thurlow council accepted the $7,540 tender price of Canuffton Ford Sales Ltd. Ford tractor and sidemounted cutter bar mower Wednesday.

The tender, one of only two received that complied with tender specifications, was accepted subject to Ministry of Transportation and Communications approval.

Delivery of the gas-powered tractor is expected in 16 weeks. The automatic transmission mower is almost immediately available from the Canadian dealer.

Township costs break down as follows: tractor, $6,095; mower, $1,460, and provincial sales tax, $85.85. The 1963 Massey Ferguson tractor will be traded in for $400.

Cemetery Site Selected

SOPHIASBURGH — The Roulier Cemetery in Sophiasburgh has been selected by the township's cemetery board as the site for the municipality graveyard.

Sophiasburgh township council has approved a $3,000 grant to assist the board in its cemetery project.

Store Helps Arena Fund

"In view of the revenue we've lost (withdrawal of Canada Cement LaFarge Ltd. as assessment), and the freeze on commercial development, I don't believe we can afford it.

"We have an ambitious program in our own township. I don't believe we will benefit from the park."

Originally, Thurlow gave the project approval in principle.

At that time, however, Reeve Casey claimed council understood all authority-participating municipalities would pay part of the $770,000 price tag.

"I was very disgusted with the authority coming down here and saying that price for it," said the reeve. "I don't think developers could have paid for it."

Coming out in strong opposition to the project, councillor George Best said: "No way can we, as a council, take that kind of money and take it out of the township. I think we need too much in our municipality to give this money for the Potter property."

Councillors Beer and Don McKeown opposed the motion while councilor Walter Hamilton and deputy reeve Garnet Denyes voted "aye". Reeve Casey came out in opposition.

In acting as seconder to councillor Hamilton's motion to approve the expenditure, deputy reeve Denyes said he was forcing the issue to a vote. "I'll was hanging fire," he said.

After the motion's defeat, councillors speculated that the property would likely still be purchased by the other two municipalities.

Big Tax Loss Hits Township

Thurlow township coffers will be less hefty in 1974 with the loss of tax dollars from Canada Cement LaFarge Ltd., a plant that moved to Bath from Point Anne last year.

Assessment from plant property just east of Pt. Anne has dropped by $400,000 from $1,320,300. This year, with the majority of buildings unoccupied, the property is assessed under "vacant commercial designation."

When the plant was in operation in 1973, the township received 12.6 per cent of the plant's total tax bill of $164,854. The remainder was split between Hastings County and the county board of education.

Clair Horton, Thurlow treasurer, said today the township's $19,835 share of Canada Cement tax dollars made up approximate 17 per cent of the township's entire tax receipts last year.

With only a $400,000 assessment on plant property in 1974, tax revenue is severely decreased. To complicate matters, said Mr. Horton, the plant is being torn down this year.

Since buildings are assessed separately, the company will receive a tax rebate each time one is torn down.

Speaking to council Wednesday, Mr. Horton said the amount of taxes the company will pay in 1974 is unclear.

Council members feel that approximately 50 per cent will be returned to the township as buildings are razed through the course of the year. Councillors agree that the exact amount of the "probable rebate" is an unknown factor.

Province Investigating Sewer Service Costs

Ministry of Environment officials are proceeding with an analysis of costs Thurlow ratepayers can expect when sewer services are brought into the township from the previously owned Belleville sewage treatment plant, council was informed by letter Wednesday.

Analysis and appropriate bylaws can be expected within two or three months, said Ministry of Environment manager P. J. Crabtree in the letter.

Existing sewer service proposals call for the township to pay costs of a trunk sewer extension from Adam St. in Belleville. The city would have no control over proposed mains as negotiations would take place only between Thurlow and the province.

However, township negotiations for water would strictly be between the city and Thurlow. Although the ministry advised council it would help in talks, it asked. Considerations of water costs and volume of flow would be left to the two municipalities.

Belleville has already agreed in principle to provide the township water.

Negotiations are currently under way to decide the terms of a Belleville water services trade-off for Thurlow land east of the city. The city will consider recently amended township resolutions, permitting annexation of Thurlow land, at next week's council meeting.

Driver Hurt In Collision

A Stirling man, Eric Barry Hubble, 32, was treated for an injured right arm and released from Belleville General Hospital yesterday morning after the car he was driving collided with another vehicle on Hanna Street at the entrance to the Simpsons — Sears warehouse.

Police Chief Douglas Crosbie said that Hubble's eastbound car collided with a westbound auto driven by Ronald E. Foster, 23, of 202 Albert Street, at 8:35 a.m.

Recreation Gets $2,500

Thurlow council has allotted $2,500 for use by the township recreation committees in the various projects this year — among them, the improvement of Hamilton Park. The 1974 budget allocation enables a $600 increase over the 1973 figure.

Council approved the sum Wednesday following a request from township clerk-treasurer Clare Horton.

The 1974 allocation will be included in the township's budget, expected to be brought before council May 22.

The Shaw Must Go On

Tonight's the night Belleville audiences will be able to see a presentation of the Shaw Festival without travelling to Niagara-on-the-Lake. At 8 p.m. at Centennial Secondary School, the Festival's touring company will present The Devil's Disciple. Yesterday the production crew arrived in the city to set things up. Wardrobe mistress, Mary Ann Wilson, looks over one of the costumes that will be worn by an actress tonight.

Fair Time Again

The Spring version of the Quinte Exhibition starts tomorrow. But before the fair can officially open, a lot of preparation is needed to get everything ready. Carnival workers of Conklin shows, who are putting on the midway, arrived in town Sunday night and for the past few days have been assembling midway rides. Here workers put together what will be the roller coaster when they are finished.

Tories Have Organization Jump

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

That's where the summer '74 election campaigned Wednesday night sees the Conservatives hold the edge where it counts most at this earliest stage of campaigning in the two major Quinte ridings.

But their major opponents don't publicly admit to so much worry.

What has to be disposed of first is the search and the time-consuming ritual of nomination of candidates.

Heare's where the Tories are one up.

In Hastings, Jack Ellis, Conservative incumbent already has the decks cleared. He was nominated last October at a convention in Madoc — long before the current crisis ending in parliament's dissolution. This means Mr. Ellis can concentrate immediately on personal campaigning.

In Prince Edward — Hastings, while Conservative George Hess has yet to be officially endorsed, the nomination is a formality. But the key national party figure has kept a high profile throughout the riding in the 13 months since the 1972 election that reduced the Liberals to a minority and sowed the seeds that have now blossomed into a general election.

Both the Liberals and New Democrats — underdogs in a Tory power bastion — have yet to ideally possible candidates, much less organize conventions.

But they don't indicate concern. Major local spokesmen for both organizations indicate they're not concerned about having to clear the campaign trail of much here-a-tore before starting to march.

Both Charles Bates, Tyendinaga township farmer who is Liberal co-ordinator for all ridings from Toronto to the Quebec border, figures candidates can be endorsed within three weeks. That leaves five weeks campaigning — sufficient in a time of smooth and instant communications — to be effective.

Richard Williams, NDP Hastings president, and George Cunningham, Highbanking Liberal in the Hesseltrd territory, agree. These days, they say, protracted campaigning can be a detraction — wearying for candidates, public and — most important — campaign workers.

As for candidates, Mr. Williams says the NDP have "two very likely" standard bearers in both Hastings and Prince Edward Hastings.

He expects they will confirm their intentions by the week's end. Both have been "sort of thinking about it" and the dissolution would provide the stimulus needed for decisions.

Mr. Bates meantime says a campaign committee has been quietly active for the past year canvassing prospective candidates.

A "number of people" were approached — but some were reluctant to make commitments until the day of decision — with dissolution — arrived.

Now, a convention will likely be called within three weeks.

"That leaves us a five-week campaign — and that's long enough these days," he says.

What the committee has focussed on is a "fresh face" candidate — "someone who hasn't been a candidate before" although active in lesser levels of government, in provincial or local party executive affairs.

Mr. Cunningham, who unsuccessfully challenged Mr. Hees in 1968 and 1972, is president of the Quinte-District Liberal Association — an organizational group coordinating work in Quinte provincial and federal ridings.

He also figures a convention in three weeks, and adds: "At the present time I'm still a potential candidate."

Doug Whitley, Conservative president for Prince Edward — Hastings, says a convention date must be struck by the party executive, after consulation with Mr. Hees.

The nomination process would be speeded up if a newcomer were to be designated the candidacy.

But, he points out — Mr. Hees, first elected to the riding in 1968 after holding neighboring Northumberland before an electoral-districts boundaries switch — has been active throughout the riding between times spent in Ottawa — safeguarding home fences.

"In George's case he pounds away," he said.

But all party organizations might well envy the apparently amoebic relations organizational activity of the Ellis camp. Not only did they get nomination rituals over months ago, but, revealed Mr. Ellis in an interview from Ottawa following Wednesday night's dissolution vote, all the trappings of public campaigning — signs and posters some in safekeeping from the 1972 election — are already prepared.

This weekend he'll be ready to call a conference of key workers.

"The trappings already are made — we're all ready to go," he says.

How Close This Time?

What price predictions?

It's not certain if Jack Ellis will take that, but, after the October 1972 election that returned a minority Liberal government, Jack Ellis, the Conservative Hastings MP, forecast the next election around June 1974. He held that through various crises that predicted elections only weeks away in ensuing months.

Now, it turns out, with Wednesday's dissolution of parliament, he was fairly close. The election will be early in July.

So, what about predictions on the results of the summer '74 campaign?

Mr. Ellis is predicting his party will secure 136-135 seats, just a bare working majority.

They'll be picked up in Ontario, central Canada and from the NDP in British Columbia. Quebec gains may be "very few."

Mr. Ellis arrived back in Ottawa barely in time for the crucial Wednesday night vote that brought down the Liberal government. Tuesday night he flew to Toronto to participate in a parliamentary prayer breakfast entrained for Belleville, then drove to the Commons, making it back by 5.30 p.m. — just 30 minutes before the upset vote.

Liberals To Meet

PICTON — The Prince Edward-Lennox Liberal Association will hold its annual meeting, Saturday, May 11, at the County Centre in Picton.

The meeting, beginning at 8 p.m., will be followed by a dance in the arena hall.

It's Evensong

PICTON — Evensong and a recital featuring St. Bart's choirboys will be held Thursday, May 9, at the Church of St. Mary Magdalene.

Services will begin at 7:30 p.m. and members of all faith are welcomed to hear the visiting choir.

Children Set Nuisance Fires

Belleville firefighters were called out to fight three minor fires yesterday — two of which were deliberately set by children.

At 4:18 p.m. yesterday, firefighters from the Number One fire hall on Dundas East were called out to extinguish a grass fire that had been set by igniting straw in a ditch near the Bell Rd Motel on Dundas Street East.

At 6:36 p.m. the firefighters were called out to fight a bonfire that had been set in the middle of a pile of garbage bales in the small lakeside park behind the Belleville General Hospital.

The final fire alarm of the day was turned in at approximately 8:23 p.m. when fire broke out in a garbage unit in the back of the Belleville Collegiate Institute and Vocational School.

The fire at BCI was the fourth major garbage fire in the city in recent weeks.

Several weeks ago, children set three fires in the garbage bin at the back of the Loblaws store on Pinnacle Street.

Draw Delayed

The draw on the Ontario Humane Society's $10,000 lottery has been postponed until June 15.

The draw for the lucky winner was to have been made May 10 at London, Ont., during the annual general meeting of the society. However, because the mail strike delayed return of tickets to headquarters, the draw has been delayed. It will be held during the open house of the Scarborough branch of the society.

Hydro Hearings Delayed

The Seaforth hearings concerning the route of the proposed high tension hydro line between the Lennox generating station and Oshawa area have been deferred for two weeks.

The two-week deferment was granted at the, opening of the scheduled hearings in Port Hope on Wednesday.

The new dates for the hearings are Port Hope, May 21, 22 and 24, and for Belleville May 28, 30 and 31.

Also, if necessary, evening meetings will be held June 4, 6 and 7 at Port Hope and June 11, 13 and 14 in the Belleville area.

The evening meetings would be for farmers who, because of spring work programs, may be unable to attend the regularly scheduled meetings.

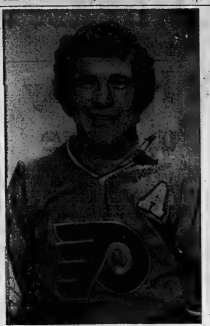
Bill Langstaffe, vice-president of the Hastings County Federation of Agriculture, who attended yesterday's Port Hope meeting, said the two-week deferment is not what farmers wanted but would give them some time to prepare briefs.

The Federation had asked for a deferment until July, while many of the farmers attending Wednesday's meeting in Port Hope wanted newspaper hearings after the year's crop was harvested.

Jean May, county federation president agreed that the two-week deferment was not what had been hoped but said it was better "than a kick in the teeth".

Mr. Langstaffe said that the three township committees from Sidney, Thurlow and Tyendinaga, would meet tonight at Sidney township hall to discuss planning of briefs to the Solandt commission.

The Hastings Federation of Agriculture and the farmers concerned feel there is no justification for the choice of the proposed hydro route which would cut across prime land in the three southern townships.



They feel the route should be further north.

At yesterday's meeting in Port Hope, hydro officials in their presentation set out why it was necessary for the hearings to be held in May.

But the federation feels Hydro deliberately held up announcement of its choice of route for the hydro line so as to make it difficult for farmers busy with seeding operations to present their case.

Terminology Inaccurate

It was incorrectly stated in the Wednesday May 8 edition of The Intelligencer that the executive director of Belleville's United Community Services was disinfluenced from his post. In fact, he resigned.

Joe Watson — Orr the Key

Bruin Heavies Tough to Move

BOSTON (CP) — When Joe Watson made the National Hockey League for good in 1966-67, he was partnered with another rookie defenceman — Bobby Orr.

In June, 1967, he was drafted by Philadelphia Flyers from Boston Bruins and, for the last seven years, has been trying to figure a way of stopping his former partner. The 30-year-old native of Smithers, B.C., admits there is no easy solution.

He gets another chance tonight when the Bruins play host to the Flyers in the second game of the best-of-seven Stanley Cup final starting at 7:30 p.m. EDT. The game will be televised by the CBC.

Boston took the first game 3-2 when Orr scored with 22 seconds remaining in the third period.

Watson said Wednesday it is impossible to compare the current Bruins with the team he played for eight years ago.

"I think the last year I played for the Bruins we finished the season with 11 rookies in the lineup. Since then they've made some good trades.

"But for seven years now I've been playing against them, and I can't count the times when Orr has been the guy who really beat us."

Watson said Orr is the key to the Bruins' power play. "but you can't key on him entirely because a guy like Carol Vadnais shoots a hell of a puck when he's out there."

"Their power play is devastating."

He said it's a tougher chore to move some of the Boston heavyweights such as Phil Esposito, Ken Hodge and Wayne Cashman, than it was members of New York Rangers.

"Here's little me trying to move those big guys," he said.

"It wasn't hard with the Rangers because they didn't jam in front of the net, but when his younger brother Jimmy, also a defenceman, joined the Flyers after a year with Richmond Robins of the American Hockey League. The younger Watson, 21, was the Flyers' third choice in the 1972 amateur draft.

Jimmy found himself in hot water Tuesday night when he was given a game misconduct for joining a fight as third man. Coach Fred Shero said Wednesday he has added a $100 levy of his own to the league's automatic levy of that amount against the rookie.

Shero said Flyers who are third man in escape a fine from the coach only if a team-mate had already been disposed of by his opponent.

Meanwhile, Shero said he had been busy working on some new formations "when they (the Bruins) have the puck in our zone."

Signs with Edmonton

Plante in Comeback Bid

EDMONTON (CP) — Edmonton Oilers announced Wednesday the signing of goalie Jacques Plante, seven-time Vezina Trophy winner, now seeking to make a comeback at age 45.

The World Hockey Association club also signed a pair of young defencemen from the National Hockey League, Barry Leaf of Los Angeles Kings and Ray McKay of California Seals.

But Plante got most of the attention at a news conference called to make the announcements.

Plante resigned Saturday as general manager and coach of Quebec Nordiques of the WHA although he had nine years left on his $60,000-a-season contract which also included an apartment and a car.

Terms of Plante's contract were not announced.

Plante declined to predict how many games he will play next season but suggests as many as 50 are possible with proper rest between outings.

When Plante abandoned Boston Bruins for an executive, non-playing job in Quebec last season, coach Harry Sinden said he had been counting on the goalie for 30 games.

Plante was confident that age won't ruin his comeback. His is the same age as another 45-year-old who made a successful comeback in hockey — Gordie Howe.

Jacques Plante

Riders Sue Jack Gotta

OTTAWA (CP) — Ottawa Rough Riders of the Canadian Football League are suing former coach Jack Gotta and the Birmingham entry in the new World Football League.

Rider general manager Frank Clair confirmed reports Wednesday that litigation had begun but he declined comment.

"It's in the hand of our lawyers right now . . . and I'm not at liberty to disclose the details of the suit," he said.

Gotta, who led the Riders to Grey Cup in 1973, jumped to the WFL earlier this year.

Hershey scored twice in the final period on goals by Don Selling and Terry Ewanuik to clinch the victory. Providence scored with less than two minutes remaining on a goal by Brian Marchinko.

It was the 16th Calder Cup for the Bears who played before 3,702 fans.

Brighton, United and Parsons Post BQSA Wins

Play in the Bay of Quinte Soccer Association got rolling in earnest last night with action on three fronts.

Posting wins were the new Brighton entry, Belleville United and Belleville Parsons.

Putting the accent on youth, with all but three of its players drawn from East Northumberland Secondary School, Brighton blanked Trenton Spartacus, another newcomer to the league, 3-0.

Playing at Trenton's Bain Memorial Park, Brighton put a strong effort from halfbacks Rick Vandertoorn and Bruce Mohr on the way to victory.

Cooney's also fielded heavily on young players. The majority of its players attend Bayside Secondary School.

The young Bayside team carried the play to United in the first half, opening a 1-0 lead with an early goal by forward Wayne Haggart who converted a perfect cross from Tony Velistra.

Batista Zanette equalized for United, sending a high shot out of the reach of Cooney goalkeeper Glenn White. Joe Almeida got the ball to Zanette.

United began to take command after the interval and was rewarded with the winning goal when Gord Kelly found the mark after taking a pass from Zanette.

The Bayside team had its chances in the second half but alert goalkeeping by 18-year-old Robin, Ryan in his first season of organized soccer, held Cooney's off.

Haggart missed an excellent chance to fire his second goal of the game when he shot wide with nothing but open space between him and the United net.

Delisar stopped Parsons on numerous occasions, many very dangerous situations to keep his team in the game all the way.

Rick Hurst played a good game in the Parsons net, recording the shutout, although not having as much work as Delisar.

Brian Preston and Phil Mc-Sherry were outstanding in the centre positions for Parsons, making several key defensive plays when CFB did get untracked.

An Anxious Moment

Goalkeeping can have its anxious moments and when you're a rookie, things get especially trying. Belleville United's Robin Ryan, playing his first season of organized soccer, appears to be climbing teammate Steve Ormsby's back. The important thing is Ryan tips the ball over the crossbar. Ormsby appears quite concerned about it all. But he needn't have worried. Ryan proves he can do it with his eyes shut. The United goalkeeper played a strong game in his team's 2-1 Bay of Quinte Soccer Association win over Cooney's Haulage of Bayside, Wednesday night at Trenton Centennial Park.

A Night for Refugees

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The National League is the hitters' league, right?

Don't tell that to a couple of refugees from the American League.

Their names are John Curtis and Jim Lonborg—although a lot of hitters are probably calling them by more picturesque names.

Curtis silenced Cincinnati's potent bats with a three-hitter Wednesday night, hurling St. Louis Cardinals to a 2-0 triumph over the Reds.

Lonborg, former American League Cy Young award winner, held San Diego Padres to two singles in pitching Philadelphia Phillies to a 4-0 victory.

In other National League baseball games, New York Mets beat San Francisco Giants 4-2, Los Angeles Dodgers defeated Montreal Expos 6-3 and Houston Astros topped Pittsburgh Pirates 8-6 in 12 innings. Atlanta at Chicago was rained out.

Curtis allowed only Andy Kosco's third-inning double and singles by Johnny Bench in the fourth and seventh. Reggie Smith, meanwhile, managed to get two hits of his own for St. Louis. And they were big ones—run-scoring doubles in the sixth and eighth innings.

Smith played for Boston Red Sox in the American League last year. That's where Curtis and Lonborg used to pitch.

He led the Padres to singles by John Grubb in the fourth inning and Willie McCovey in the seventh.

Larry Bowa's triple and Mike Schmidt's grounder gave him a third-inning run, doubles by Bob Boone and Dave Cash made it 2-0 in the seventh and Bill Robinson drove in the final two runs with a homer in the eighth.

Jon Matlack pitched a four-hitter for the Mets—one of the hits a Bobby Bonds homer—and Jerry Grote and Felix Millan drove in two runs apiece to beat San Francisco.

Matlack struck out 12, his major league career high.

New York got three of its runs in the — walks and Millan's single. In the sixth the Mets got one more run on singles by Rusty Staub, Ken Boswell and Grote.

Steve Garvey hit a two-run double in a four-run first inning that gave Andy Messersmith all the runs he needed to turn back Montreal.

Home runs by Ron Cey in the fifth and Jimmy Wynn in the seventh gave the Dodgers their other runs. Ron Fairly hit a two-run homer for the Expos.

Dave Parker put Pittsburgh on top in the top of the 12th with a solo homer—but Doug Rader unloaded a three-run shot in the bottom of the inning to vault the Astros past the Pirates.

Mayberry Heeds Manager's Advice

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Kansas City slugger John Mayberry didn't have to call his own shot Wednesday night against Ferguson Jenkins. His manager did it for him.

"Just before John went up to the plate, I cautioned him about trying to pull Jenkins' sliders and curves down the line," said Jack McKeon. "I told him just to aim for the 370-foot sign . . . and that is where the ball went."

Mayberry's homer, a two-run shot in the eighth inning, carried over the 370-foot sign in right field and gave the Royals a 4-2 victory over Texas Rangers, snapping Jenkins' personal five-game win streak and extending the Rangers' losing streak to four.

Elsewhere in American League baseball, Boston Red Sox blanked New York Yankees 4-0; Oakland Athletics whipped Baltimore Orioles 7-1; Detroit Tigers and Indians downed California Angels 3-2 in 11 innings. The Chicago-Detroit and Minnesota-Milwaukee games were rained out.

Mayberry's homer, his fifth of the year, snapped a 2-2 tie. Rookie George Brett hit another homer off Jenkins in the seventh and Mike Hargrove had a two-run homer for Texas.

Quick! Hand Me the Fishing Rod

By ALAN TEEWORTH
Sports Staff

Angling is alive and well and booming in the Quinte area, and that's no fish story, either.

According to Bob Bland, proprietor of Bob's Sport and Repair, one of the centres for local anglers, despite the cold spring, the overall success of the first few days of the 1974 fishing season has been excellent.

One of the main reasons for the outlook in the area is the catching of trout in the Moira River, and within walking distance of downtown Belleville at that!

Rainbow trout, some weighing in at up to four and one-half to five pounds, have been taken both above and below Lemoy's Dam.

The running of the trout are the result of planting of the fish in Lake Ontario some four years ago by Department of Lands and Forests officials. The fish have now found their way back up the bay, and consequently the Moira to do their spawning, also insuring future catches, and also indicating the cleaning up of the river, in comparison to the past few years.

Reports have anglers coming from as far as Kingston to fish the Moira, a rare sight in past years.

In the East and West Lakes areas, fishing has not been as it has been in past years, apparently due to the cold weather. Pickerel fishing in particular has been hit hard, with many anglers returning having caught nothing but cobs.

Pike have no preference for weather conditions, though, with some excellent catches reported. Wellington's government dock has been a good supplier of the fish, with one local man, Don Parks of Carrollton, bringing back a 21-pounder taken from the end of the dock.

In the bay itself, pike are excellent also. Mosquito Bay and Pete's Point areas are among the better areas producing.

In the Algonquin region, anglers have been hampered by unexpected snow, up to six inches in some parts of the bush. Belleville area fishermen returning indicate little or no fishing being done due to the extremely cold temperatures for the time of year.

Fishing season for most varieties opens in all regions of Southern Ontario this weekend, including above the Number One Dam at Trenton.

Bland expects the success to grow even more when the weather turns warmer, with an excellent season most certainly in store for Quinte area fishermen.

BISL Season Opens Monday

"Play ball" will echo over diamonds in the city Monday.

That's the day the 13-team Belleville Industrial Softball League swings into action.

Three more games are on tap Tuesday night. Constellation vs Canadian Tire at Prince Charles; Quinte Mall Leaders play Post Office at Sir Mackenzie Bowell and CNR faces The Intelligencer at CNRA Park.

League play continues with a single game, Wednesday, three on Thursday and a twin bill Friday.

The Belleville and District Umpires Association plans to be ready for next week's busy schedule.

Umpire in chief Gerald Murphy will have his officials out for a final briefing, Friday night. Murphy has called the get together for 7 p.m. at Alemite Park.

All Three Teams Are in the Hunt

CALGARY (CP) — Quebec and against. Quebec will be the Remparts threw the Memorial home team Friday and Regina Cup playoff wide open again Wednesday night, defeating Regina Pats 8-3 before a crowd of 7,140 to force a sudden-death game Friday night.

The Remparts, shooting more and skating harder than in a dismal opening-game loss to St. Catharines Black Hawks, broke the game open with third period goals by Jean Gagnon and Rich Nantais.

The victory gave Quebec an opportunity Friday to avenge hard a 7-1 loss to the Hawks. The winner will meet Regina Sanday night in a final game, also sudden-death, to be televised the second period, came from nationally by the CTV.

"I expected a rougher game but it didn't work out like that," said Quebec coach Marc Pelletier. "I knew we could play better, we had to play better and we can play better."

The Pats got caught off guard in the first few moments while Dan Beaulieu and Guy Chouinard connected for the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League champions. The other Quebec goal, which tied the score 3-3 in the second period, came from Richard Perron, a low flip shot that trickled off the glove of Regina goaltender Ed Stahlewski.

Goalie Lifts Bears

OTTAWA (CP) — Coaches of the Smiths Falls Bears and Sudbury Steelers agreed about one thing Wednesday night—Bears' goalie Fraser Greenwood played "a great game" as they defeated the Steelers 3-0 in their first win in the Centennial Cup junior hockey final.

The Steelers now lead the best-of-seven national final 2-1 with the next game scheduled here Friday night.

"I wanted to play so badly," Steelers' coach Don Robertson opened the scoring for the Bears at 11:24 of the opening period on a powerplay drive from inside the goalmouth by Gerry Sellkirk blueline.

"So when I got the chance I knew I had to prove myself," Smiths Falls coach Glen McKenney put Greenwood into the nets after Rocky Menard, acquired from the Gloucester Rangers of their home Central Junior League, allowed 11 goals in the first two games of the series.

Harris said he wants Duncan to be part of the delegation that will meet with the CFL at its semi-annual meeting May 28-31 in Edmonton.

Duncan London GM

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — One of Jim Duncan's first duties as general manager of the proposed London entry in the Canadian Football League will be to seek support for granting of the franchise from clubs in the Western Football Conference.

Duncan was named to the position Wednesday by Bob Herzig, who heads a group seeking a CFL franchise for this city for 1975. Duncan coached Calgary Stampeders of the WFC to a Grey Cup victory in 1971. He was fired as head coach by the Stampeders after their fourth game last season.

CRANBROOK, B.C.—(CP) — Disputed goals worked against Barrie Flyers in the second game of the Allan Cup hockey final with Cranbrook Royals but in the fourth game Wednesday a disputed goal helped Barrie.

Barrie edged Cranbrook 5-4 in overtime to tie the best-of-seven series 2-2. Fifth game will be played here Friday night.

In the second game on Sunday, Barrie protested one Cranbrook goal, but the goal was allowed. Then the Flyers objected when the referee disallowed a Barrie goal, but the referee stuck by his decision.

Wednesday, it was Cranbrook's turn, as the Royals protested that the winning goal involved an offside pass.

Ron Robinson and Jack Smith had a two-on-one break with Robinson passing to Smith and taking a return pass to score at 3:32 of the second overtime period.

The win gave Barrie a lift, after the Ontario club had blown a 5-2 second-period lead in Tuesday's game to lose 9-5.

"We don't ordinarily play hockey like that," said Darryl Sly, Barrie's playing coach, of the Tuesday game. "We haven't really played well since we've been out here so we got together after the last game.

"We had to find out what was wrong . . . to give everybody a chance to air their views and come up with a few ideas that I think helped us tonight."

Third Stage to Meet Challenge

STRATFORD — There is a legitimate challenge to theatre in this country today, a challenge that must not be ignored says Robin Phillips, artistic director outlining the 1974 festival plans. But it is not really a new challenge, "it comes along with every generation, in every society. It is the challenge to open the doors to the new and the untried, to build on the experience of the past, to embrace the thoughts of the young and to recognize that to embrace does not necessarily mean to surrender, in short, the challenge is to act as a considered and willing connector between the past and the future. A clear voice that speaks of today. That is, actually, the essence of our job in theatre. It is possible to step with, to step aside or step back but it takes courage and sensitivity to step forward without ignoring the remarkable achievements of the past.

In terms of the works of classic theatre, Stratford achieved this aim at the outset, setting a standard by which other theatre experiences could be judged and providing audiences with new sight-lines and new perspectives. The Stratford idea was revolutionary. The stage itself was revolutionary. And the theatre experience came as a revelation. The Stratford experience forced everyone involved in theatre around the world to re-think and revise ideas which had been nurtured on the proscenium arch. Today the wheel has come full circle and the challenge lies in re-thinking the revising ideas nurtured on the experience of the past 21 years.

This is a demand on theatres across the country, not solely on the Stratford Festival. If we all put our minds and our hearts to meeting it then we can together get on with the job of creating a national theatre, not ... serving any one city or province but stretching from one end of the country to the other and making a statement that is truly Canadian."

This is what the entire theatre community must work towards. We can challenge each other, support each other and perhaps even inspire each other. And out of it all can come something of great value. But for this to happen we must all be working from the same basic premise."

Specially, plans outlined in this presentation have two main objectives: (1) Linking of the Festival's stages in terms of overall philosophy so as to dispel any ideas of a hierarchy of stages, with one enjoying status above or below another. Secondly, it is essential that each of the three stages have a separate and recognizable identity emerging naturally from within the Company rather than imposed from without.

To help achieve this aim, we will appoint a separate group of associate directors for the Festival Stage, the Avon Stage and the Third Stage. Each of the three groups will have one person at its head, who will be resident in Stratford. Other members will be in residence in Theatres across Canada. These associate directors will come primarily from outside the Festival but within the Canadian theatre community. In every case, great care will be taken to match the experience, interests and expertise of individuals appointed with the needs of the particular stage.

Each group of associate directors will consists of a director from a Canadian theatre organization outside Stratford, a designer and an actor. As artistic director, I will serve on all three panels and, initially, will head the panel of associate directors for the Avon Stage.

Michael Bawtree will head a similar group of associate directors at the Third Stage, under the title "Director-Third Stage."

New Vistas For Blacks

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In Ben Vereen's first movie, Sweet Charity, his lines consisted of "Oh, yeah" repeated three times and "Tell 'em, Daddy."

Today, Vereen is co-starring with Barbra Streisand, James Caan and Omar Sharif in Funny Lady. His stardom at 27 demonstrates anew the opportunities in show business for a new generation of black entertainers.

Ben Vereen took dancing lessons at New York's High School of the Performing Arts. His first professional job was dancing at a fashion show for $5.

Vereen worked as a dancer in the Las Vegas edition of Sweet Charity with Hallie Powers, and director Bob Fosse picked him for the film version with Shirley MacLaine. Ben's two lines came in the Sammy Davis Jr. dance number.

He played in the Los Angeles company of Hair and won a Tony nomination as Judas in the Broadway Jesus Christ Superstar. Then Bob Fosse picked him for the Leading Player in Pippin. That was a turning point.

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Friday, May 10

Aries (March 21-April 19) Be patient. Conditions will work out better for you the later it gets. A break comes from an area you'd least expect.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) An irritable situation will spur you to action you wouldn't ordinarily take. It will turn out to be a wise course to pursue.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) Others will treat you much more liberally today than they have in quite some time. It's nice to be appreciated.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) Don't overpower how someone you'll be dealing with is going to react. She will behave very fairly if given half a chance.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) That little extra effort you'll be asked to put out where work is concerned is going to pay a larger dividend than you realize.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) The early part of today is not without its stress-and-frustrations. From late afternoon on, conditions turn more to your liking.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Something with which you now are involved will be concluded to your advantage. You have more trump cards than you think.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) In a matter on which others are less well informed, try not to be too influenced by their opinion. Your views are more accurate.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Even after you meet your obligations, your checkbook shouldn't be too heavily dented. Funds will stretch further due to unusual circumstances.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Good things will be happening today. The PR brighten your outlook and give you a much more optimistic perspective.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Conditions that have an influence on your feelings of well-being and security look very promising. Keep the faith.

Pisces (Feb. 20 - March 20) You'll have much more luck at this time if you get others to go along with your ideas, rather than you with theirs.

Cause of Hives Should Be Sought

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My son has hives to an extreme degree. For some months he has been taking antihistamine and finds it relieves him for about three hours and then the hives come back.

Would taking the medicine that often hurt him? What type of doctor do you suggest who could help find the reason rather than just give him temporary relief?—Mrs. M.A.B.

The antihistamine is well known as giving relief from allergy problems, which is what hives is. The outstanding drawback to frequent and repeated use is that it will make him drowsy. You don't mention his age, but if he's a schoolboy, the drowsiness is going to bother him. If he's old enough to drive, then he certainly shouldn't do so with that medication.

You are quite right in wanting to find the cause rather than temporary relief. Whether the hives come from something he eats, or breathes, or touches, the heart of the problem is to find out exactly what thing—or things—causes the reaction. And the doctor to investigate that vital question is an allergist.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Could you explain to me what colon trouble is and what are the symptoms?—T.M.

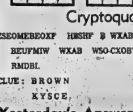
Not in any brief discussion because there are all sorts of colon trouble, ranging from mucus colitis to diverticulosis to irritable colon.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Would you discuss "keloiding." For many years I have wondered exactly what it is and why it occurs in some people and not others. Should people who keloid have their ears pierced? If not, why not?—M.G.

Not that I haven't discussed this before—but a keloid is an overgrowth of scar tissue after a wound or indision. The scar grows larger and hence more prominent.

Why this occurs to some and not others is not known, but keloids are more common in folks with dark skin—by which I do not mean black, although black people do indeed have more keloids than those with light skins.

I've warned keloid-formers to avoid ear piercing because a thickened scar can be more noticeable and in many instances can close the aperture after it has been made.



Dear Dr. Thosteson: Is it necessary that healthy people should have vitamin B-12 injections once a week or as frequently as once a month? I believe it to be more a form of habit than necessity.—Mrs. W.D.

I'll pass that question unless I have some solid evidence that it is more than habit, indeed, "healthy." I have in mind such possibilities as a patient with pernicious anemia who may appear to be healthy, kept so by B-12, but who would die without peroic B-12.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Is it possible for a female to have some type of surgery to shrink the walls of the vagina or in some way make the vagina smaller? I am in my 40s, have had several children.

Yes, it is possible, and has been done many times. You should consult a gynecologist about it.

By Oswald and James Jacoby

How would you play four spades? Of course, three no trump is a lay down, but only clairvoyant would get there.

When we watched this hand played in a team match, both declarers won the heart lead; played the ace of trumps and stopped to study when West showed out.

The first one cashed his second high heart and led the queen of clubs. He may win to force East to play diamonds for him. East obliged by playing king and another. West took his ace and led a third diamond. The ruff set the contract.

At the other table declarer thought — rightly — before playing to trick three. Then he drew trumps; cashed his second high heart and led the queen of clubs.

East won and returned a heart. South ruffed and led his jack of diamonds.

West made a valiant effort to beat the contract. He rose with the ace and led the 10. This gave South a chance to put up the queen on the theory that West had underled the king, but South simply played low.

South explained later that West, who was void of spades, would surely have made some bid if he held both ace and king of diamonds.

The bidding has been: 9

What do you do now?

Bid five diamonds. Your partner has evidently come to life. You can elect to show your first-round diamond control.

TODAY'S QUESTION

You do bid five diamonds and your partner bids five spades. What do you do now?

DIDN'T WASTE WORDS

The late drama critic Wolcott Gibbs wrote what is reported to be the shortest theatre criticism when he reviewed the farce entitled Wham! His critique consisted of the word "Ouch!"

Main Talking Point in Election Seems Certain to Be Living Costs

OTTAWA (CP) — Inflation is certain to be the main talking point in the country's 30th general election campaign.

The Progressive Conservative Party non-confidence motion that, with Conservative support, toppled Prime Minister Trudeau's government was the culmination of months of political antagonism over rising prices.

As the inflation rate rose to more than 10 per cent, sending consumer buying power, NDP support for the Liberals declined.

The two main opposition parties finally found in the 1974-75 budget the common ground on which to defeat the government Wednesday and force an election on economic issues.

But agreement that the government has performed badly on inflation is the extent of the similiarity between NDP and Conservative viewpoints. Once the campaign gets rolling, the two parties can be expected attack each other along with the Liberals.

Both disagree with the government's stand that increasing the supply of goods is the best way to keep prices down. The Liberals also have proposed anti-profiteering legislation to stop price gouging, but maintain the main cause of inflation is from abroad.

The Conservatives would attack inflation by freezing wages and prices for 90 days and follow with selective controls for up to two years.

Corporate profits are the main villain in the eyes of the NDP. They would have an excess-profits tax to keep prices down and control mortgage interest rates to bring home ownership within the working man's reach.

A two-price system on basic modities, with domestic prices lower than export prices, also will be part of the New Democrat platform. That will be a likely target for both the Conservatives and Liberals who say this would invite reprisal from Canada's trading partners.

Months of furor over inflation have pushed other issues to the background. Even the energy scare of last fall has paled by comparison.

Energy is likely to be a secondary issue at best, pitting mainly the Conservatives against the Liberals. The Conservatives are opposed to the national petroleum corporation the government planned to establish.

Liberal plans for the proposed company came after intense pressure by the NDP which, until Wednesday, propped up the government on most crucial issues.

With the Conservatives favoring private oil companies to develop western oil reserves, the energy issue may make some impact in the producing provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan and in the oil-hungry East.

The energy issue likely will also be the main battleground for any federal-provincial conflicts in the campaign. The Conservatives charge that Ottawa did not consult the producing provinces adequately on oil policy.

The national-unity issue that, along with his personal magnetism, was attributed as a major cause of Mr. Trudeau's 1968 election triumph, seems likely to have little impact on the new campaign.

However, the Liberals and Conservatives will push hard to increase their respective meagre representation in the West and in Quebec. The government had only seven seats west of Ontario following the last election, while the Conservatives go into this campaign with only two Quebec seats.

The only recent film that Quebec nationalism may be an issue came in a comment Tuesday by Mr. Trudeau that the Conservatives seem to be cozying with separatists in Quebec.

Until recent weeks, all parties, including the Conservatives were expressing approval of the efficiency of the minority government.

NDP Leader David Lewis said that, until this year, the minority government produced good legislation, and he is expected to repeat this as justification for keeping the Liberals in power so long.

Both Mr. Trudeau and Social Credit Leader Real Caouette have said the Conservatives and NDP will have to answer to the electorate for forcing an election.

The prime minister says the two parties are responsible for killing proposed legislation which will die with dissolution. Mr. Caouette claims an election now is useless because it will produce another minority government.

Whether this argument bears political fruit remains to be seen. Canadians have become used to minority rule, with more than seven years of minority administration in the last 12.

While personality politics of the 1968 variety seem unlikely in this campaign, many observers have suggested the electorate will see Mr. Trudeau running for his political life for the first time.

Steel Dearer

TORONTO (CP) — Steel Co. of Canada Ltd. said Wednesday it will increase prices on bar and plate products by an average of 11 per cent on various dates this month. The increases will cover about one-third of the company's entire production.

Oakville Youth Describes Tragedy

OAKVILLE, Ont. (CP) — A 15-year-old youth told an inquest jury Wednesday how he survived when a stolen car plunged 130 feet down a cliff into a creek, killing eight of his friends.

Then the youth, who suffered head injuries and a broken shoulder in the Feb. 25 crash, said he clambered back up the steep embankment and made his way toward his nearby home.

The inquest was into the death of Eric Harrison, 16, of Oakville whose body police testified was found on the driver's side of the front seat.

The jury ruled the death accidental, and recommended stricter security by car dealers to prevent thefts.

Police said at the time the vehicle had been stolen sometime during the weekend prior to the Monday night accident from an Oakville car dealer's lot.

Testimony by two witnesses at the inquest was that the teenagers found the car in a field on night of the accident.

Medical evidence showed there was no trace of alcohol or drugs in the body of the Harrison youth.

Dr. Peter Garrett, a pathologist, said tests indicated only one victim had drunk any alcohol, and that amounted to the equivalent of one bottle of beer at least an hour before the accident.

Boat Moved

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — An RCMP spokesman said Wednesday the only Canadian police vessel on regular patrol of the Detroit River here, the P. V. Whitehorse, is being transferred to eastern Ontario.

RCMP Inspector Trainor Fraser said orders were received last week to turn the 21-foot cruiser over to the Brockville RCMP unit.

Screams Brought No Help

KITCHENER (CP) — Tenants in an apartment building in which a 24-year-old nurse was killed heard screams early Wednesday but did not call police.

Police found the body of Joanne Anstett of Kitchener after a tenant called police to say she had seen a woman being dragged along a hallway in the building.

"Everyone on that floor heard screaming and feel badly about doing nothing," said Anne Nicholson, building superintendent.

"Everyone seemed to think the commotion was taking place out in a hallway," she said. "The way it is today you call police and they can't do anything about noise. I'm not surprised people didn't call the police."

Police would not comment on the cause of death until an autopsy has been completed.

Sign Pact

OTTAWA (CP) — A Canada-United States air agreement providing for 46 new routes by American and Canadian airlines was signed Wednesday.

Dams Opposed

WOODSTOCK (CP) — Stricter land-use controls are the most practical answer to combating floods in the plain areas of the Thames River, Paul Steinberg, an Oxford County high school teacher, said Wednesday.

Mr. Steinberg, of Woodstock, told a provincial environmental hearing board gathering public opinion on future river policies that dams are not necessarily the answer to flood control.

He criticized the planners of the Pittock dam and reservoir north of here, suggesting it might not have been necessary.

Fugitive Guilty

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Stephen Caspor, 36, of Windsor had a directed verdict of guilty of manslaughter returned against him Wednesday by an Ontario Supreme Court jury.

Caspor has been charged with non-capital murder following the shooting Oct. 16 of Victor Joseph Martin, 41, of Tilbury, Ont.

Martin's body was found the following day on the bank of a creek near Amherstburg, about 12 miles south of here. He had been shot six times.

Caspor, Martin and two others escaped from Collins Bay penitentiary, near Kingston, Oct. 13. They were arrested during a police raid on a city house Oct. 21.

PETER LOUGHEED

Alberta Studying Proposal

EDMONTON (CP) — Premier Peter Lougheed says his government is collecting information to determine whether world markets can support two petrochemical plants proposed for Alberta.

The premier said in the legislature Wednesday a great deal of information has been gathered, but he was not in a position to disclose it.

He also confirmed he has written Petrosar Ltd. suggesting that a $250-million plant it proposes to build at Sarnia, Ont., should not count on a guaranteed supply of Alberta oil as feedstock.

The premier said that Alberta's main concern is that "the maximum upgrading of resources" taken from the ground in Alberta should occur in the province.

The two plants proposed for Alberta would use natural gas for feedstock instead of oil.

Mr. Lougheed's letter said it would be unreasonable to expect Alberta to supply crude oil for the expansion of the petrochemical industry in Sarnia at the expense of developing an Alberta petrochemical industry.

"For this reason, it would appear ill-advised for you to proceed with your subject on the basis of Alberta crude as an assured source of feedstock."

Appeal Again

TIMMINS (CP) — City council has decided to launch a second appeal against a ruling by the Ontario Supreme Court that the city must open all its records, books and accounts to a Timmins law student.

Albert Ristimaki brought the action last Sept. 12 and the Ontario Supreme Court ruled in his favor Sept. 25. The city appealed the ruling but the appeal was rejected April 26 by a 2-to-1 decision of a three-member panel of the Supreme Court.

Major Issue Seems Clear

Inflation Proved Undoing of Liberal Regime

OTTAWA (CP) — Inflation caused the political execution of the minority Liberal government and threatened to be the dominant issue of the ensuing campaign.

Rising prices for food, clothing, shelter and energy, an international pattern infecting the Canadian economy as well, touched in some way each of the 13.3 million voters eligible to cast ballots two months hence.

That was about 250,000 more than on Oct. 30, 1972, when the first majority government since 1958-62 was pared to another minority.

Higher costs have not spared the election machinery itself, which may need about $6.5 million more to operate this time.

Jean-Marc Hamel, chief electoral officer, says the general election will cost about $27 million compared with $20.5 million only 18 months ago. He cites increases for paper and printing and a pay increase, to $40 a day from $28, for deputy returning officers, poll clerks and enumerators.

Inflation plagued the minority Liberal government almost from the beginning. It was the issue the opposition used to bound the government for more than a year and a stated major factor in the NDP decision to withdraw its balance-of-power support from Prime Minister Trudeau over the budget.

The opposition said the budget was not good enough to fight inflation, while the government said it was willing to fight an election on its anti-inflation policy. Inflation, 9.1 per cent in 1973, was running this year at more than 10 per cent, highest since the Korean War.

The election spotlights four politically-seasoned leaders, each of whom might be in a last campaign in that role, depending on results.

For Pierre Elliott Trudeau, 54, the election tests anew both his government's policies and his personal popularity, which declined sharply in the last campaign from the dizzy heights of 1968.

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield, who turned 60 April 11, risks his political fortune in his third attempt to oust a Liberal government.

David Lewis, whose Democratic precipitated the election needs more seats to continue moving the party down the long road to becoming an alternative to the two major parties. He turns 65 June 23 and is in his second campaign as leader.

The see-saw 1972 results, decided after some weeks of late returns and recounts, produced the thinnest margin of victory since Confederation: the popular vote of 38.5 for the Liberals to 35 per cent Conservative, 17.3 NDP, 7.6 Social Credit and 1.1 per cent other.

There were 109 Liberals, 107 Conservatives, a record-high 31 New Democrats, 15 Social Credit and two Independents.

One was Lucien Lamoureux, 53, of Cornwall, Ont., the well-respected Commons Speaker since the early 1960s who abandoned plans for political retirement to fight one more campaign.

The Conservatives lost two members late last year with the deaths of Harry Kuntz (Battle River) and Wally Nesbitt (Oxford).

Geographically, the 1972 results maintained exactly the Liberal grip on Quebec, with 56 of 74 seats to 18 Social Credit, up one, two Conservatives, down two, and an Independent.

Liberals Won 19 Confidence Votes

OTTAWA (CP) —The minority Liberal government faced and won a total of 19 confidence challenges in the 1½ years it held office before Wednesday's crucial budget vote.

Sixteen of the votes came in the first session of the 29th Parliament which opened Jan. 4, 1973, two months after the October 1972 election that stripped the Liberals of their Commons majority. The remaining three occurred in the second session which started Feb. 27 this year.

The 31-member New Democratic Party supported the government on all but four of the 19 votes. In those cases it was kept alive by support from other parties.

Twelve of the 16 first-session votes were on opposition motions worded as clear confidence tests or on government spending votes that, constitutionally, would have meant defeat if they had not carried.

The remaining four came on major bills that were considered as crucial as confidence votes. The government almost certainly would have been forced to resign if any had been defeated.

In the current session, there have been three confidence votes, all on motions by the Conservatives. The NDP has voted with the government on all three.

There were marginal Liberal gains in the Atlantic provinces, to 10 of the 32 seats from seven, and the rest stayed Conservative.

Ontario, key to the 1972 vote as an Independent, returned the majority Conservative, 88 seats. Conservatives rose to 40 from 17 and the NDP to 11 from six, with one Independent.

Liberal erosion was marked in the West, where the party had taken 27 of 62 seats in 1968 but fell to seven. Conservatives surged from 25 to 43 including all 19 Alberta seats and the NDP rose to 19 from 16.

The NDP won the Northwest Territories from the Liberals and the Conservatives held the Yukon.

It approved reductions in some federal sales, income, and corporate taxes, increased family allowances and a variety of pensions and tied such major benefits to the rising cost of living.

It renewed a five-year ban on capital punishment, banned wiretapping, approved the first election expenses controls, reduced tariffs on goods from developing countries, authorized measures to prevent aircraft hijackings and approved housing legislation to foster community planning.

The election spending legislation does not become law until July 15, so has no bearing on this campaign.

There are no rule changes. Many were made for the 1972 vote, including giving the vote to 18-year-olds for the first time and allowing fishermen, mariners, prospectors, full-time students and incapacitated persons to vote by proxy.

Those changes still apply.

One small change will be made to the ballot. Redesigned for 1972, the black and white ballot is to be improved by enlarging the white circles in which the voter makes his or her mark.

Mr. Hamel says this is being done to ensure that all voters know where to make their X or check. In 1972, there was a much higher percentage of spoiled ballots for that reason.

This might be the last time that qualified non-citizens, such as a Briton who has lived here for more than a year, will be allowed to vote. Voting rights will be extended only to citizens after June, 1975.

Any person qualified to vote can be a candidate for the Commons, if nominated. To be nominated officially, a candidate must file nomination papers signed by 25 electors before 2 p.m., local time, on nomination day.

A deposit of $200 is required and this is forfeited by candidates who do not poll 50 per cent of the votes gathered by the winning candidate.

Living Costs Index Up

Rate of Price Climb Slower During April

The April consumer price index level was 0.9 per cent higher than a year ago, which means there was a slight easing as the index dropped from monthly increases in double figures. The March year-over-year increase was 10.4 per cent.

Higher transportation and clothing costs were the leading factors as the price index rose by seven-tenths of one per cent during April. The monthly increase had been one per cent during the two previous months.

The index for food consumed in the home was down two-tenths of one per cent while that for food consumed outside the home was up 1.8 per cent.

Marked declines in beef and pork prices offset higher prices for many other food commodities.

Consumer prices for dairy products rose 4.6 per cent following produce price increases while bakery product prices gained 2.4 per cent.

Fresh vegetable prices declined 1.6 per cent but fresh fruit prices rose four-tenths of one per cent.

The transportation index gained 1.1 per cent but the average price for gasoline dropped by six-tenths of one per cent, mainly due to a lowering of provincial taxes in Alberta.

The cost of operating an automobile rose by 1.4 per cent as costs for repairs and common replacement parts went up.

Higher train and international air fares also were factors m the higher cost of travelling.

The clothing index went up by nine-tenths of one per cent, reflecting in part higher material costs.

The moderation in the food price increases during April were long overdue. The year-over-year increase in food prices was still the greatest of any of the major groups.

Food prices in April were 15.7 per cent higher than a year ago. The index of food for home consumption was up 15.3 per cent during the 15-month period

Budget Becomes Manifesto

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister John Turner's budget didn't go into the trash can following its rejection by the Commons. It is expected to be used almost intact as the Liberal fiscal manifesto for the upcoming election.

Mr. Turner announced Thursday that virtually none of the elaborate mix of budgetary proposals will be implemented. The government was defeated Wednesday on the measures, which included individual income tax cuts, savings on clothing costs, sharply higher taxes for resource companies and a bigger tax take on corporate items.

"It would be contrary to the will of Parliament if I were to change taxes as proposed in that budget," Mr. Turner told a news conference following the cabinet meeting which set the July 8 election date.

He says he intends to campaign across the country, and the approach to fighting inflation, as represented in the budget, will be a key campaign issues. Barring significant changes in the economic climate, the budget measures would be re-introduced if the Liberals are returned, he said.

The only budgetary proposal to survive was a bonus plan to bring the yield of Canada Savings Bonds up to nine per cent, a move the finance minister is authorized to make without parliamentary approval.

If the government is returned, tax measures in the budget would be made retroactive.

As with past budgets, the revenue department adjusted tax rates when the budget was introduced but went back to the old rates at 1 p.m. Thursday. Mr. Turner said there would be refunds of collections at higher rates. The department would not attempt to collect more from those taxed at lower rates.

Impeachment Inquiry Begins

House Judiciary Group Given Secret Briefing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Stocked with facts and sworn to secrecy, members of the House of Representatives judiciary committee have begun to consider evidence in its inquiry into possible impeachment of President Nixon.

During a long, closed briefing Thursday, the committee received a detailed account of events leading up to the Watergate break-in of June 17, 1972, and a thick pile of supporting facts.

Members said the staff presentation reached no conclusions and did not relate directly to any presidential conduct.

It was strictly background," said Representative John Conyers Dem.Mich.). "It was all familiar...nothing new," added Representative Don Edwards (Dem. Calif.).

Both acknowledged, however, that the information presented Thursday might links up with facts brought out in later sessions to form a pattern that would make it pertinent to the impeachment inquiry.

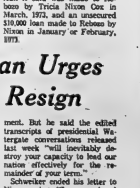
The committee is scheduled to hold three more closed sessions next week, all devoted to Watergate and the ensuing efforts to cover it up. Five other areas of presidential activity involved in the inquiry will be dealt with in following weeks.

Meanwhile, the Senate Watergate committee continued its investigation. A memorandum it opens was disclosed seeking records of loans totalling $72,000 it says were made by President Nixon and his daughter Tricia to C. G. (Bebe) Rebozo.

The disclosure came as Rebozo's lawyer worked out an agreement with the committee limiting the scope of the subpoena, which called for a number of Rebozo's financial records.

The committee wants the records of an unsecured $65,000 loan it said was made to Rebozo by Tricia Nixon Cox in March, 1972, and an unsecured $10,000 loan made to Rebozo by Nixon in January or February, 1973.

Republican Urges Nixon to Resign



WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican Senator Richard Schweiker of Pennsylvania today urged President Nixon to resign because the Watergate transcripts released by Nixon last week "reveal a total disregard for the moral and political values upon which this nation was built."

In a letter addressed to the president, Schweiker said: "I am compelled to speak out. I cannot remain silent in the face of the now obvious moral corrosion destroying and debasing the presidency.

However, While House spokesman Gerald Warren said Nixon "is determined to remain in office despite comments by some and the attacks by others."

Almost nobody in the House, in private conversation, now believes that impeachment is not a foregone conclusion, said Representative Charles Wilson (Dem. Tex.).

Handleman Predicts Houses Will Be Cheaper by June's End

HAMILTON (CP) — Speculators will be selling houses at a loss by late June, Housing Minister Sidney Handleman said Thursday.

Mr. Handleman said figures showed that price increases in housing were being fuelled by speculative activity and not by a supply shortage.

He told a meeting here that the result "is a market price structure quite unrelated to the cost value of a house."

Mr. Handleman said that there is little excess housing stock in apartments because vacancy rates in Ontario are low.

"The excess is in house ownership," he said. "Houses are being held off the market, unrented, by speculators and so-called two-house families."

'Affordable' Housing Urged

TORONTO (CP) — Bruce McLaughlin, a Toronto developer, says the price of family homes here might drop $17,000 if local governments would let developers proceed rapidly with "affordable housing." He told the Bureau of Municipal Research the province should give bonuses to municipalities that encourage housing and penalize those that delay projects. The average price of houses sold in April in Toronto was $54,000.

"Vacancy rates in some new Subdivisions are as high as 30 per cent an din some cases this amount of housing has been purchased by a single individual."

Many small corporations have been formed to trade in houses and the incidence of individuals acquiring a second house has increased, Mr. Handleman said.

Mr. Handleman said the land housing and speculation tax introduced in the provincial budget April 9 had helped to stabilize the market.

"If some smart guy thinks he has found a loophole in this tax we'll close it up," Mr. Handleman said. "We will not back up on this tax and we will make it tougher if we need to."

He said that rapid price increases have stopped, the bidding war has eased and more housing is on the market on longer periods of time.

Many speculators are overcommitted, he said.

Getting Ready For Sale

They are getting ready for the June 1 bicycle auction at the Belleville police department these days. With the warm weather drawing cyclists out onto the city's roadways, police are preparing for a rash of reported bicycle thefts and they have to get rid of the unclaimed bicycles they recovered last year. At present, Det. Sgt. Bob Begbie and his secretary, Doris Jones, are in charge of a total of 50 unclaimed bicycles. They hope to sell most of them June 1, but they expect they will be collecting more as the summer wears on. Det. Sgt. Begbie is concerned with the increasing number of bicycle thefts caused by carelessness on the part of owners and he has some tips for cyclists who want to keep their bikes.

Two New Voices on CJBQ-AM

Quinte area radio listeners have probably been surprised in the past few weeks to hear two new voices carried over the air waves of CJBQ-AM.

From 6:30 to 9 p.m. CJBQ's audience has heard the sounds of Mary Edwards. Immediately following Edwards' show, listeners have been treated to the tones of Rod MacDonald.

What Quinte listeners might be even more surprised to know is that both Edwards and MacDonald are from this area.

Edwards, through his job, has also resided in different areas of the Nation and travelled abroad.

Through their travelling experiences the two announcers have both decided that "Belleville is an excellent area in which to live," and that "CJBQ is an excellent radio station to work for."

But their appreciation of the area and jobs are almost the only things the two DJs have in common.

On the air, as in person, Edwards portrays the epitomy of a swinging, smooth-talking, rock jock.

MacDonald keeps his show low-keyed compared to Edward's and Rod enjoys playing and listening to country and western music, which comprises much of his late night program.

"I couldn't stand the pace of that kind of program," said Edwards, "so I grabbed an all-night rock show in Peterborough."

Rod graduated from Loyalist College and spent a short time in Kingston doing a country and western show before coming to CJBQ.

"It's kind of ironic," says MacDonald, "the only kind of music I didn't really like before I started college was country and western and now I'm making my living playing it. I've changed my opinion of C and W since my early years because the more you play it the more you like it."

MacDonald thinks, "CJBQ is more like a family than a business. The station is willing to help everyone else. It's a great station to work for."

Bikes Easy for Thieves

By PETER GOODSPEED

The bike boom that has been keeping area bicycle dealers busy making money during the past few years has also proved to be a boon to area thieves.

While nearly one third of the people of Belleville — 10,353 persons — have purchased licences for their bicycles, thieves have made a habit of collecting untended bicycles. Last year alone, Belleville police received 275 reports of stolen bicycles.

Bob Begbie, sergeant of detectives at the Belleville police department, is in charge of investigating bike thefts here and he's closing that on the whole bike theft is a self-inflicted sorrow.

"The fault lies with the cyclists themselves in a great many cases," Detective Sgt. Begbie said. "Generally children will lay their bike down somewhere without locking it while they go in to get something. Instead of being gone for a minute they are usually gone for five minutes or an hour and when they return the bike isn't there. A lot of stolen bikes that we recover have locks on them but the bike isn't locked. The locks are either on the handle bars or somewhere else on the bike where they are of no use."

"Mind you if you lock your bike properly you can make it extremely difficult for a thief to steal it short of carrying it away. If a bicycle owner would just take the trouble to lock his bike properly he may have it for a long time. Now with some bikes you have to take special precautions. Some of the 10-speeds have butterfly nuts on their wheels so that the wheel can be removed in a matter of seconds and you have to take that into consideration when you lock that type of bicycle."

The police believe that nearly half of the bikes that are stolen in Belleville are taken out of the Quinte area.

"A lot of the bikes that are reported stolen are just taken for a joy ride somewhere in the city, but the 3-speeds and the more expensive bikes are usually taken to be sold somewhere else," Det. Sgt. Begbie said. "I think a lot of the higher priced bikes are being taken out of town to Kingston or Toronto because we are not finding the ones that have been reported stolen here."

At present the Belleville police have 50 unclaimed bikes stored at the police station. Of those 50 bikes only eight are of the 10-speed variety.

On the whole, the Belleville police have an excellent record for recovering stolen bicycles. Of the 275 reported stolen bikes last year, 125 were recovered. The remaining 150 were either taken out of Belleville or overhauled and painted in such a way that they couldn't be identified as one of the bikes that had been reported stolen.

While the police have had little trouble recovering stolen bikes that remain in Belleville, they do have a considerable problem returning the recovered bikes to their rightful owner.

Many cyclists do not have a record of their bike's serial number and few people go to the trouble of making any kind of identification marks on their bicycles. Thus, when it comes time to inspect the bikes that were left by the police, the owner is unable to say with certainty that a bike belongs to him.

"If the owner or parents would take a metal punch or a file and make some little identification mark somewhere on their bikes where it wouldn't be seen by a thief, they would greatly increase the chances of identifying a recovered bike," Det. Sgt. Begbie said. "There are a thousand and one different ways that could do it and it would work as long as they were able to identify the marks themselves".

The police have recovered bicycles at the station for a month before they are ready to sell them at auction. Once they have enough unclaimed bicycles they advertise their intention to sell the bikes and set aside a Saturday morning for the sale.

The next bicycle sale will be held at the police station on Campbell Street on the morning of June 1.

Anyone who has reported a stolen bicycle in the past may drop in at the station anytime before the auction to check and see if their bike has been recovered.

If you haven't had your bike stolen and still want to keep it, here are some tips from Det. Sgt. Begbie:

— Have a copy of your bike's serial number.

— Get a licence.

— Lock your bikes together or fasten them to some solid object.

—Always lock your bicycle, even if you are only going into a store for a few minutes.

HI MOM!
WE LOVE YOU!
We couldn't let Mother's Day go by without adding our salute to Mothers. We see mothers everyday in our pharmacy. We see them when they are worried and hurrying to prescriptions for a sick child. We see them hiding their worries and trying to comfort and reassure their little ones. We see new Mothers shopping for needed items for that tiny baby they so proudly carry. And we see thoughtful mothers deciding on many important drug items.
Because we are so closely involved with serving these Mothers we can appreciate the many roles they must play. At this time we would like to say a special thank you to the Mothers who have chosen us to help them.

Community Helps Young with "Special Needs"

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Social preconceptions of the mentally retarded and emotionally disturbed are being transformed in Stirling for a whole community.

Wingfield is a private school for young people who, by long custom have been socially alcoled as retarded or emotionally disturbed. That may be changing—and Wingfield is one of the reasons why.

Now in its second month, the school is putting young people to work in the community as part of its standard education process.

Not only are the youngsters responding. So is the community, say George and Joanne Ridley, who operate both the school and the Wingfield home for retarded near this village of 1,500.

Their claims are supported by - Ed Klomspiker, food market owner, among village businessmen who regularly employ Wingfield students.

"I think the community has accepted them quite well," says the store owner.

Community Take 2 indent Jm

"It's been a real experience—took only for the kids, but for all of us here," he says. "Before the college you didn't pay too much attention to them. There was the standard image of mentally-re tarded and disturbed people, I suppose.

Such responses don't surprise Joanne Ridley, one time Belleville teacher of retarded children. She views those in Wingfield care as people with "special needs," and believes the climate of social acceptance is also becoming more enlightened about mental retardation and emotional problems. (In Massachusetts, the state government recently declared such personal descriptions illegal).

The handicaps of people like those at Wingfield are varied and cannot be classified under simple, common identities, say the Ridleys.

What is vital to our philosophy is that it be recognized these are youngsters with special needs," says Mrs. Ridley.

"With people who are mentally retarded or emotionally disturbed, very often one handicap is mistaken for the other," she explains. "Once you're classified, it's another handicap difficult to overcome."

Aims at Wingfield College are to work with each student on an individual program.

The couple had their earlier contact with the Quinte district when George Ridley was an airman stationed at Trenton in the mid-1950s. During that time his wife taught in Belleville's first school project for the retarded. When they retired, — at Toronto in 1970, — they returned and took over Wingfield. It was then a home for the retarded, operated by a socially-conscious clergyman.

There are 30 individuals now at Wingfield, — on the Campbellford Road northwest of here — between 10 and 44 years. They come from private homes, foster families, Children's Aid Society sources. Some go to public schools, some are employed in Adult Retabilitation Centres (ARC) industries. Some 20 go to Wingfield College, accredited as a private school.

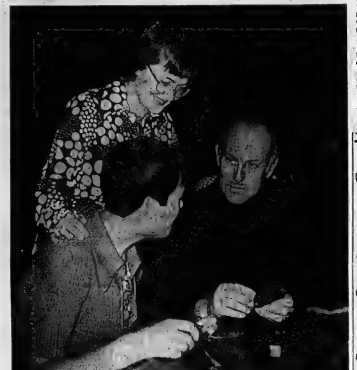
Reason for opening the school was that the Ridleys — parental figures for the residents — seemed to fear they were being too successful in caring for their charges.

By meeting all needs, the Ridleys believed, they were removing demands from the residents — but also potential for self-realization.

The home was in danger of becoming isolated, too cozy," says Joanne Ridley. "The youngsters had no opportunity — or very few — for getting into the community.

Then a store fell vacant in the village centre. The Ridleys took it over, opened their college and began shaping a program of neighborly involvement.

The concept was that the community would be a classroom," says Mrs. Ridley.



The students were encouraged to go shopping, banking, to the library, the post office. Villagers were found to employ others, as part of the academic day. Wingfield students have worked in a nursing home, a printing office, a beauty shop, restaurant.

Now, there's a possibility a local firm may hire a couple working on stripping motors.

"We'll take on any task for the community that we can do...We're available," says Mrs. Wingfield. "It's part of our therapy — and it's been effective so far."

You see, what it does is to give these young people an improved self-image. They begin to see themselves as useful in the real world — and this changes behavior."

Behind his store counter Ed Klompmaker says: "I tell you one thing: They're by no means behind much. They can do their job and they're very ambitious."

Ameliasburg Reeve Defends County Proposal

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Repor er

AMELIASBURGH — Ameliasburgh reeve Russell Thompson says some township residents may be apprehensive of the one-tier government system proposed for Prince Edward County because of misunderstandings.

Reeve Thompson, chairman of county council's county government committee, says concerned residents have contacted him but were satisfied by his explanations of the proposed system.

"They are afraid they will be swallowed up by the whole county system and lose some of their equipment," he observes.

The reeve noted concern for the township's garbage collection system and said that under the restructured county government it would continue to serve residents.

Cost of the service would be charged to township residents but any other required services would be charged back to the users.

Reeve Thompson says the township's museum also would continue, although some residents fear that it will be "swallowed" by a one-tier system.

Funds or grants come through the county but he thought it can be operated locally as it is now.

Reeve Thompson says much of the confusion on the one-tier proposal may have stemmed from the fact that material available on it has not been thoroughly read.

The reeve feels that a public meeting, scheduled for May 17, in the township hall, will clear many misconceptions of the proposal for a restructured local government.

When asked if Ameliasburgh might require "quite a selling job" as township clerk William Nightingale has predicted, the reeve was unable to comment.

"Some may feel that we have more to lose and they want to get it from us. I won't know until the 17th."

He added some Ameliasburgh residents feel the township's new garbage truck will be lost to them if it is used in other townships.

"As long as we get service what difference would it make?" he notes.

"We might be glad to borrow," says the reeve, noting possible use of other county equipment in his township.

At a meeting of municipal councillors and county councillors with provincial government representatives in Picton on recently, clerk William Nightingale suggested that Amelasburgh is turned "socially and economically toward the north."

Reeve Thompson confirms this closeness to Belleville and notes that many township residents shop there or in Trenton — not in Picton.

He adds that he cannot see any advantage in uniting with Belleville and splitting Prince Edward County in two.

It recommends that, in his opinion, a popular vote would support unity.

Election Time Again

The extended honeymoon of Canada's minority government is over. For reasons psychological as much as the hard fact of inflation and Ottawa's apparent inability or unwillingness to cope with it, the Trudeau government has fallen.

Public confidence in Government has been waning for some time now. It is not just the inflation thing, although goodness knows that is disturbing enough, but a general feeling of unease with regard to government policy in general, Ottawa's priorities are suspect, with the encouragement of welfarism seeming to take priority over jobs and initiative, and assistance to so-called liberation movements backed by the Communists) in Africa over real needs of people at home.

It is true that inflation is a worldwide problem, but is that any reason to take no counter measures? Price and wage controls as advocated by the Conservatives, may not be the answer either, but surely greater control can be exercised over spending? The Government insists the economy is buoyant; they are right, for only a buoyant economy could weather the inflationary pressures of the day. But that is no reason to regard inflation as an accepted economic phenomenon; sooner or later it could bring recession, as much through pressures on less resilient economies abroad as through any overheating of the system at home.

So we are into another election and the memories crowd in of other votes over the past decade. Trudeaumania is dead and its hard-nosed successor, the swinging axe experienced Pierre Trudeau of the seventies, is in its place. Will this be enough to carry him through again? There are serious doubts.

Opposition leader Robert Stanfield fell just short of victory 18 months ago and he too has gained in impact and experience. This time he has an excellent chance of beating Prime Minister. David Lewis and his New Democrats could find themselves out on a limb this time. One of two things is likely to happen: in their case either they will strengthen their position, perhaps hold the balance of power again, or they will be virtually wiped out.

One thing is certain, and that is two months of campaigning lie ahead. It was too long before, and the electorate is likely to be just as exhausted this time around. After Inflation and other matters have pounded to death the least we can hope for is a government of one party or another with a strong mandate, but not so overwhelming that it makes for a weak Opposition.

Brandt Resigns

Suddenly West German Chancellor Willy Brandt, a symbol of his country's postwar recovery and emergence from the barren years of Nazism, is gone from the political scene.

A strong leader and advocate of reconciliation between opposing political systems — he won the Nobel peace prize for his work on east-west détente — Brandt fell victim to a spy scandal which came on top of state election setbacks for his socialist party.

Brandt will be missed both in the West German European political scene. Indeed, one cannot help but reflect on his readiness to step down, as a mark of his acceptance of political responsibility in this affair, and upon how differently U.S. President Nixon is reacting to Watergate, for which he has also accepted responsibility.

Brandt's successor is likely to be Finance Minister Helmut Schmidt, a suave and handsome politician who speaks English like a native. As a former defence minister, Schmidt has visited Canada during military exercises by German forces at bases here.

Choir's Initiative

An example of youthful Canadian initiative in connection with the Spokane fair: Since government grants are not available to amateur groups going abroad, the young people of the Ottawa board of education central choir are holding two public concerts in May and June. The choir, under director Arnold East, is one of two choirs which will be representing Canada in Spokane, and they need $20,000 to go. In this age of welfarism and government paternalism, or the lack of it, individual and group initiative still counts.

U.S. Writer Examines Presidents and Press in Collision

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

The press and the head of government is a theme pursued from time to time by pundits within the press, analysts in a prime minister's office or a university professor. Usually rather vague stuff.

But in the April issue of Esquire which has become the outstanding American magazine of wide social and political comment, David Halberstam, Washington columnist, Vietnam war correspondent and the base of Presidents Johnson and Nixon, has written brilliantly about similar U.S. relationships.

He is writing, perhaps overwriting given the length of his piece, about the Washington press corps and the ways it handled Truman, Eisenhower, Kennedy, Johnson and Nixon as well as the other way round.

It's a superb piece, frank and open, revealing much about the differing psyches of press and presidents over the past third of the time, briefly in collision during the short golden John Kennedy presidential years.

—As with so many American critiques of their public life, it is written using a broad and colorful canvas.

To oversimplify him dangerously, Mr. Halberstam was analyzing among other things two major developments, the over-personalization of the president and the over-militarization of American foreign policy.

From Eisenhower to Nixon meant presidential press coverage of passivity where the easy-going, golf-playing and aging Dwight Eisenhower was concerned to overkill with Richard Nixon.

The press gamesmanship with Richard Nixon and he with the press is interwoven with modern U.S. political history. Not having Nixon to kick around anymore a few short years ago, then kicking the hell out of him over Watergate, Canadians read about and live with almost as much as Americans.

To a large degree it was the pressure of foreign affairs impinging on the once largely docile life of domestic America which journalists on, ended almost any "love affair" between Washington press corps and president.

The Vietnam war changed all that. It involved the liberal and radical conservatives in the U.S. press into critics of the president and his motives. It brought about constant war between the press and Johnson, the major national capitol was sideshow.

Rather the savings of our press opinion centred on the alleged personality changes of a Trudeau or Stanfield. In the case of the prime minister all the warnings of his "high" or euphoric support for him and his charisma of early 1968, to seeing him at this present election-bound moment "as a politician at last" instead of as an intellectual forerunner.

The Stanfield press attachments have been perhaps more in the dowdy but predictable Canadian press tradition of slow and careful assessment of the system. Stanfield's quiet rise from stumbling TV performances and awkward style to acceptable bilingualism and political style was easier to follow.

So we have the press we deserve the governments we deserve? Perhaps not on the big stage of Washington or the smaller one of Ottawa where quickly moving events have matured a too-cautious press.

Warning For Canada

No Dividend From Edison an Economic Pointer

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

To Canadians, does it matter that New York's Consolidated Edison Co. has omitted a quarterly dividend for the first time in its 90-year history?

Directly, perhaps not. Indirectly it could be a significant indicator of coming problems for our economy.

Con Ed is the biggest U.S. electrical utility. That's why its financial troubles attract so much attention but its troubles are typical of those that beset other and less prominent corporations.

Four years ago, a financial squeeze brought about the collapse of the Penn Central Co., one of the biggest of U.S. transportation groups. That in turn precipitated a recession and a stock-market sell-off that affected the Canadian economy almost as much as the U.S.

The fact is that our economy is intimately linked to events outside Canada. Foreign trade accounts for some 20 per cent of this country's gross national product, and exports to the U.S. alone account for 14 per cent.

While our raw-material exports are reasonably well insulated, especially in a time of superinflation, Canada's manufacturers are much more vulnerable to a U.S. recession.

The current state of the U.S. economy offers little reason for optimism, despite President Richard M. Nixon's brave forecasts of a recovery some time this year.

Real personal disposable income, adjusted by the GNP deflator (in other words, the constant value of spendable money) was lower in the first three months of this year than in the last part of 1973. The turn-around reverses a long-run trend, and came despite increases by governments in the level of payments to welfare recipients, pensioners and the like.

Corporate profit therefore levelled off (on average) in fourth-quarter 1973, and are unlikely to start advancing again until consumer spending resumes its rise—and that could be a long wait.

In short, it appears that the classical inventory cycle is at work. Purchasing is curtailed by consumers, then by distributors, then by manufacturers, until inventories are worked down to a minimum, and government steps in with incentives to expand them.

In January-March of this year, U.S. industry was producing at only 80 per cent of capacity, compared with an average of 83.3 per cent during second-half 1973.

True, there are shortages of manufactured goods here and there. Many of those shortages have been caused by bottlenecks, especially in transport services. But on the whole, American industry is forced to let 20 per cent of its production capacity stand idle.

In the U.S., hopes for economic recovery seem to be pinned on the possibility of a big surge in business investment in new plant and equipment (doubtful), or a tax cut to stimulate spending (which President Nixon would probably veto).

To a considerable extent, Canada's economic prospects are also riding on those hopes.

The Murky Dialogue of Watergate

Ottawa Journal

In the Watergate saga we are not only shocked. Still, the White House tape transcripts are a test for the hardiest cynic.

The following lines are from the March 21 discussion in the Oval Office between President Nixon and John W. Dean and H. R. Haldeman. They are talking about the possibility of these two executives and other White House aides being summoned before a proposed special grand jury that would probe the break-in of the Democratic National Committee headquarters. What should they testify?

Haldeman: "You can refuse to talk."

Dean: "You can take the Fifth Amendment."

Nixon: "That's right."

Haldeman: "You can say you've forgotten, can't you?"

Dean: "Sure, but you are clancing a very high risk for perjury situation.

Nixon: "But you can say I don't remember. You can say I can't recall. I can't give any answer to that. I can refuse."

There it is. The president of the United States refuses to uphold the Constitution and the law, was counselling perjury.

Mr. Nixon, in his televised announcement of release of the transcripts, said some passages are open to varying interpretations. He was right, in that this is often true. But in the above discussion — and even reading the total transcript for that day's three conversations — there is always talk, like his comment, "we have to keep a cap on the bottle". The transcripts do show that Mr. Nixon had no fore-knowledge of the Watergate burglary. But since it happened, his motif was to minimize disclosures that would incriminate his guilty friends.

Some people say all politics are this rotten. We reject that view. Yet it is a shock to realize that this could happen in the highest councils of a nation founded almost 200 years ago by men who proclaimed its purpose in terms of the highest idealism; to read of their being discussing how to "wash" payoff money, like Mafia types. Mr. Nixon's gang were playing politics in which the only criterion was "does it work?" All else was irrelevant.

If Mr. Nixon is not impeached, if he gets away with this, then anyone else can. The cancer could spread, making politics an unclean game. And the American people would have the governments they deserve.

Oil Hike Placed Before Courts in Nova Scotia

By DON O'HEARN
Queens Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — What could be one of the most important decisions of our time affecting government is currently before the courts in Nova Scotia.

The Public Utilities Board in Nova Scotia rolled back certain increases in oil fuel charges. Oil had put through.

The company now is appealing this decision on the grounds that it is beyond the province's power and the case almost certainly will end up in the Supreme Court of Canada.

If the Regan government should eventually win it will give every provincial government in Canada under extreme pressure to impose roll-backs and specified price controls.

Already these pressures have been strong here in Ontario.

There has been great demand that the Nova Scotian lead be followed and that at least prices of oil and gasoline be under controls.

The government, even though it long has controlled the price of natural gas and recently has brought electricity prices under similar controls, has been able to hold off these demands on the question of constitutional propriety.

But if Nova Scotia should win out, the pressures could turn out to be irresistible.

If the eastern province should lose the suit, it conceivably could have just as strong an impact on the country.

For this could mean a strong extension of provincial rights.

And it could be a strong enough question to force our governments in Canada to finally face up to the need of revision of the constitution.

We have been playing around with this for more than a decade.

It is recognized that powers are so mixed up, and unclarified, that they are leading to inefficient government.

Yet even knowing this the governments have been unable to do the really hard work which a constitutional revising would mean.

An adverse Supreme Court decision for the provinces could mean such a demand they would be forced to.

Smokers Keep on Smoking

Brockville Recorder and Times

Anti-cigarette smoking posters have a message that even the near-blind can read. The coughing commercial on TV has terrific impact and the latest newspaper advertisement is a real eye-catcher with the telling details in the tobacco business but it is a sad commentary on the mentality of people that could allow their offspring to start a habit that is so difficult for many to break. One can understand some of the older people being unable to, or not wanting to, break the habit after years of smoking, but indeed it is a day when the dangers of smoking were not generally known. Today, however, health organizations throughout the world have brought these to this fact. It seems that not matter how much one does in the elementary school level, however, and in the homes. The message is not getting through. Increased campaigning and the Canadian Cancer Society, Heart Health Society by a Toronto firm, may be the answer. The revolver is the only left hand with approved loading position — except that the hand is pushing cigarettes into the chamber.

Bible Digest

by H. B. DEAN

"Through faith also Sara herself received strength to conceive seed, and was delivered of a child when she was past age, because she judged him faithful who had promised. Therefore sprang there even of one, and him as good as dead, so many as the stars of the sky in multitude, and as the sand which is by the sea shore innumerable." Hebrews 11:11, 12

Faith is simply believing that He meant what He said. Put yourself in the middle of His promises and stay there until you see the fulfillment of your prayers. The wall will not be moved. Hold all things are possible.

Men. Can milk really give you extra vitality?

Too few men realize the nutritional powers of milk as a food, and the resulting big contribution it can make to an adult male's vigour. Read why milk is, indeed, a man's drink...not just a child's.

Milk is just about the best all round package that Nature has ever come up with: a source of more nutrients you need, in better proportion, than any other single food.

You didn't know that, did you? Well, you've got plenty of company. Many adults think milk is only for children.

This idea is wrong and needs correcting. No one ever outgrows the need for milk.

Throughout all adult life, milk contributes significantly to the health and vitality of the man who drinks it regularly.

Increased vitality means increased enjoyment of life.

No man anywhere lives under greater pressures than the North American male. Ours is probably the fastest, most competitive society that has ever existed.

In short, it takes a lot out of you. Increasing your vitality level, therefore, can help you give it all you've got...because you'll have more "got" to give it.

An extra resource of stamina to draw on when the going gets tough.

Or of pep for leisure activities. (Lives there a man with soul so dead that he can't think of interesting things he could do with some extra drive at his disposal?)

Every glass of milk you drink gives the kind of solid nutritional support your body needs.

Powerhouse though it is, don't expect milk to work miracles. Especially alone.

Meat-and-potato men, this means you. You also need to eat fruits and green vegetables, cereals and milk. Every single day.

And milk. Too important a food to be ignored by any adult desirous of achieving health and fitness.

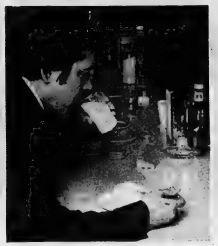
No other single food provides as many health factors, in as well-balanced a way, as milk. It is rated an excellent dietary source of NO LESS THAN FIVE essential nutrients:—

Calcium. Adult bones and teeth continue to need calcium to stay in good shape.

Protein. A very important health factor. Not many people realize that milk provides high quality protein.



Riboflavin. Another factor in maintaining adult health.

Phosphorus. Another factor needed to maintain the health of adult bones and teeth.

In addition to these five, milk contains almost all other nutrients known to be needed by the human body...not just in childhood but throughout life.

This is why milk has earned the description of "Nature's most nearly perfect food". And why it is so important that adults realize that they, too, need milk. Each day.

Getting back into the milk habit.

Relax. You don't have to revolutionize your way of life to enjoy the extra vitality that milk can help provide.

All you have to do is make room for it somewhere in your daily food intake.

You can add a glass of milk to whatever you have for breakfast. Or take a midafternoon milk-break instead of a coffee-break. Or have a soothing nightcap of milk. Or drink it with a meal, any meal.

So that milk can help you get the most out of life.

Yes, you. A man who thought you'd long outgrown it.

PM Asks New Law Be Guide

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Thursday he will seek agreement from all political parties to fight the July 8 election campaign according to the "spirit of terms set forth in new election expenses legislation.

In reply to questions at a news conference the Liberal leader said his party would "apply the spirit of the law if the other parties do."

David Lewis, New Democratic Party leader, told a news conference later his party will be happy to observe the new restrictions, even though they are not legally binding.

"The NDP is more than ready and willing."

While the Election Expenses Act was approved as law Jan. 16, proclamation is not expected until at least July 15. Chief Electoral Officer Jean-Marc Hamel had said that proclamation could be delayed still further in the event of a general election before that date.

The new law would not come into effect, he said, until after writs confirming election results were issued to Ottawa.

The act limits campaign spending by parties and candidates and controls contributions. It also provides for public money for political parties and new election broadcasting regulations.

Following elections, parties and candidates would have to submit audited reports to Mr. Hamel and his staff.

Under the act, candidates will be limited to spending $1 for each of the first 15,000 voters in their ridings, 30 cents for each of the next 10,000 and 25 cents for each voter over 25,000. Parties will be permitted to spend 30 cents for each voter.

Canadidates will be reimbursed from the public treasury for limited postage, travel and auditing expenses.

Oil Firms Told Price Limits

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government told t the oil industry Thursday it will be told in oil product prices should be limited to 8.2 cents a gallon west of the Ottawa Valley and to 2.7 cents east of the artificial line that divides domestic and imposed oil sales.

Text of the message to oil companies was released Thursday night.

The increases suggested would cover increased costs.

"We request that no other price increases be implemented," the message, signed by Energy Minister Donald Macdonald, says.

It asks exporters to collect the $4 surcharge for each barrel of domestic petroleum and petroleum products sold outside the country—agreed to by Ottawa and the provinces earlier this year—and that the money be remitted to the government.

Legislation covering the national oil-price agreement had not been passed by Parliament when the minority Liberal government was defeated Wednesday on a non-confidence vote and the legislation died with the government.

McKeough Says Ads Misleading

TORONTO (CP) — Energy Minister Darcy McKeough Thursday criticized certain automobile manufacturers who have advertised that "the oil crisis is over."

He said such "misleading" advertising is designed to encourage political customers to buy big, energy-consuming cars.

"In the first place, at least here in Ontario, we didn't have what I would call a crisis," he told the Public Utilities Advisory Commission.

"And in the second place, the potential for shortage is still with us and will be for at least a year or so."

Mr. McKeough did not name the car makers whose advertising he criticized.

No Convention

TORONTO (CP) — The provincial convention of the New Democratic Party has been cancelled because of the upcoming federal election.

The NDP had planned to meet in Sudbury for three days at the end of May but party officials said the fall of the Tory-dominated government forced a change in plans.

Rip-off Slogan Out But Theme Will Stay

OTTAWA (CP) — The New Democratic Party will abandon the slogan, but not the theme, of the corporate rip-off campaign that brought it election gains in 1972, NDP Leader David Lewis said Thursday.

"If I can control myself, I don't intend to use the term," he said at a news conference setting the stage for the party's campaign for the July 8 election. "People are a bit tired of it, but the idea fits right in."

He said corporations, often foreign-controlled, are making immense profits and are collecting significantly to the rising cost of living.

Inflation and rising prices undoubtedly will be the key issue, a welcome improvement from previous campaigns based on personalities, he said.

He listed a series of price increases that occurred between the October, 1972, election and March of this year: eggs up to 85 cents a dozen from 57 cents, hamburger up to $1.16 a pound from 85 cents and sugar up to 1.08 from 75 cents for a five-pound bag.

In the same period, housing prices in Ottawa and Toronto jumped to an average of $50,000 from $32,000, he said. This soaring trend holds across "the whole gamut of the cost of living."

He reiterated key points of anti-inflation measures the party will propose during the campaign: A two-price system for basic Canadian commodities produced in Canada, one price set loose and another for exports a strong national price-control board; a six per-cent ceiling on corporate interest rates and a tough excess-profits tax.

Advance Polls to Be On Holiday Weekend

The polls, for persons who for one reason or another will be unable to vote in their riding days before, . . . In fact, enumeration will begin on May 20, Saturday, June 29, and Monday, Victoria Day, this time," he July 1—the Dominion Day holiday weekend.

Election Machines Rumble Into Gear

OTTAWA (CP.— The election machine is a complex apparatus at hundh gears and political power that needs as much careful tuning as the most intricate racing car.

And with the defeat of the minority Liberal government and Thursday's announcement of the July 8 election, all major parties have started their engines.

Prime Minister Trudeau, shortly after announcing the date, began a caucus meeting, as did Robert Stanfield of the Conservatives, New Democrat David Lewis and Social Credi's Real Caouette.

When the prime minister dropped the official starting flag, only his own party appeared slightly unprepared for the race.

"We haven't been preparing for an election," Senator Keith Davey, Liberal campaign cochairman said earlier this week.

"We have the outline, the bones, but we don't have any flesh on it."

He and the other co-chairman, Transport Minister Jean Marchand, were hard at work Thursday, ironing out the kinks ning smoothly in the shortest possible time.

The prime minister's campaign travel plans were not immediately known.

He was preparing for a visit to Duke University in North Carolina to deliver a convocation address and receive an honorary degree Sunday. The commitment was made some time ago.

The full campaign may not start until after May 20, Victoria Day, but the Conservatives and NDP were wasting no time.

Mr. Stanfield is off to Fredericton and Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., during the weekend.

Mr. Lewis will visit the Ontario cities of Oshawa, Brantford and Sault Ste. Marie starting Sunday.

Mr. Lewis will start with a nomination meeting Sunday in Oshawa, followed by others in Stratford Monday and Sault Ste. Marie Tuesday. He will be mainly in his own Toronto riding of York South Wednesday and from there he plans to go to Winnipeg Thursday for at least part of the annual Canadian Labor Congress convention.

Mr. Caouette will start a swing through his western Quebec riding of Temiscamingue Thursday before he begins what a spokesman has described as "a national campaign."

The NDP is well ahead in the nominations race, with 88 candidates chosen so far. The Social Credit total is 48, Conservative and Liberal-14.

In Concern to Protect Young Society Violates Rights

TORONTO CP) — Society's concern to protect the young has led It to violate their rights, Barbara Chisholm of the Canadian Council on Children and Youth told the Ontario Status of Women Council Thursday.

The Juvenile court structure, training schools and laws dealing with juveniles were originally created with a "beneficial and benign intent," she said.

Miss Chisholm, project director for the children and youth council, added that, there are some fundamental questions that should be examined before the laws are changed.

These include the questions of when childhood ends - and whether there is any longer such a thing as adolescence in today's society.

"We have defined children's rights in relation to adult obligations and we need to look at this assumption," she said.

She said it is time to re-examine the position of children in child-custody battles. The official guardian's report and the discussion in the judge's chambers does not always represent a child's real feelings about the proceedings.

British Columbia has just appointed two full-time lawyers to represent children in child-custody fights, she said.

On the issue of child abuse, the rights of adults to lay charges against children have been pressed, she said, but she asked at what age children should be allowed to lay charges against adults.

In an afternoon session, John Anderson, assistant deputy minister of community and social services, told the council that legislative action has practically eliminated the need for deserted wives to appear in court to follow up unpaid maintenance orders which they have assigned to the ministry.

An amendment to the provincial Deserted Wives and Children Act, effective January this year, provides for family support officers to act as advocates in court for women whose husbands have defaulted on support payments.

Stanfield Pledges Quick Price Freeze

OTTAWA (CP — Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield said Thursday it will not take long to implement a temporary wage and incomes freeze if his party wins the July 8 federal election.

Mr. Stanfield did not specify how long, but said neither parliament nor machinery would take much time to set up. A 90-day freeze is a major element of Conservative policy.

He was speaking at his first news conference after Prime Minister Trudeau set the election date, and had just emerged from caucus with Conservative members of the last Parliament.

Would this mean an early return of Parliament if he became prime minister?

"I would want to call Parliament just as soon as it is practically possible.

Mr. Trudeau said Aug. 1 would be the earliest practical date.

Ninety days would be the maximum, Mr. Trudeau, he said, and he would prefer that it be shorter. It would be followed by "more flexible controls" with allowances for bringing up the incomes of lower wage earners.

Mr. Stanfield said he hopes for a majority Conservative government so progress will not have to be altered to suit a third party.

Practical Nurses Complain

TORONTO (CP) — The president of the Society of Trained Practical Nurses Inc. says the proposed Health Disciplines Act is "legally discriminating" against 3,000 practical nurses in Ontario. The bill is scheduled for second reading in the legislature May 13.

Sally McLaren said Thursday in an interview the bill gives no recognition to trained practical nurses. One consequence, she said, is that patients in some nursing homes, who are cared for largely by unregistered practical nurses, would have no legal redress for unethical or pode care.

The Health Disciplines Act would not bar practical nurses from nursing homes and private and hospital work. But by not then certifying them nor mentioning them, the bill effectually ignores them, she said.

Practical nurses are usually graduates of private trade schools, not recognized by the College of Nurses of Ontario, the regulatory body for the nursing profession.

Offer Reward

OTTAWA (CP) — A Toronto firm investigating the $165,000 theft of gold bars from Ottawa International Airport April 18 is offering $20,000 for information leading to recovery of the gold.

Higgins and Stratton Adjusters Ltd. is offering the reward on behalf of the companies that insured the gold.

About 340 pounds of unrefined gold—five bars—was taken from an Air Canada cargo terminal by thieves.

Game Changed

ST. THOMAS (CP) — Mrs. D. A. Irwin, president of the Ontario Hospital Association, said Thursday the process of hospital wage negotiations may have changed permanently in Ontario.

Mrs. Irwin said the Toronto hospital workers' agreement, which resulted in pay raises of $1.50 an hour over the next two years, has revolutionized hospital labor relations in the province.

JOHN RHODES

Expand QEW

TORONTO (CP) — Transportation Minister John Rhodes said Thursday that it is government policy to make the Queen Elizabeth Way a divided, maximum eight-lane freeway.

He told the legislature it will be developed in stages from its current four to six lanes.

Convicted

TORONTO (CP) — Donald Jack Dugan, 34, of Toronto, who attempted to drink sulphuric acid when he appeared in court Jan. 7 on a drug charge, was convicted Thursday of possessing a quantity of the acid for a purpose dangerous to the public peace.

Dugan was sentenced by Judge Maurice Charles to two months in jail and was placed on probation for 12 months thereafter. One of the terms of his probation is that he receive psychiatric help for drug abuse.

Tasks Differ

KINGSTON (CP) — David Sutherland, president of Sir Sandford Fleming community college, in Peterborough, said Thursday colleges and universities have a complementary, not competitive role to play.

"The specific role of the colleges has been to provide . . . 'further education' as opposed to the university role of providing 'higher education'," he said at a conference of teachers and guidance counsellors held at Queen's University.

Talks Resume

CHATHAM (CP) — A spokesman for Union Gas Ltd. said Thursday negotiations to settle a strike that began more than three months ago will resume in Toronto Monday.

Nixon Cynical on Tape Say Religious Leaders

NEW YORK (AP) — A cross-section of religious leaders and specialists on ethics in the United States say the transcribed tapes of President Nixon's conversations with associates reflect a contempt for fairness and truth.

"The transcripts give every evidence of the abuse of power of office and a cynical disregard for truth, justice or the common good," says Rev. Joseph Dolan, a Roman Catholic theologian at Fordham University.

Rt. Rev. John Hines, presiding bishop of the Episcopal (Anglican) Church, says the tapes "reveal an amoral man. Insensitive to the principles that are so important to firm, fair and ethically oriented government."

"It is almost as if the public has been admitted to the private plotting within a felons' lair," says William Thomas, chief executive of the United Presbyterian Church.

These and similar comments were the reaction to a general sampling of moral-religious authorities on the quality of attitudes indicated in the tapes.

"The concern displayedwas entirely opportunistic," says Rev. Dr. Thomas Bland, professor of Christian ethics at Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary, Wake Forest, N.C.

"In the talk about hush money, for example, the question is not whether it's right, but whether they can get by with it. The ethic of the thing seems to be that the end to be accomplished justifies whatever means might be employed."

"All in all, it looks to me that the basic interest there was simply holding on to power and not justice," says Rev. Dr. Robert Mana, president of the United Church of Christ.

Rabbi Alexander Schindler, president of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, says the tapes are "not the language of the presidency, but the language of the gutter. It reeks with the stench of moral decay."

Rev. Robert Marshall, president of the Lutheran Church in America, says "the basic attitudes and concerns are not as noble and principled as a person might hope."

Rev. Charles Curran, a moral theologian of the Catholic University of America, says "the big problem is not the expletives and four-letter words, but the moral viewpoint shown by saying one thing publicly and doing another privately."

Rev. Dr. Foy Valentine of Nashville, Tenn., head of the Southern Baptist Christian Life Commission, says "the tone conveyed is utterly reprehensible, made worse by the fact that there had been such a pretence of piety."

Davis Says Inflation Fight Foiled by Federal Spending

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Canada cannot come to grips with inflation with the example of government spending exhibited in the proposed federal budget, Ontario Premier William Davis said Thursday night.

Mr. Davis, attending a Progressive Conservative fund-raising dinner in the riding of Middlesex South, said the Ontario government felt discouraged after seeing the proposed 22-per-cent increase in federal governments spending in the federal budget Monday.

Almost none of the proposals will be implemented now since Parliament has been dissolved and an election called.

Mr. Davis said it is not enough to "shrug one's shoulders and say inflation is an international problem."

Inflation should not be viewed as inevitable, he said, adding that provincial and federal governments have the fiscal tools to work together to slow the tide of inflation.

The premier said that compared with the federal budget the Ontario budget has a direction and attempts to come to grips with inflation.

The 225-a-plate dinner attended by 450 persons was held in honor of Robert Eaton, Progressive Conservative member of the legislature for Middlesex South.

200 Made Idle By U.S. Imports

TORONTO (CP) — Spokesmen for processing firms said Thursday that more than 200 workers have been laid off at three factories making frozen chicken and turkey dinners and pot pies because of cheap United States imports.

Executives of the firms said they sent a telegram Thursday to Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan and Commerce Minister Alastair Gillespie asking that protection against cheap imports granted this week to turkey producers be extended to processors.

There was no immediate reply from the ministers, they said.

The spokesmen said Morrison Lamothe Frozen Foods Ltd. in Toronto has laid off more than 40 workers; Swanson division of Campbell Soup Co. Ltd. at Listowel, 25 miles northwest of Kitchener, more than 100 employees; and York Farms division of Canada Packers Ltd. in Branford, at least 60 workers.

Anti-speculation Bill Needs Changes

TORONTO (CP) — The government expected that a number of amendments would have to be made to its anti-speculative bill before and after it becomes law, Revenue Minister Arthur Meen indicated Thursday.

"You just can't come up with perfection the first time," Mr. Meen said in the legislature as debate on the bill, which taxes land profits, continued.

The legislation was stalled Tuesday when opposition members quarrelled with a change in title.

MPPs argued for another two hours over the name of the act Thursday before discussing them first of 24 sections.

Some opposition members predicted the debate would continue for up to two weeks before the legislation was passed.

"The whole thing is a farce," said Vernon Singer (L—Toronto Downsview) whose party supported the bill in principle, then fumble from clause to clause."

Dr. Morton Shulman (NDP—Toronto High Park) said the legislation actually would contribute to inflation because one section of the bill made it attractive for persons who owned land outright to mortgage it.

YOU CAN PAY ECONOMY AND STILL GO FIRST CLASS.

A lot of people think buying a small car means giving up power, performance and comfort. But we make some small cars that offer things you'll find are hard to get even on big cars.

Like 5-speed shifts, for example. There are three new Toyota 5 speed models where the outlay is modest, but the layout is lavish:

Our Corolla SR 5, in addition to its protective bolt-on fender rims, has a racing type console, woodgrain steering wheel and wide radial tires. All standard equipment. There's even a tachometer (it reads at 6,500 rpm) at no extra charge. And the charge is a pleasant surprise. In fact, there isn't another 5-speed on the market that comes within $1,300 of it.

The completely new Corona SR comes with something you won't find on any big car anywhere: ESP, an overhead warning panel that lights up when certain parts of the car need attention. Radial tires are standard too, plus specially contoured reclining bucket seats and a hefty 2 litre overhead cam engine.

But even with all its expensive extras, the Corona still isn't what you'd call expensive.

However, if you're willing to go a little higher, (but still not as high as you'd have to go for the average big car) there's the Celica GT. A standard 5-speed stick shift is just part of its racy, sports car appeal. The Celica GT also has a woodgrained dash with full racing type instrumentation. (Cluster-mounted tach, oil pressure gauge and electric clock.) You also get an AM/FM radio as standard equipment. Plus radial tires and power front disc brakes. So no matter whether you choose our economically priced Corolla SR5, our moderately priced Corona SR, or our competitively priced Celica GT, one thing's for sure: It's not a lot of money for the car, but it's a lot of car for the money.

Family-Centred Maternity Care Includes Both Parents In Baby's First Days

By SHARON AIRHART

Once upon a time, Mama went to the hospital to have a baby.

While she was waiting for baby to be born, Papa waited, too. They didn't wait together. Then Mama went to have the baby in a delivery room she'd never seen before while Papa waited some more. Then baby was whisked off to a nursery where she lived all by herself, in a little crib except at feeding times. Then Mama got to hold her. Papa never got to hold her. He got to look at her through the glass. She didn't wave back.

That's the way it was 'agit it was pretty scarey. Especially when baby got home and no one knew how to change her or bathe her.

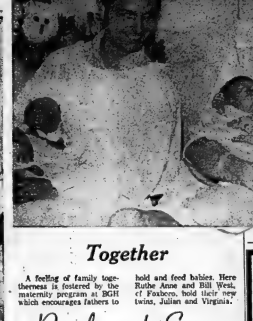
Nurses are going off to study something called Family Centred Maternity Care and papas are getting to hold babies and even feed them. (If Mama isn't nursing, that is).

The way it is now, in fact, is expressed by a recent patient, Arlyne Gillespie of Thomasburg. After her stay at BGH, she wrote her thanks to the staff of the maternity floor:

"I want to express my sincere appreciation for all your help during my recent stay on your floor. Your guidance, your willingness to answer questions and to explain various procedures and most of all, your friendliness made the experience of having my first child a very enjoyable one. The pleasant atmosphere was calming and reassuring for an anxious first-time mother.

"And with respect to your rooming-in system: I had long looked forward to sharing a room with my baby without beginning to imagine how much was involved. It was a marvelous opportunity to get to know my baby and to learn the techniques of caring for him without fear of going through it alone for the first time when we got home. It also helped tremendously in establishing a breastfeeding schedule. Here, too, the encouragement and the friendly advice which all of you offered was most appreciated.

"My husband also adds a vote of thanks."



"We both were glad that he was allowed to stay in the labor room: that he was admitted to the delivery room so soon after our son was born and that he was able to hold him later in my room. We felt we were going through the whole experience as a family and that is so important."

Many thanks from the three of us for all your efforts."

Being Prepared

Linda McCarey teaches prenatal couples class for the health unit. Couples are Kathy and Gary Ferguson and Shelley and Michael D'Ornellas. Mrs. McCarey, who has taught pre-natal classes for mothers only and prenatal classes for couples believes "there's a different atmosphere" in a couples class, with more relaxation and a more open attitude.

Together

Bath Practice

Billie Mae La Rue gets a chance to bathe her new daughter Rebecca with help from obstetrical nurse Shirley Flood. Billie Mae said she was happy to have a chance to bathe the baby while still in the hospital since she is "an inexperienced mother".

People and Events

The first Sunday in May, designated as Catholic Women's League Day in Kingston Diocese, was celebrated in Sacred Heart Parish, Marmora, with a mother and daughter brunch.

Special guest for the occasion was Sister Pauline Lally, religious education consultant of the Kingston Separate School Board. She spoke on the phenomenon of "Wonder".

Sister Lally opened her presentation with the song "Wonderful World" and she was joined by the Sacred Heart choir girls and those present. She concluded with slides on the wonders of creation.

Marilyn Maloney thanked Sister Lally on behalf of the women. The new hymn "Our Lady of Good Counsel" sung by the junior choir at the beginning of the program was accompanied by organist Ada Brody.

Lillian O'Connor, who serves on the executive of the CWL Council, addressed the members on "What it means to be a member of the CWL". Stressing the importance of belonging to the league, even if it is not possible at certain stages of life to be active, she explained that by a larger national membership the voice of the League has a greater impact in its effort to improve social injustices.

Guests and members were given a warm welcome by Marmora President Leona Brady who gave a brief history of the League in Marmora.

Men of the parish served the luncheon.

Be Alert to Sibings' Needs

By DORIS CLANCY

"Mummy, I love you." This from a three-year-old, as Mummy is busily engaged bathing one-year-old little sister.

Yes, dear, I know you do." Mummy continues to bathe the tiny one, then suddenly stops short. She turns toward her older little boy, and while keeping one hand on the baby leans forward and kisses him on the forehead.

"I love you, too. And I guess I need a big hug about now." So older brother grins from ear to ear, throws two chubby arms around his mother's neck. Then trots off.

Mother chuckles, shakes her head a little at her own nearmiss in spotting a plea for reassurance; a plea for affection; for the attention that would show her she was beloved, in spite of the tiny interloper who seemed to be taking so much of Mummy's attention.

That night Mummy discussed with Daddy what had happened and both resolved to be a little more alert to signs of nose-out-of-joint. Here were two parents who were working together to make family life something serene and worthwhile, and could talk things over with each other.

Dear Doris: Speaking of a good laugh as-being good for you, shall I tell you the corny one about the minister and the special donations?

He announced that if the person who gave the large donation last Sunday would stand up they could choose three hymns for the "outing" next Sunday in the park.

Up jumped a little old lady who called out: "Goody, goody!" And pointing her finger at three men, she said: "I'll take him and him and him!"

Isabel.

Dear Isabel: Good for her. Do you keep these treasures up your sleeve to spring on unsuspecting people like me?

Dear Doris: I was thrilled to find even half of the song Pat wishes, in a decrepit old book. Have her call me if she wishes me to sing it to her.

Lorna.

Dear Doris: How the memories came flooding back to me as I searched in my mind for the words to the Indian Lullaby! I too, learned one in the 20's in grade one, and wrote the words down as I remember them.

Mrs. M.L.

Dear Lorna, Mrs. T.S.; M.L. and Several Others: We now have "The Swing", "The Lullaby of The Iroquois" and "Gosling Green". The third one has to do with a preacher learning a sermon, occupying the place of the young son who has to wait, "because there-ain't no seat".

(Leaflets mentioned by Doris are available to readers for 25 cents and a large stamped, self-addressed envelope. Send your letter in care of this newspaper.)

MAJORCAN FAMILY AFFAIR

"If you WERE interested in having a real Majorcan meal, I know of family friends . . ." Josep, our young Majorcan driver, is saying, while en-route, from this sunless, March, 1973, Majorcan morning, for lunch at a nearby luxury hotel at a small fishing village ,on the northern shore of the island, where,he continues:

"Yes — they are family friends, who live there. They own a new restaurant, where Majorcan food is served at its best. Now, I don't wish to interfere with your plans. I'm only saying, few visitors know where to go for real Majorcan food. Hotels like you're going to — well, serve meals you can get at any such hotel ,any where . . ."

...IVia an eye-conference, my husband and I change our plans, and in unison tell him:

"Put this is wonderful, Josef. We'd be happy to lunch at your friend's restaurant:"

Anticipation grows as he skillfully drives through vast, level acres of almond orchards; past tiny mountain villages, where "villagers are born, marry, and die, never leaving their boundaries."; we even encounter a snowstorm at a summit! Now, without warning, Puerto Pollensa appears.

As Josef predicted, we are warmly greeted and made welcome by the father, mother, three, tall sons and two, pretty daughter — the Majorcan owners of the Ca'n Pep restaurant...an ebullient, ebullistic family affair.

We are invited to sit on three-legged Majorcan handmade olivewood chairs clustered about 6 brightly olive-wood burning, corner fire-place, in the entrance foyer.

"Lunch will be ready, shortly" they are all saying, while "villagers are born, marry, and die, never leaving their boundaries."; we even encounter a snowstorm at a summit! Now, without warning, Puerto Pollensa appears.

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Saturday, May 11

Aries (March 21-April 19) If you want to look good in the eyes of others today, make doubly sure you think of their interests, not just your own.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) Be certain you know what you're talking about when someone seeks advice. This person will follow your suggestions to the letter.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) Someone you've met recently looks very interesting, but you don't know enough about him yet. Allow ample time to get acquainted.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) You won't be as definite about your answers today as you should. This will leave others wondering what you're really thinking.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) If exercising today, don't try a lot of fancy routines you're not up to handling. You could throw something out of whack.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You're not as careful about your possessions now as you normally are. Something you treasure could get lost or broken.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Although you may seem calm and collected, deep-down you're not as sure of yourself as you should be. Relax.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) If you have a game plan for today, stick to it. Making sudden changes in your schedule won't work out half as well.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You're known for taking a chance and usually having things work out for you in the end. Long shots won't pay off today.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Make up your mind as to what you're going after, and if you change goals, thethback again. It's no wonder results aren't what you hoped for.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Have alternate plans handy so you won't be caught in the lurch. Something you're thinking about doing won't come off.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) Don't get too involved at this time with new, unfamiliar interests. There are some possible complications you're not taking into account.

Poor Circulation Swells Up Ankles

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Some times in your column please include a letter concerning the causes of swelling or puffiness around the ankle bone.

I have had this problem more so in the past five or six years. If I do not have a job that requires an unusual amount of standing. My ankles are worse at night than early in the morning.—Mrs. J.T.

The problem is not uncommon, and generally speaking it is more common in women than in men.

It can be the result of many conditions, especially in pregnancy or in diseases of the kidney or the heart. However, since these conditions would probably have exhibited themselves in other ways, they might be ruled out in your case.

Such subtle swelling, though, generally implies a disturbance in the circulation of the legs, and since circulation does tend to lessen in the extremities with the years, this might be your problem.

Such swellings often are associated with varicose veins, but are just as often found to be caused by such simple things as tight circular garters or girdles.

If you do not visit a doctor regularly, symptoms such as the swollen ankles could be a sign of trouble that you'd be wise to get to your doctor for a checkup to determine the definite cause or causes.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I had a miscarriage two months ago. I didn't have a D. and C. since the doctor didn't think it was necessary. Is it possible I can't get pregnant through not having a D. and C.? I haven't had a discharge or any pain.—Mrs. R.K.

Sometimes some tissue may remain attached to the uterus after a miscarriage and prevent pregnancy, even though causing no symptoms. I'd talk it over with your doctor; he didn't think it was a D. and C. was necessary, but having a D. and C. would eliminate that possibility now.

The queen was played from dummy but East did not cover with the king. At this point South should have ruffed home. All he had to do was to lead a heart to his ace and then play trumps but South didn't bother to get rid of hearts and of dummy's way. He just led a trump immediately.

East had been using the "H" of "ARCH." How can I beat this contract? He visualized the possibility of South's exact holding and rose with his ace of trumps. After that he had but his deuce of clubs and once more dummy's good hearts went to bed.

By Oswald and James Jacoby.

Both sides in the team game reached five diamonds and both South players failed to make it.

The first one couldn't help himself. West's king of clubs lead produced the deuce from East but after ruffing declarer also West continued with the ace. South had to ruff in dummy and the three-zero trump break made it impossible for him to enter dummy to cash good hearts.

The second declarer had a chance. East played the jack of clubs at trick one. West headed; decided it was a suit preference call for a spade lead and led one.

Veteran Mason Honored

William Slack—73 Sidney Street, Belleville, Deputy Grand Master of the Prince Edward Masonic District was honored at a testimonial dinner held May 2 at the Masonic Temple on Dundas Street.

Mayor Jeffrey said she recognized many local citizens present, men who took an active part in commerce, business, and in the professional and civic life of the city.

She congratulated The Belleville Lodge on its long service to the community and said she was honored to be invited on the night that Bill Slack, a Christian gentleman and worthy citizen, was honored.

Among the guests were 11 Grand Lodge officers, 35 past district deputy grand masters, the masters of all lodges in the Prince Edward district as well as the deputy grand masters of Peterborough, St. Lawrence and Ontario districts.

In replying to the toast to the Grand Lodge, Mr. Slack deplored the fact that while mankind was advancing rapidly in scientific discovery and technical know-how, he was slipping morally.

"Unless we raise our moral standards, the time will come when scientists will question whether man is fit to be trusted with the secrets of the universe, whether man will use his new power to make earth a Paradise or destroy himself."

Mr. Slack said man has three personalities — the man he thinks he is, the man who others think he is, and the man he really is, inculcated in Free Masonry."

Following the dinner, Taylor K. Franklin, former bursar at Albert College, was received into The Belleville Lodge. Ray Gunsolus introduced Mr. Franklin as a personal friend of Mr. Slack, and "We need to bring the three personalities into focus and harmony; this we can do if we practise daily the lesson of long standing - was Howard Burley.

Planting Delay Could Be Costly

Cold backward weather together with spring rains are delaying spring seeding operations for Quinte district farmers, many of whom have still to get operations under way.

Also the cooler than normal April weather has retarded grass growth with result that spring pasture is being delayed.

With planting of corn expected to be up anywhere from 10 to 20 per cent this year as a result of high feed costs, the lateness of the season could be costly.

Farmers claim that for every day corn planting is delayed after May 10, there is a reduction of one bushel per acre in the crop harvested.

One area farmer, contemplating planting about 500 acres of corn this year, has still to get planting underway.

Planting of the above acreage, even on a continuous 24-hours-day schedule, would take at least 12 days, so the crop loss in this case could be considerable.

Bill Langstaffe, vice-president of the Hastings county Federation of Agriculture, said that with today's rain, planting operations would be again delayed for another couple of days.

To catch up on seeding operations once planting does get under way, Mr. Langstaffe sees many farmers working on a round-the-clock basis.

Work-at-home Schemes Defrauding 'Customers'

NEW YORK (CP) — The ad promised a chance to earn $50 for every 100 envelopes stuffed "with our circulars." In short, 50 cents an envelope.

It asked for a $14 registration fee.

The company involved is one of several operating in the United States which are talking the public with deceptive work-at-home schemes.

The Better Business Bureau says there have been complaints from Canadians who were victims of work-at-home type.

Many of the schemes are spawned in Newark, N.J., described as the work-at-home capital.

Woodrow Wirsig, president of the Better Business Bureau of Metropolitan New York, Inc., said six companies in particular have been the subject of many consumer inquiries and some complaints. All six failed to meet bureau standards.

Wirsig said this year "promises to see more of these schemes than ever before because people will become more vulnerable."

He says many persons, frightened at the prospect of job layoffs during a recessionary period, "will worry as they see the buying power of their dollars eroded by inflation.

"The promoters of work-at-home schemes know this and they're waiting in the wings to take advantage of the situation."

Usually, work-at-home offers are advertised through direct mail flyers or in the classified sections of newspapers or in hunting, fishing and other magazines in their "business opportunities" sections.

"However, there's no job being offered," Wirsig said. "The scheme is meant to get consumers to send in registration fees. What they get for that fee is not a job but a list of companies that allegedly offer work a home."

One company said part-time typists could earn $25, $50, $100 or more a week at home. It called on "honest and sincere persons" to remit "the small sum of $7" for the special homeworkers' program.

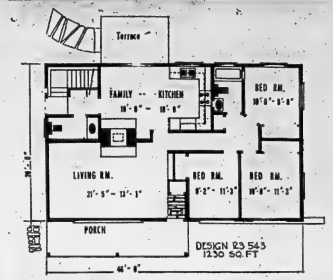
Another company with a similar promise asked for $3 for its kit.

Complaints said a third company advertised home work but failed to supply it. Instead they got the list of companies that allegedly provide work.

The offers by two other companies for stuffing envelopes involved businesses in Newark. They asked registration fees of $12 and $14.

One of them has been the subject of about 100 consumer complaints and legal action by four government agencies, the Better Business Bureau said.

Some of the companies list only post office box numbers for addresses.



Wirsig said that consumers anxious to augment their incomes should stay away from dubious offers.

How does one detect a dubious offer?

"If it requires that you send money before anything else happens, forget it," Wirsig said.

Home of the Week

Any family contemplating building a home would do well to take a long look at this compact little house which encompasses 1250 sq. ft. of living area and has an "out to out" of 40 feet.

Dollar for dollar there is a lot of living here. The three bedrooms and bath are tucked neatly to one side while the rest of the house is given over to more active living.

Fireplace with double hearth is open to both living room and family kitchen. Large windows give a bright and cheery atmosphere throughout.

Side entrance is conveniently between washroom and basement stairs. This design lends itself readily to the addition of a garage beside the living room.

Design B3-546, 1135 sq. ft. has a similar interior, with a double garage but no fireplace.

Plans for design B3-543 cost $25 for the first set, $11 each additional set and are supplied by return mail. Two new books "Home Designs for Canadians" are available for $1.00 each or by mail (tax exempt). Book 1 presents designs for homes up to 1600 sq. ft. for 1 storey and split level, 1850 sq. ft. for one and one half and 2 storey. Book 2 includes larger homes and vacation homes. (Ontario residents add 7 per cent Sales Tax on all purchases).

Dairy Farmers Dwindle

BRAMPTON, Ont. (CP) — Rising costs are forcing many area dairy farmers to get out of the milk business, says Ralph Dunton, local secretary for the Ontario Milk Marketing Board. He says there were 300 dairy farmers in Peel County two years ago but the number now is about 170.

The Date Is Wrong

BRANTFORD, Ont. (CP) — A plaque mounted on a local store announces the first long-distance telephone call was made from that location Aug. 3, 1877. There's only one thing wrong. The telephone hadn't been invented by that time. The call was actually made Aug. 3, 1876. The error had been unnoticed since 1946.

Shaw Didn't Inspire

By AL ZABAS
Staff Reporter

Shaw Festival's production of The Devil's Disciple came to Belleville for a one-night performance Thursday, but it is doubtful whether the evening of theatre will leave a lasting impression.

George Bernard Shaw's three-act melodrama is an uninspired play, and, though competently played in this production, remains unimaginative.

Can even those who feel compelled to bow before the stature of a Shaw claim the play kept from the script's pages or the stage's boards? And further, can the necessarily house at Centennial Secondary claim the production created those memorable moments that cling unshakably to the imagination?

One suspects that few of such moments will remain, but it will not be for want of trying by most members of the Shaw Festival cast.

After last night's performance, jointly sponsored by the Quinte Arts Council and The Intelligencer, the troupe moves on to Kingston before returning to its home base — a-on-the-lake house. The Shaw Festival players have just returned from a 54-week tour of the Maritimes.

In the play that presents the story of the reformation of reprobate Richard Dudgeon, the greatest disappointments were the performances of Norman Welsh and Donnii Blythe as Reverend Anderson and his wife, Judith. One of the most dramatic scenes in the play — the minister's realization that he - good Dudgeon has taken his place on the English gallows — is lost among the persistent earnestness and hyper-hysterical performance of Donnii Blythe and the muddying of lines by Welsh.

The shock value of Anderson's final realization that he has been saved, and yet victimized through obligation, falls flat.

Alan Scarfe could have been less convincing as Dick Dudgeon, but must be given credit for enlivening the play upon his appearance.

And what of the delightful General Burgoyne, the British commander of troops fighting to retain the American colonies in 1777 —

Canadian stage veteran Tony Van Bridge spoke the general's words with kindness and elegance. Alternately amused and intrigued by Dick Dudgeon in the courtroom scene, Mr. Bridge's control, his command of his role, was impeccable.

It is difficult to imagine a better portrayal of Mayor Swindon than that of James Valentine. His characterization of the nervous prig, the mouther of British army bamalities, is at first brought more than just a chuckle to Bellevillian lips.

In another comparatively small role, Christy, brother of Dick Dudgeon, was portrayed by Heath Lamberts as a likeable buffoon.

And yet, in the final act, twin shadows of the hangman's noose stretched across the whiteness, hovering over the courtroom proceedings.

There, by everyone's admission, were a mere formality in Dick Dudgeon's road to the last trap door. A nice touch by lighting designer Lynn Hyde and director Brian Murray

Packing a Gun

After Thursday's performance of George Bernard Shaw's three-act melodrama The Devil's IExciple, production crew member Laurie Freeman packs his pistols in preparation for the Shaw Festival's trip to Kingston today. After a two-day run in the Limestone City the troupe moves back to home base at Niagara-on-the-Lake.

Black Diamond Cheese Incident

Union members were picketing the warehouse because some Black Diamond trucks were on the property.

Police said the road leading into the warehouse was private property and picketing on private property is unlawful.

The husband of one of the pickets, William Cumbley of RR 3 Belleville, told the Intelligencer he was asked to move also, and refused, claiming he was on public property. He was in his car, preparing coffee for the pickets. Mr. Cumbley said the police officer threatened him with arrest, but took no action. The staff sergeant on duty at police headquarters this morning said Mr. Cumbley was "only indirectly involved".

"A police officer was very rude to us," said Miss Cumbley, local union treasurer. "I phoned the duty sergeant and complained and he was very understanding. He said he would talk to the officer."

Driver Escapes Injury

MADOC — The lone occupant of his car, Earl Alexander, 22, of RR 2, Madoc, escaped serious injury Thursday evening when he lost control of the vehicle, ran off the road and damaged the car to the extent of $1,000.

The accident happened just west of the Black River Rd. bridge on Highway 7. Mr. Alexander was treated for bruises.

William R. Thomonon, 20, of Cannifton Rd., Belleville, was arrested by police around 2:30 p.m. last March 23 after the car he was driving collided with a vehicle that was making a left hand turn onto Station Street from Memorial Park.

When he was arrested, Thompson had a breathalizer reading of 210 milligrams of alcohol per 100 millimeters of blood.

Damage arising from the accident was estimated at $1,000.

Students Boost Jobless Total

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Students seeking summer jobs have boosted Canada Manpower staffilists on the number of people registered for work in the Belleville area.

At the end of April there were exactly 1,403 people seeking work through the city's Canada Manpower Centre.

This compared with 1,397 in March.

The number of students registered totalled 308 — which means the number of regular registrations in April was 1,116, down slightly less than 16 per cent.

In April 1973, when student job seekers also first began to register, the total was 1,500.

The centre services the city, Hastings County and Amelisburgh township.

A Manpower official said the local economy was generally holding stable, although requests for construction workers were down.

However, this might "not necessarily" mean less construction, since employers could be hiring the same people who worked for them last year.

The number of students seeking work — for whom a separate office has been opened in the D.L. Sterrie building housing the Theatre Guild's Pinnacle Playhouse was down from April 1973, when 664 were registered.

Coroner's Jury Absolves Coast Guard Cutter Crew

By COLIN ERUCE
Staff Reporter

PICTON — A five-man coroner's jury absolved the coaswain and two dead crew members of a coast guard rescue boat of any fault in the Sept. 6 drowning mishap where the two men lost their lives on the Bay of Quinte.

The jury's single recommendation was that "larger, more seaworthy" craft be acquired for use service with the coast guard.

The three-man crew set out in their 70-foot-cutter, 30-foot cutter last fall responding to distress calls from a private sail boat stranded without a rudder.

According to a summary prepared following the incident, the two set out at 3 p.m. and while on route were notified the mission had been terminated.

Radioing Kingston, the crew of the stranded vessel reported they were making progress with a makeshift rudder and needed no further assistance. Further in the report "the coxswain (the incident's only survivor) decided to continue until he could observe the yacht." This information was re-iterated during coxswain Ken Campbell's testimony. Mr. Campbell has since retired from Coast Guard duty.

Coroner Dr. Brock Nugent said: "Thursday's inquest was a re-hash of an already well-investigated incident and there were three basic areas of inquiry."

The inquiry deals with the seaworthiness of boat and crew, communications with shore personnel and safety equipment aboard Cutter 117," he said.

Following his account of the ordeal which stretched over 12 hours from the time the ship floundered to finally reaching help ashore, Mr. Campbell sat with his wife while expert ministry of transportation officials vouched for the design and condition of the cutter.

After being retrieved from 74 feet of water, Chief Petice Edward County's Athol Bay, the cutter was subjected to MOT inspection at Prescott where it is presently being refitted for service, officials say.

According to investigator Captain Brian Thorne, "the hull was in good shape ... all is the seat of in the boat was designed to do." According to him, the crew took the necessary steps to activate bilge and back up pumps but two large waves which broke over the sides were too much for the pumps to handle, eventually forcing the coxswain to issue an abandon ship order one mile off shore.

The coxswain, during testimony, said: "When these waves broke over us, I immediately started the crew I would attempt to ground her at the nearest point of land."

One mile off shore. "We clearly couldn't make it, the boat couldn't survive," he said.

Captain H.D. Bould, coast guard officer at CFB Trenton, said during a recess he expected the same boat would be back in service at Trenton.

Mr. Campbell, awaiting the jury decision, said "in a storm you always pray for another 25 feet of boat. She's just not big for us. I won't work in one again."

Of particular interest to the jury was the boat's communication links with Trenton, apparently ineffective during the mishap. Altogether the boat carries five radio links employing various frequencise and channels.

During the incident radio messages had not be signalled to Kingston and relayed to the Rescue Co-Ordination Centre at CFB Trenton. Further, following the last radio message at 8:30 p.m. when base operations left the scene, communication was terminated, radio communication ceased.

Captain E.E. Rona, on duty at the rescue centre, told the jury "I was not surprised when we did not hear from the vessel."

The captain said there were a number of blind spots around the county where it is difficult to get a signal back to Trenton."

It was not until the morning following the sinking that Mr. Campbell was able to reach a farm where he found assistance.

Since the incident a standing order has been issued that communication with base must be made every 30 minutes. If this is not done, for the next 30 minutes bailo and cutter are to continue trying. Following this if still unsuccessful, a full at-sea search will be called, said Captain Rona.

MOT expert Captain Thorne testified all the radio equipment with the exception of one device was turned on and switched to the appropriate channel. The one that was not was thought to be jarred from the correct channel through the impact of sinking.

The jury questioned coxswain Campbell as to why the crew did not use the Inflatable raft, stowed in a metal box on board ship. Mr. Campbell said during the fight to keep the cutter afloat all hands were busy watching the radar, operating the pumps and manning the helm.

The raft is considered during salvage operations and according to Captain Thorne was "in excellent condition." The jury questioned why the cutter was carrying a raft that had to be inflated using a foot pump and not a self-inflating device.

Captain Bould told jurors the raft and all other safety equipment met with ministry requirements. He said "depending on the man doing the purgaing, it could be inflated following their last five minutes."

Mr. Campbell said he maintained contact with the two other men in the water for a brief time but the three drifted apart: Each was wearing a life jacket and a self-inflating flotation device.

In the testimony of Ontario Provincial Police Officer L. R. Knox, the flotation device worn by Maurice Jones did not inflate and the device worn by the second Eric Breau was partially filled with water. Mr. Campbell said both inflated perfectly.

Both men were found afloat.

Captain Bould told the jury, "if the boat had been inflated, it's likely the other two men would have been saved."

Following the incident, an order has been issued that rafts will be stowed where they can be carried stowed in a locker but strapped to the boat in an inflated state, said the captain.

"It's tough about it since it happened and I can't think of a thing that I could have done differently," said 64-year-old Mr. Campbell.

Mr. Campbell, a 30-year veteran of the Canadian air force, spent two years in the forces crewing cutters like the 112 and for the past seven years has served with the coast guard.

"He's very experienced," said Captain Bould. "I wouldn't have anyone that wasn't.

The jury deliberated for one hour before recommending larger boats for Bay of Quinte service. The recommendation will go to the province's chief coroner and Dr. Nugent expects a copy will also be sent to the Coast Guard and ministry of transportation for their consideration.

Coxswain and Mrs. Campbell await verdict

Jury Deliberated Hour

PICTON — The five - man coroner's jury deliberated for an hour into the drowning of the coast guard employee last fall, absolving the crew of any fault in the mishap.

Jurors were Art Thompson, a clerk with the ministry of natural resources stationed at Outlet Park, Doug Caley, an accountant with Lake Ontario Cement, Ray Cable, a lineman with Ontario Hydro, Leland Gunsolley, a service manager for a Picton car dealership and jury foreman X. P. Mayhew, a local jeweller.

Coroner Dr. Brock Nugent has called upon the Ontario Provincial Police to try and acquire jurors with some expertise in marine activities.

The jury was permitted to ask questions of the witnesses, following their testimony. Crown Attorney Richard Stanley conducted the witness examination.

Potter Park Up in Air

By AL ZABAS
Staff Reporter

Belleville Mayor Robin Jeffrey said Thursday she is "completely disappointed" in Thurlow council's refusal to pick up $39,029 of the township's share of the $770,000 cost of the Potter Park trailer park by the Moira River Conservation Authority.

Mrs. Jeffrey said she believe already been alloted by Belleville, Sidney and Sidney township ($19,029).

The additional tariff will pick up another $19,030 of the cost. The province is expected to provide a 75 per cent subsidy in 1974 though it is till unclear whether the same percentage will be continued over the three-year term of the purchase.

As yet, whether Thurlow township's refusal to pay its proposed share will kill the project is questionable.

"Time is running out," said Mayor Jeffrey. "We were able to get a 10-day extension on the option to purchase once before. Unless Mr. Potter is willing to give us another extention, the option runs out next Wednesday."

Unfortunately, she said, the township mayor has not left much time to look for other sources of funds.

Reeve Gordon Wilman said today, Council is not going along with any more money. Councillors figured that they had given enough and that was as far as they would go.

Alarm Box

Thursday, May 9, minor car fire at 262 John St., at 8:06 p.m. no damage.

which the no-go decision was made, Reeve Wilman said he felt a need existed for the park but Sidney funds are limited.

Belleville council has not yet had the opportunity to discuss the issue at length, but Mayor Jeffrey said she doubts council will pick up Thurlow's share of the park property's price. The matter will be settled at Monday's council meeting, she said.

Reiterating her disagreement, she said, "We bought the city was bearing a heavy burden, and we were trying to make it as light as possible for our township neighbors.

"Really, what I'm looking at is losing the whole thing because of a small $5,000 cost in 1974 for Thurlow," she said.

Under provisions proposed by the authority, the township would pay approximately $3,000 per year if the province subsidized the park purchase at 75 per cent. If a 75 per cent grant is not forthcoming over three-year term, the township's share would increase to $19,029 from $18,747.

What steps the conservation authority will take to pull the land purchase out of the fire is yet unclear.

Authority chairman Guy Hughes said Thursday any action the group will take will be decided tonight at a meeting of the executive.

"This thing will be hashed over and there may be something that can be done," he said.

Break-in

"Police says a window was smashed in a back door. A window that operated the general office complex from the administrative offices was also broken and a cupboard broken into.

Choir Joins in Elijah

On Monday and Tuesday nights, May 13 and 14, the oratorio Elijah will be presented at Bridge Street United Church starting at 8 p.m. This week the first rehearsal using the combined choir and orchestra was held. The production is under the direction of Robert H. Reid, shown putting members of the presentation through their paces. Highlighting the two performances will be Hazelanne Reid, soprano, Catherine Robbin, contralto, Larry Marshall, tenor and as Elijah, James Betchel, bass. A 100 voice-choir and selected members of the Kingston Symphony Orchestra will make this a standing-room-only affair.

Clarke Does it All for Flyers

BOSTON (CP) — Assistant-coach Mike Nykoluk of Philadelphia Flyers said there may paid off.

But it took a goal by Andre, who nobody does things all the time Dupont with 52 seconds remain- a second-period skirmish with like Bobby does."

He was talking about centre Bobby Clarke whose goal at 12:01 of the first sudden-death overtime period Thursday night gave the Flyers a 3-2 win over Boston Bruins to even their Stanley Cup final at one game apiece.

The third game in the best-of-seven National Hockey League final will be played Sunday afternoon in Philadelphia. Game time is 4 p.m. EDT.

Clarke, the Philadelphia captain, was on the ice for all but a few seconds of the overtime, winning key faceoffs and leading the Flyers' forechecking when the end came.

"Dave Schultz got it, once. Bill Flett had a shot at it, then I had a shot at it.

"It came right back out to me and I shot it again, and it spun around on the play and didn't see what happened. I just saw it go over the boards."

Once again, as they did in the first game, the Bruins controlled two-goal lead in the first period on scores from Wayne Cashman and Phil Esposito.

The Flyers started to take the play away in the second period, and while the Bruins didn't fold as they did in the previous two test, Philadelphia's persistent forechecking, Clarke's mastery faceoff circle and goalie Gerry Parent's brilliant play t o keep the Bruins off balance.

Gilbert, who was involved in assisted on the play.

Clarke in- misconduct for going to the rear of the goalie, was also confused about the winning goal.

"I made the save on his first shot and thought the way my stick was placed the rebound would go over the goal or behind it," said Gilbert. "But the rebound went right back to Clarke."

Parent's biggest save of the night came just moments before Clarke's winner when he stopped Johnny Bucyk when the Boston captain was sent in alone by Gregg Sheppard.

"I saw him coming," said the Philadelphia goalie. "He was moving so fast I knew he'd have to make the first move and when he did I moved to cover the open net."

Parent was forced to make a number of other big saves in the overtime period.

It was left up to Schultz, who had been riding the bench in the overtime session, to engineer the tie-breaker.

The big winger had been on the ice only 25 seconds in the entire period. He beat the Boston defence to the puck in the corner to Gilbert's right and fed to Flett who got a shot at the Bruin goal.

Earlier in he game, he tried to beat a tattoo on Boston rookie Andre Savard but wound up fighting to a draw with Terry O'Reilly.

Ken Hodge felt the Bruins lost some of their punch when they lost Cashman via the third-man in rule at the end of the second period.

Dave Forbes filled in well," Hodge said. "But Cash has played with Phil and I for seven or eight years so he had to be missed."

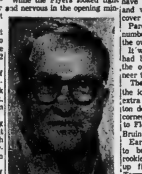
Shero Gives In To Superstition

BOSTON (CP) — Coach Fred Shero believes a $1 investment was good big dividends Thursday night for Philadelphia Flyers.

Shero, who gave a boy the money for a newspaper he didn't want, was commentator Ron Bruins 3-2 in overtime to even their Stanley Cup final at one game each.

"I think the newsboy brought me luck," said Shero, who tipped the youth after the Flyers won the first game 3-2 Tuesday night.

Shero premised him the stick of the player that scored the winning goal. He wanted a stick from Bobby Orr the older night, but I said I'd get him one from Bobby Clarke.



Clarke scored the winning goal, his second of the game, at 12:01 of the first sudden-death overtime period to give the Flyers their first victory in Boston since Nov. 12, 1967.

Defenceman Andre Dupont of the Flyers, who sent the game into overtime with a goal at 19:08 of the final period of regulation play, went into a rapid dance step when he saw the puck enter the net.

"Everyone would have been disappointed if we hadn't scored," Dupont said. they'd "All I heard was Clarke yelling

Clarke checked Ken Hodge the boards, fed the puck to Rick MacLeish, who relayed to Dupont.

While the Flyers looked tight and nervous in the opening min-

"I didn't feel nervous in the overtime. We had outplayed them all night, so why be nervous."

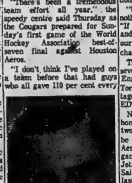
Cashman was sent off for being third man in during an altercation between Boston goalie Gilles Gilbert and Orest Kindrachuk.

Gilbert, who was involved in that resulted



"I don't fault Cash on the penalty. They ran at Gilbert three times before he stepped in."

Team Effort Means Success

CHICAGO (CP) — Ralph Backstrom has spent 16 years in professional hockey but says he never has played for a team that can match Chicago Cougars for desire.

"There's been a tremendous team effort all year," the speedy centre said Thursday as the Cougars prepared for Sunday's first game of the World Hockey Association best-of-seven final against Houston Aeros.

"I don't think I've played on a team before that had guys who all gave 110 per cent every game. That's a tribute to playing-coach Pat Stapleton. He has been a leader in motivata the guys game after game."

Stapleton is one of the prime reasons why the Cougars have been transformed from the worst team in the WHA last season into a championship finalist this year.

But his biggest task faces him: Keep the underdog Cougars hot for the West Division champion Aeros whom Backstrom calls "probably the best team in the WHA."

"They're the best-balanced team in the WHA," Stapleton said. "And they had a tremendous road record.

"We have a specific plans on how to play them. We'll simply have to outwork them."

Backstrom, Chicago's leading point getter during the regular season and in the playoffs, said Houston, led by the Howe family, is explosive.

"We'll have to try to contain them and grind it out," he said. "If the games get high scoring, they'll beat us. We can't afford to open up because they have too much offensive power."

"I may have three solid lines, nothing spectacular," he said. "If we just play our game, and can get Houston to play our game, we'll stand a good chance."

The Cougars, upset winners in seven-game series over New England Whalers and Toronto Toros, have a definite advantage going into the 7:30 p.m. EDT game.

Not only do they have the home-ice advantage for the first two games the second one will be played Wednesday—but the Aeros, who needed just nine games to sweep by Winnipeg Jets and Minnesota Fighting Saints, have not played for the last 10 days.

"By Sunday, it'll be 12 days between games for us," said Houston coach Bill Dineen. "We've worked out daily since last Saturday with a day off Wednesday, but with such a long layoff, you can't tell how the players will react."

Backstrom said: "They won't be sharp in the first couple of games and we'll have to take advantage of that. It'll be a tremendous psychological lift to us if we can win the first game."

Coaches Upset By Dickering

CALGARY (CP) — Wheeling and dealing by players and agents Thursday detracted from preparation by St. Catharines Black Hawks and Quebec Remparts for tonight's sudden-death game in the 1974 Memorial Cup Junior hockey semi-final.

Coach Bob Turner of Regina Pats, who meet tonight's survivor in the final Sunday, and owner Hap Emms of St. Catharines said agents should be barred from talking to prospective professionals during the junior playoffs.

"It's tough enough to keep everything level," said Turner, who ordered at least one agent to stop talking with his players until after Sunday night.

"They're parasites," said Turner, "especially those agents who move in after somebody has spent two or three years teaching a kid, taking the bad with the good.

Agents have been a problem for several seasons, but their presence is more prominent this week because of an agreement by the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association that the National Hockey League and World Hockey Association can draft 18-year-old players of exceptional talent. The graduating age for most juniors is 19.

Two of the top under-age prospects, Pat Price of Saskatoon Blades and Wilf Palement of St. Catharines, were selected as the top choices of NHL expansion franchises in Washington and Kansas City, but it was not known whether either has signed.

Hap Emms, whose son Paul coaches St. Catharines, said he did not know whether Palement has signed. Price, who spent several hours Wednesday with general manager Joe Crozier of the WHA Vancouver Blazers, refused to comment.

Quebec is the only club not ing a practice run.

greatly disturbed by the presence of agents in the hotel where all three clubs are staying.

"You can't tell a man not to talk to any other man," said coach Marc Picard. "We can only try to keep them out of the players' rooms and not let them interfere with the things we are doing as a team."

Two highly touted juniors, Dennis Sobchuk of Regina and Jacques Locas of Quebec, have signed long-term contracts with Cincinnati of the WHA.

The Remparts' 5-3 victory over Regina Wednesday forced tonight's playoff game.

Pat Price Denies He Has Signed

CALGARY (CP) — Defenceman Pat Price of Saskatoon Blades of the Western Canada Hockey League said Thursday he has not signed a contract with any National Hockey League club but he did not deny negotiations' have been held with the new Washington Capitals franchise of the NHL.

"You'll have to see my agent," said Price, who also is on the negotiation list of Vancouver Blazers of the World Hockey Association.

Price and Ron Chipperfield of Brandon Wheat Kings of the WCHL spent several hours Wednesday in discussions with Joe Crozier, general manager of the Blazers.

Wilf Palement, brilliant winger of St. Catharines Black Hawks of the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior series, has been drafted by the new Kansas City entry of the NHL.

Hap Emms, owner of the Black Hawks, said: "I was pretty well aware he had been drafted but I don't know whether he has signed and I don't know whether he has even spoken with Sid Abel."

The presence of agents and professional hockey officials has complicated things all week for players and junior officials here for the Memorial Cup Canadian junior championship series.

Emms ordered Palement's agent, Wilf Kaplan, not to bother Palement or any other Black Hawk player this week.

"You can't tell any man not to talk to any other man," said Picard. "We can only try to keep them out of the players rooms and not let them interfere with the things we are doing as a team.

TORONTO (CP) — General manager Don Narrow of Toronto Argonauts has signed a three-year contract as manager of the Canadian Football League team.

His post has been expanded because of increased planning needed to prepare for an expected Canadian National Exhibition stadium, home of the Argonauts. About 20,000 seats will be added for the 1976 season.

"The filling of 55,000 seats requires a totally different type of organization than that for the present 32,000 seats," Narrow said. "My job as managing director will be larger in scope than what I've been doing because we are enlarging our staff considerably."

Ellis Memorial Pace and Trot

Tonight's card of racing at the Quinte Exhibition Raceway promises to be a good one for the patrons of the Spring Edition of the Quinte Ex. One of the main reasons for the good card scheduled is the running of the Richard Ellis Memorial Pace and Trot.

The race will go for a purse of $500, and has drawn several top notch horses and drivers.

Gerry Walsh will be behind Royal Mac in the third spot, with Al Vance driving his own Peaches out of fourth position.

Rusty Pete was the only winner at the Belleville track in last Friday's card of the seven starters tonight—taking last week's featured eighth race in a time of 2:14:2 on the very heavy track.

Post time for the first race is 8 p.m. Admission to tonight's card is included in the admission to the grounds for the exhibition.

Olympics Blank Whitley's 3-0

TRENTON (Special) — Despite the weather conditions which kept outdoor sports to a minimum in the Quinte area Thursday, Golden Mile Restaurant Olympics of Belleville and Whitley Insurance of Trenton played their scheduled game of Quinte Soccer Association match here.

Surprisingly enough, the two teams were able to come up with some fine soccer in spite of the steady downpour.

With Zoltan Vigh, the former Toronto Ukranian goalkeeper playing a solid game, Golden Mile blanked the home side 3-0. Vigh made his big save on Whitley's Henry Somerveld with the Belleville team in front 1-0 in the first half.

The Trenton forward was in home free but Vigh sprawled full-length to keep the ball out.

Golden Mile had more than sound goalkeeping to thank for its win. A strong team effort got the job done.

Belleville pressed from the start but it wasn't until the game was 15 minutes old that the Olympics' forward line combined on a scoring play on which Nick Del Grosso found the mark.

It was the only score of the first half.

As the rain increased in tempo after the interval, so did the Olympics' attack.

Golden Mile forwards gave Whitley defenders a stern test. Fifteen minutes into the half, Dario D'Anna broke through but was hauled down by Trenton centre half Bob Arsenault.

Olympics rounded out the scoring in this game when the visitors executed some fancy passing. D'Anna was the goal scorer after Nesterovski, Manuel Mendes, Steven Edwards and Robbie Foster had finished a demonstration of combination play.

Whitley's never stopped trying. D'Anna's goal might have deflated other teams but the Insurance squad kept plugging away and gave Vigh and his defenders some anxious moments before it was all over.

Olympics make their next league start next Thursday at Zwick's Island pitch in Belleville, meeting Belleville Parsons in a 6.15 p.m. match.

New Deal For Ealey

HAMILTON (CP) — Quarterback Chuck Ealey, who threatened to quit Hamilton Tiger-Cats because of an increase in the Eastern Football Conference schedule, has been given a new one-year contract.

Ealey, from University of Toledo, said he would leave the team because of an increase to 16 games from 14 in the eastern portion of the Canadian Football League schedule.

He said he signed a contract with a 14-game schedule and should be compensated for having to play an extra two.

When general manager Ralph Sazio turned down the request, Ealey and nine other Hamilton players said they would pursue the matter in court. Hamilton lawyer Henry Katz is expected to use Ealey's case as a test for the others—Tony Gabriel, Larry Brame, Al Brenner, Mie Walker, Steve Conley, Jerome Gantt, Bruce Smith, Bob Richardson and John Williams.

Terms of Ealey's contract were not released, but he was making about $20,000 a year. He was CFL rookie of the year in 1972.

Katz announced the signing Thursday.

Ealey signed a three-year contract prior to February, 1972, when the decision to extend the Eastern Conference schedule was made. Williams did the same, but the others signed after that date.

The others say, however, that the club did not inform them of the change.

Shot Up the Middle Spoils No-hit Bid

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

There's a big difference between a no-hitter and a one-hitter. Just ask pitcher Don Sutton of Los Angeles Dodgers.

With one out in the second inning, John Grubb of San Diego Padres bounced a ground ball up the middle that just topped off the glove of shortstop Bill Russell for a single.

It wasn't a big hit. But to Sutton, it must have seemed like a 600-foot home run.

"I really wanted to pitch a no-hitter," said Sutton who pitched Los Angeles to a 6-0 National League baseball victory Thursday night. "But I can't complain about the hit Grubb got tonight. I threw him a change-up and he did what a good hitter should do—he hit it up the middle."

Elsewhere in the major leagues, Kansas City Royals downed Texas Rangers 6-1; Pittsburgh Pirates beat Houston Astros 4-1; Chicago Cubs topped Atlanta Braves 3-1 and Boston Red Sox blanked New York Yankees 2-0.

"This was the best game I pitched this year," said Sutton, who shut out the Padres on six hits opening days. "I was proud of this game because it's something to pitch a one-hitter when you're facing people like Grubb, Nate Colbert, Bobby Tolan and Willie McCovey.

Sutton, who owns two other one-hit efforts, struck out five and walked two.

Marty Pattin retired 19 straight batters after Dave Nelson's leadoff bunt single in the first and went on to record his first save as a Royal with a four-hitter in American League play.

"I didn't think it (victory No. 1) would ever come," said Pattin, who was dealt to the Royals by the Red Sox in the off-season. "I got the feeling I wasn't helping the team."

The loss dropped Texas .003 percentage points behind Chicago and into a tie for second with California.

Jim Rooker's hitting got in the way of his pitching in the Pittsburgh-Houston game.

"I didn't have my best stuff," Rooker said. "I was just able to keep them off balance and had some lucky breaks. I got tired after doing all that running in the eighth inning."

That's when Rooker doubled and came around on Rennie Stennett's single to finish the Pirates' scoring.

Rooker, 2-2, struck out four and walked four before Dave Giusti came on to face the Astros in the bottom of the eighth.

Tom Kite Uses New Approach

HOUSTON (AP) — Tom Kite parlayed a new putter, a new grip and new-found confidence into a share of the lead in the Houston Open golf tournament Thursday.

"I'm hitting it so well, I'm so confident about my game, I wouldn't be surprised if I shoot three more rounds just as good as this one," Kite said after his 67 tied rookie Wally Armstrong for the first-round lead in the $150,000 event.

Tommy Aaron, Rod Curl, Dwight Nevil, Ed Sneed and Terry Ferraro were at 69 with defending champion Bruce Crampton of Australia in a large group at 70. Ben Kern of London, Ont., shot a 72.

IN MEMORIAM

BRADSHAW — In loving memory of our dear mother, Mrs. Ethel Bradshaw, passed away May 10th, 1969.
Sweet is her memory, loved by many, missed by all.
Those our great sorrow fell,
The silent task we received that well.
No one can ever tell,
Many sad words, always contain,
Loved and respected wherever he went.
His memory is dear,
The one we loved, the one we lost.
He died as he lived everyone's friend.
We hide our tears as we speak his name.
But the ache in our hearts remains the same.
Sadly missed and always remembered by Mom, Dad and family.

PETERS — In loving memory of our dear mother who passed away May 10, 1968.
Sweet is her memory in silence we mourn
And many an hour she is in our thoughts.
A look, a face, a smile we miss
She has gone from our home but not from our hearts.
Sadly missed by Muriel and Ted Wessels and children.

MEADEMAN — In memory of a dear husband and father, Earl Meademan who left us May 10, 1968.
All we have are sweet thoughts of times gone by.
Oh God, WHY did he have to die?
Loved and respected wherever he went.
Happy and smiling, always an comfort.
We will never forget that sad night.
When God left us and met with Heaven's light.
Forever remembered by sister Mary and David.

Union Plans To Pay Idle

TORONTO (CP) — Derrick Morrisey, business representative of the Canadian Food and Allied Workers Union said Thursday that the union will pay full salaries to striking employees of Derrigo Food Market Ltd.

The union also is offering to pay part-time workers $75 a week during the strike, he said, even though they usually receive between $40 and $45 while they are working.

The union is seeking a first contract for about 30 meat cutters and 170 other employees. Morrisey said about 80 workers have taken part in the strike that began May 1.

He said normally the union pays $30 a week strike pay.

Business Rules Proposed

Ontario Bill Provides Fines for Deception

TORONTO (CP) — A law providing fines up to $25,000 for firms engaged in false and misleading business practices was introduced in the Ontario legislature Thursday.

"The act would provide the Ontario consumer with broad protection against deceptive and unfair business practices," said John Clement, minister of consumer and commercial relations.

He said the legislation includes a ready and inexpensive means of redress and legislative authority to impose immediate sanctions on businesses not complying with its terms.

The act prohibits false, misleading or deceptive representations of all products and services sold to consumers.

"In addition, transactions which involve grossly inflated prices, inequity of contract, high pressure sales methods or the consumer's inability to defend his own interests will also be prohibited," Mr. Clement said.

The act also says any agreement entered into by a consumer after a representation has been made to him which includes an unfair practice will be voidable by the consumer.

In addition, suppliers involved in the agreement will be liable to the consumer for the selling price and for any damages incurred because of the unfair practice.

Mr. Clement added that any consumer will be able to press his own case in the courts under the legislation.

"Under the proposed act, my ministry will have the power to investigate, and to issue an order to a company to comply with the terms of the act by ceasing an unfair practice," said Mr. Clement.

The company receiving the order must respond within 15 days if it wishes to dispute the case.

The act also makes provision for applications to a provincial judge to obtain a search warrant if an investigator thinks he needs one to pursue his investigation.

Anyone who furnishes false information to an investigator or obstructs one is liable to a fine of up to $2,000 or one year in jail.

Contested ministerial orders will go before the Commercial Registration Appeals Tribunal and ultimately, appeals can be taken to the courts.

Davis Promises Money For Hospital Settlement

TORONTO (CP) — Premier William Davis told the legislature Thursday the recent settlement for non-professional hospital workers in 11 Toronto hospitals will be used as a guideline for other hospitals in the province.

However, the premier said he cannot assure the house grants to other hospital boards will be the same.

"I can say that the ministry and the government are quite prepared to make available to the hospitals additional funds to see that an equitable situation is arrived at," said Mr. Davis.

Jas. Taylor Wins Approval For Tighter Student Grants

TORONTO (CP) — The public accounts committee of the Ontario legislature unanimously approved Thursday a resolution aimed at tightening control of the student-awards program.

The motion by James Taylor (PC—Prince Edward-Lennox) proposed that the criteria for awarding the grants be set out in government regulations and not by ministerial policy as is done now through the ministry of colleges and universities.

The motion also called for a more detailed review of grants to ensure that they are deserved and being properly used.

The committee heard complaints at its meeting Tuesday that some students were using grant money to take holidays or buy cars.

About 62,000 students received $39 million in grants in 1972-73 with six per cent of those being checked for abuse.

Mr. Taylor's resolution urged legislative amendments to provide penalties for any breaches of the regulations.

He also proposed that cheques for grants to students be distributed to university registrars or someone other than student award officers.

Provincial Auditor Norman Scott said that the student award officer prepare applications for students and should not be the ones to process the cheques.

Ken Williamson, director of the government's special services branch, told the committee that the province collected about $778,000 of $825,000 arising from discrepancies in the student-aid awards program in 1973-74.

He said the collection agency, a branch of the government, services ministry, currently has about $2.8 million in accounts outstanding from all programs. Last year, it collected $815,000.

Arthur Francis, manager of the agency, said student debts are "fantastically difficult" to collect.

Many students use assumed names, he said, but most of the names are by those who receive grants but then withdraw from university before they finish the year.

Nixon Opposes Dumping Garbage at Port Hope

TORONTO (CP) — Opposition Leader Robert Nixon urged Environment Minister William Newman Thursday to tell Metropolitan Toronto Chairman Paul Godfrey the Duke Township site will not be available for Metro's garbage.

Mr. Nixon said no garbage should be dumped at the site near Port Hope and told the legislature provincial thrust should be in the direction of recycling, not land-fill sites.

Stephen Lewis, leader of the New Democrats, was also critical of Mr. Godfrey for pressing to have garbage removed by train to sites outside Metro's borders.

"There is considerable insensitivity by the Metro chairman to outside communities," Mr. Lewis said.

Labor Command Will C

Canadian Autono / For Unions Is Issue

VANCOUVER (CP) — Union leaders and delegates from across Canada are involved in intensive lobbying efforts here as they prepare for a Canadian Labor Congress convention beginning Monday that could be one of the most significant labor meetings in many years.

The meeting will see the retirement of two top congress officers, President Donald MacDonald and Secretary-Treasurer William Dodge, and the election of a top-level executive for the 1.8 million-member congress.

A reform group of unions will also be trying to put across its views on greater Canadian autonomy for unions, better services to members and more mergers among unions, while Quebec leaders will try for more provincial autonomy.

Although there is an official slate of candidates endorsed for the four permanent top executive offices, many names are being bandied about as potential candidates in the elections. The votes will be cast toward the end of the conference, probably Thursday.

Joe Morris, now a vice-president, is the official candidate for congress president; Shirley Carr of the Canadian Union of Public Employees and incumbent vice-president Jean Beaudry are candidates for executive vice-president and Neil Reimer of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers is on the slate for secretary-treasurer.

Julien Major of the United Paperworkers' Union is also a candidate for the position that Mr. Beaudry now holds and could fill the position that traditionally goes to a unionist from Quebec.

Mr. Major, a member of a union which recently voted to sever its official connections with its U.S.-based parent, probably will find favor among the reform group of national unions which have more than one-third of the expected 2,400 delegates to the convention.

The reform group includes CUPE, the Public Service Alliance of Canada, the Council of Postal Unions, the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers and the British Columbia Government Employees' Union.

While reform union leaders may not be able to deliver all their delegates, they are likely to have a strong influence on all deliberations of the congress.

Mr. Morris and Mrs. Carr are likely to win handily in their bids, but Mr. Reimer faces challenges from Art Kube, a white-collar union organizer for the congress, and from Donald Montgomery, president of the Metropolitan Toronto Labor Council.

Third Mishap in Week

230 Hurt in Chicago Elevated Crash

CHICAGO (AP) — The crash of two rush-hour elevated trains, which injured more than 230 passengers, was the third serious Chicago Transit Authority (CTA) train accident in a month.

The trains, each carrying about 300 passengers, crashed on the South Side Friday as the evening rush hour was ending.

Hospitals said those treated had minor injuries and that only a handful were admitted overnight for observation.

CTA spokesman Thomas Buck said one train had come to a stop and was struck from behind by the other.

Buck said it was not known why the first train halted or why the other motorman did not stop.

"It will take an investigation to find out," Buck said.

The more seriously injured were taken from the elevated structure by the fire department ladder and then carried to hospitals by helicopters. The rest were placed on another train and then taken to hospitals by CTA buses.

Buck said damage to the trains was light.

On April 11, 27 persons were injured in the derailment of an elevated train as it rounded a sharp curve in the Loop. An investigation showed the motorman was going too fast. He was fired.

Seventeen passengers were injured April 22 when another elevated train was derailed several blocks north of the earlier accident. The CTA said an emergency switch failed to work.

Portuguese Coup 'Fascinates' Smith

OTTAWA (CP) — Commonwealth Secretary-General Arnold Smith said Friday the recent coup in Portugal has created a "fascinating situation" which has provided a boost for African leaders.

The Canadian diplomat said in a news conference that pledges of self-determination for Portugal's African colonies by the new leaders are welcome and interesting.

He said if the Portuguese leaders are interested in forming a commonwealth, as they have stated his secretariat can provide information on how the Commonwealth works.

Mr. Smith, here for talks with Canadian government officials, primarily on aid to developing countries, said the move toward freedom by Portugal could affect the situation in Rhodesia, where an outrageous racial situation exists.

He said creation of a commonwealth by Portugal, with genuine self-determination for the colonies, could mean a negotiated solution to one of the most dangerous problems in the world today.

Kissinger Uneasy Over Syrian Talks

JERUSALEM (AP) — United States State Secretary Henry Kissinger met with Israeli leaders today, working out details of a troop-disengagement plan for presentation to Syrian leaders in Damascus Sunday.

United States and Israeli officials appeared apprehensive but hopeful that progress is being made and that there is a chance for an agreement to stop two months of fighting between Syrian and Israeli troops in the Golan Heights.

"If there is an agreement, it will be a quick one," speculated Israeli Information Minister Shimon Peres. "The biggest problem awaits the secretary upon his next visit to Damascus to see the reaction of the Syrians."

Kissinger returned to Jerusalem Friday after quick trips to Saudi Arabia and Egypt and met again with Israeli Premier Golda Meir.

Later Kissinger said: "I continue to believe that some progress is being made." He said both sides are making "a detailed examination" of Israeli and Syrian troop withdrawals, "but we can not talk about an agreement."

There were signs, however, indicating that positions may have been enough to permit some sort of accord before Kissinger returns to Washington, probably in one week.

Dutch Missionaries Assert 113 Massacred in Mozambique

LONDON (AP) — Dutch Roman Catholic missionaries say in a diary published in British newspapers today that Portuguese troops in Mozambique massacred 113 Africans and buried them in a mass grave.

The accusations are made by five missionaries, known as the Pipcus fathers, who ran the Sacred Hearts mission at Inhamanga, about 120 miles north of the port of Beira in the Portuguese colony where a guerrilla war has raged for the last decade.

The missionaries say they closed the mission in March.

Their account of the alleged massacres was contained in a diary published by The Times and The Guardian.

They list dozens of alleged killings, torture and reports of Portuguese troops razing entire villages in operations against guerrillas of the Mozambique Liberation Front—known as Frelimo—and their sympathizers. They say the massacre of the 113 African prisoners took place near Inhamingo last February.

The diary says a teen-age boy had his fingernails ripped out and several prisoners said electric shock were used on them by the Portuguese troops.

Dissatisfied with the war against the guerrillas in Portugal's three African colonies was a major cause of last month's coup by Gen. Antonio de Spinola against Premier Marcello Caetano's regime.

The future of the three colonies—Angola, Mozambique and Portuguese Guinea—is uncertain. Spinola proposes self-government within a commonwealth, while the guerrillas say they want complete independence.

Oil Embargo May Return If Truce Fails

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — King Faisal of Saudi Arabia is reported to have warned that the Arab oil embargo against the United States may be reimposed if no Syrian-Israeli troop disengagement pact is reached.

The Beirut newspaper Al Anwar says in a dispatch from Riyadh, the Saudi capital, that Faisal made the comment when U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger visited the king Thursday.

Al Anwar quotes Faisal as telling Kissinger: "The decision last March to halt the embargo was conditional on a Golan disengagement. If no agreement is reached, a reconsideration of the decision is not unlikely."

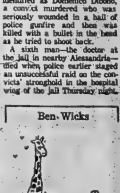
Six Die As Police Storm Jail

GENOA, Italy (Reuter) — A public argument erupted today over a bloodbath which resulted when police stormed a jail to crush an uprising by a trio of desperate long-term convicts.

The police assault came under attack from many newspapers as a senseless waste of lives.

In all, six persons died and 14 were injured.



Three of the dead were among the 16 bound and gagged hostages whom the three prisoners had held for 32 hours trying to trade them for freedom. One, a 30-year-old woman social worker, was stabbed repeatedly in the throat, then shot. Two guards held as hostages also died.

Also dead was the convicts' ringleader, Cesare Concu, a wife-stranger who had also been jailed for raping a 70-year-old woman. He had told a recent visitor: "I can't go on any longer. I need a woman."

Another dead prisoner was identified as Domenico Dibono, a convict murdered who was seriously wounded in a hail of police gunfire and then was killed with a bullet in the head as he tried to shoot back.

A sixth man—the doctor at the jail in nearby Alessandria—died when police earlier staged an unsuccessful raid on the convicts' stronghold in the hospital wing of the jail Thursday night.

'I May Not Be Popular With Consumers . . .'

Farm Prices Must Continue to Rise, Warns Whelan

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

BLOOMFIELD — Farm prices in Canada must rise to keep farmers in business, says federal agriculture minister Eugene Whelan.

Mr. Whelan said he may not be popular with consumers, over actions that have led to higher food costs but "I know darn well I'm right."

Any promises to reduce food prices are "pie-in-the-sky," he warned the annual meeting of the Prince Edward Milk Committee.

"Food prices in Canada have been relatively low. They have been so low that farmers have become the biggest single group of Canadians who fall below the poverty line," he said.

Mr. Whelan slad he's been accused of lack of concern for the poor. This is untrue.

He said Canadians, on the average, spend less of their income on food than ever before and less on food than consumers in almost any other country in the world.

"Farme prices must go up in Canada. They have to go up to keep farmers in business and we have to keep farmers in business because we need the food they grow duce."

He told farmers it should be clear to all Canadians that there cannot be a dependence on imports for a basic food supply.

"No one can tell you that he can control the prices of those things we use in Canada but can't produce," Mr. Whelan said.

"This means we must support our own agriculture industry. And that means we must support our farmers, because that's where the production chain starts."

Mr. Whelan said there are two broad choices in supporting farmers — either through subsidies or "reasonable" prices.

He believed most farmers want the major part of their income to come from market prices.

"I silh think that's a better route to follow as far as consumers are concerned."

Mr. Whelan said dairy farmers face "the same costprice squeeze" as others.

This led to greater efficiency — and has also driven many of them out of business. In the last five years more than 40 per cent of these farmers have been forced to quit.

The government in 1966, to save the industry, offered hugs subsidies and price support. He said net income for dairy farmers has increased by a good margin since 1966. But net incomes have not been high enough in the dairy industry. This explains why some dairy farmers "stepped out of business and production fell last year.

The minister observed that in relation to the fluid milk market, there has been agreement to allow several pr e v i o u s increases in producer prices This has been done in Ontario.

"We have allowed prices to increase because the cost of production increased and we have continued to pay the five cents a quart subsidy out of the federal treasury".

Mr. Whelan mentioned "important work before parliament" that must be done if there is to be a solid footing under the agriculture industry and if farmers are to have an incentive to produce and a reasonable level of income.

"I don't think Canadians realize how important our farmers and our agriculture industry are. But the fact is that farmers and our agriculture industry are vital to our food supply in Canada And they are vital to the entire world supply," said the speaker

He referred to the growing demand for food and reported that experts claim the world population will increase by one billion persons in the next 15 years

"I know that Eugene Whelan isn't very popular with consumers when he says that food in Canada is a bargain. I know that Eugene Whelan isn't very popular with consumers when he says that the price of some of our farm products is too low today and when he increases milk prices and butter prices and skim milk powder prices and puts in import controls to protect our egg and turkey producers.

"I may not be popular with consumers, but I know darn well that I'm right," asserted Mr. Whelan

He added that the farmers know that he is right and also consumers.

"If consumers stopped for just half a minute to think about it they'd know I'm right too, and they would recognize that promises to bring down food prices are simply pie in the sky," said the agriculture minister.

Want to Know About Porcupines? See Exhibit at Quinte Fair

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Did you know that a porcupine has a flat, hard, quill-laden tail (like a beaver's but smaller) on which the slow-moving animal pivots to turn quickly?

Did you know the porcupine camouflages its armaments under a woolly undercoating and long white guard hairs? Only when a startled porcupine "has its hackles up" are the quills exposed to the unwary.

If you want to find out for yourself, visit the exhibit of the natural resources ministry in Building 3 at Quinte Exhibition.

From Minesing, near Barrie, wild life curator James Scott has brought four species of wild animals, turned in to natural reserves as orphaned babies and kept by the ministry. Used to human handling since infancy, they cannot be set loose to fend for themselves.

"In the wild, their mothers taught them how to cope, but me and my men are their mothers and they'll never be able to go back to the wild," says Mr. Scott.

In his exhibit, he has twin bear cubs, three months old, a three-year-old red fox, the porcupine and a pair of female lynx.

The porcupine, says Mr. Scott, makes a better pet than the racoon. It is gentler, more intelligent and deeply affectionate.

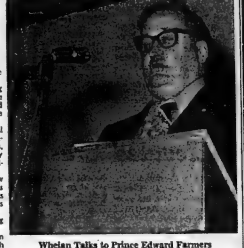
The lynx are Mr. Scott's disappointment. He has always hoped to find a wild cat, under the law, who, whom he would domesticate. His lynx were slightly less than what when they came to him, had their eyes open, and were too mature to become pets.



"If I could get a very young kitten and keep it with me 24 hours a day, I think I could have a Canadian lynx," he said.

The baby bears are still cuddly and affectionate, although, between themselves, they display sibling rivalry that any mother of pre-schoolers would sigh over.

Mr. Scott wonders how closely the behavior of his "wild animals" approximates that of others of their species who live in the wild.

He returns to the mothering complex.

"Their mothers teach them so much. I wonder how much of their real value they have given up in learning as babies to trust us."

Whelan Talks to Prince Edward Farmers

Whelan Says Election Puts His Job on The Line

BLOOMFIELD — "We're all on the campaign trail again. It's not my fault but is a fact that my job is on the line," federal agriculture minister Eugene Whelan said here Friday night.

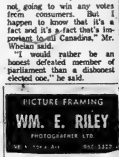
"Yesterday I was first appointed minister of agriculture I have said and I keep on repeating, that food in Canada is a bargain."

"Now, that's not a very popular thing to say in Canada these days. And it's not, going to win any votes from consumers. But I happen to know that it's a fact and it's a fact that's important to all Canadians," Mr. Whelan said.

"I would rather be an honest defeated member of parliament than a dishonest elected one," he said.

Police Week Coming

Don't be surprised next week if you see half a school bus parked inside Quinte Mall with flashing stop lights.



Next week is Police Week in Canada and the school bus is part of a display designed by Brian Parrott, provincial police constable at Belleville.

The bus underlines the theme of this year's display, "We Care."

To acquaint the public with police work, Constable Turner and his Belleville police colleagues at the mall will be manning the mall booth all next Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Belleville OPP detachment will also be open to public day tours next week and city police are planned to host a special demonstration of police radio activities at the rear of its Campbell Street station next Saturday.

QUINTE COUNTRY

Big Summer Tourist Boom Is Predicted for Bancroft District

By DWIGHT STORRING
Staff Correspondent

BANCROFT — The next boom you hear in Quinte country will be tourism.

Not too long from now one of this area's major industries will begin its production flow as travellers throng through the open spaces of north Hastings County.

And the financial flow will be even greater than this year say industry forecasters.

A boom is predicted by those promotionally involved — the Chamber of Commerce here, the Highlands of Hastings and Madawaska Valley regional tourist councils.

Vern McMurray, president of the Hastings group, says response was "unbelievable" at three holiday promotion shows in which his tourist council participated this year. Two were in Toronto, the third in Columbu.

Neither group can give definite reasons for the predicted increase. Others say the area's quality blend of scenery fresh water and air, are just "now being discovered."

And internal confusion over the provincial government's recent plan to cut the number of tourist promotion regions from 32 to 11 has not stifled the growing popularity of this outdoors recreation potential in summer and winter.

Ontario's Ministry of Industry and Tourism introduced its centralizing plan last fall. But it's still being met with opposition from existing regional tourist councils—including Hastings.

Smaller regional council seem to feel their areas will lose identity of promotion and administration is carried on for a bigger area.

Ministry officials say grants will only be given new regions when organized.

Madawaska is now aligned with the bigger Eastern Ontario Travel Council. But the Hastings group hasn't yet taken formal steps to organize in a proposed central Ontario region.

Mr. McMurray says the plan could have-it detrimental affect on his county's future tourist trade.

"It won't effect the trade for a year or so," he said. "But centralization of the regions will decrease the number of volunteers working on tourist promotion.

"The government is not doing what it should be...they're knocking us back."

All Highlands of Hastings members are volunteers like Mr. McMurray, who does not seem to feel threatened by any grants cutoff.

"Regardless of what the government does we'll carry on under our own steam and promote the highlands of Hastings," he said.

'Carnage' Coming To Four Seasons

The second floor of the Four Seasons Hotel will be littered with bodies Saturday afternoon as tragedy lashes out and strikes down a number of accident victims.

People will fall from barn roofs, children will be hit by cars, stoves will explode and severely burn a housewife or teen and all the victims will be stretched out on the floor of the Belleville hotel.

On Saturday, the Ontario Ambulance Operators' Association will hold its annual Casualty Care Competition at the Four Seasons Hotel.

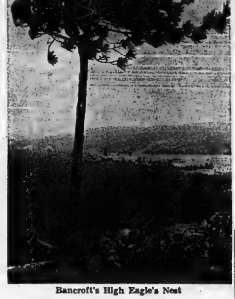
The competition, which will attract a number of four-man emergency rescue teams from all over the province, is being held in Belleville for the first time this year.

Bob Howell, the vice-president of City Ambulance Ltd., the company that is the host at this year's competition, said that the competition's organizers had expected to have as many as 25 ambulance crews at Saturday's competition.

Due to the mail strike, however, only 13 crews have managed to confirm, by mail, their participation in the competition.

The provincial competition, being held to test the efficiency and quality of care offered to the public by-ambulance attendents, will also see three rescue crews qualify to represent the province at the International Rescue and First Aid Association's competition in Toronto in August.

At that event, ambulance crews from all over Canada and the United States will compete for the honor of being designated one of the best ambulance service teams on the continent.



During Saturday's competition, volunteer accident victims from the Quinte area will be briefed on the injuries they are supposed to have suffered in a number of hypothetical situations.

While the competition's organizers have not decided to go as far as to have simulated emergencies, due to the time it would take to worry over the application of makeup, the ambulance crews will, nevertheless, have to detect and treat the injuries a patient is suffering from.

The competitors will be marked by a team of judges who are either members of the Ambulance Services branch of the provincial department of health or older, experienced ambulance personnel, on the speed, efficiency and quality of the care they administer.

The four-man crew from City Ambulance will be seeking to protect an impressive record at Saturday's competition. In the three years that City Ambulance has taken part in the competitions, they have won the provincial championship once, 1972, and placed third in the province twice.

Centre For Kaladar

MADOC — Kaladar Community Club has announced that work on its new community centre has been completed and the project ready for opening.

The official opening and ribbon-cutting ceremony will take place tonight.

The new community centre is primarily a project of the club women who received a Local Initiatives Program grant for the work.

Once a schoolhouse, the building has been renovated throughout and a new plumbing system installed.

Originally, the club bought the schoolhouse property for a community ball field.

The club, which had been using an old church as the community centre, decided the schoolhouse would provide much larger accommodation for local events.

The project then turned into an all-round community project. Carpenters were kept busy with the renovations all winter, and a new kitchen was put in. Local youths spent much spare time painting, and other community-minded persons donated time and equipment, all eager to see the building finished.

Afraid you're going deaf?

Chance to Grow

A plan is afoot in Winnipeg to build a modern Indian and Metis community — a city within the city — which would have all the amenities, from supermarkets to boutiques.

The project is aimed at providing a haven for the city's increasing native population, the better to allow them to develop amid the white man's world.

It is an estimable idea too, affording promise of opportunities in life which the Indian is often denied in present circumstances.

One irony of it is that this closely parallels what the South Africans have been doing for years, setting aside areas for each section of their multi-racial society. And while there is an element of discrimination to this, with pass laws which forbid free association among the races, it does provide for what the Government there describes as separate, parallel development. The rest of the world of course views this policy of "apartheid" as racial discrimination, without any appreciation of what it is meant to achieve for each race. Nevertheless there is some discrimination, but if life for the African is still less that total fulfillment, how come about a million blacks from other parts of Africa have entered this republic illegally. This figure was quoted by ambassador J. S. F. Botha in a 1972 address in Stamford, Conn.

The idea behind the Winnipeg project is not all that much different from the South African plan. Not much different for that matter from the separation of Indians from the white people for centuries, through domicile on the reserves. In the modern urban context, however, the Winnipeg scheme will surely mean a better future for Indians there.

Object of Prejudice

This being the week set aside by the Ontario Epilepsy Association for its information week, we are reminded that this is indeed a subject in regard to which the public needs educating, the better to understand the malady and shed some of the silly notions and prejudices that still grip many after all this time. For, as we pointed out the other day epilepsy is a disorder which, more than any another, has afflicted mankind since early times.

The prejudice it evokes (it has to be acknowledged that a grand mal convulsion can be very alarming to anyone unfamiliar with the condition) occurs at both the social and official level. Current restrictions against epileptics include, in the case of immigrants for instance, admission only by Minister's Permit; that is, a permit from the Immigration department which is renewable annually. This means that an epileptic immigrant, if he is admitted at all, remains on a year-to-year basis and is not eligible for citizenship let alone to vote.

Then there is this sort of thing, from the pen of Agatha Christie Mallowan, likely source as an Agatha Christie thriller. In Passport to Frankfurt, the celebrated writer of whodunits has a character say something like this: "I pity you as I pity an epileptic."

Even the Bible has some misleading references to the problem, a pitiful which singer Bob Boone put into his song "Why Boone Believes in Miracles" in the February issue of McCall's Magazine and which drew this response from James A. Autry, editor of Better Homes and Gardens:

"I was appalled by the following quote attributed to Pat Boone: 'What we call fits, seizures and epilepsy today, Jesus recognized as possession by demons. Jesus saw epilepsy for what it was — the work of Satan.' For years, epileptics have struggled to overcome discrimination and hostility based on fear, ignorance and superstition. Only in recent years have great strides been made toward understanding and treating epilepsy. This progress has been made, thank God, by medical science and not by . . . hands-on-the-head faith healers. . . ."

Perhaps, like a great many others, Mr. Boone was unaware of the medical facts — that seizures, which of course are one of the principal manifestations of the disorder, occur when the electrical currents which pass through the brain "misfire" for some reason. Let's hope that the Epilepsy Association has success in shedding light on this problem and in creating an improved climate of understanding for those who suffer from it.

Israel's Six-Day War Hero Is Country's New Premier

By JOHN D. HARERON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Itzhak Rabin, Israel's new premier and successor to the indefatigable but tired-out Mrs. Golda Meir, is his country's first native-born premier.

This means the 52-year-old Rabin is a Sabra, older than the ones who filled the ranks of Israel's armed forces in both the Six Day War, which he masterminded and last fall's Yom Kippur War.

Many of them were too young or merely children during the 1948-49 War of Liberation in which Rabin was a brigade commander in the Palmach.

His feet therefore are in the same glorious but new-distant past shared by the likes of Moshe Dayan, a fellow Palmach leader, Yigal Allon, another former comrade-in-arms and Shimon Peres, and Ezer Weizman his chief of operations in 1967 and now his critic.

Nevertheless Rabin's appointment should satisfy that growing portion of Israel's Sabra population, if mainly younger than him, who want an end to rule by Eastern European Jews who came to Israel from somewhere else.

In fact Israel's Jewish population is such a melting pot of world Jewry that one wonders why other pressure groups have not clamored for a spokesman as prime minister. The reason is simple.

Jewry from the Arab countries has been denied much less developed politically and socially than the European Jews, many of whom served in government and industry before they were rolled on under the new life in Israel.

Itzhak Rabin's main problem will be the mainly unfamiliar role for him as conciliator. His past has been almost entirely military. And he has been blamed for starting the Six Day War which he was to brilliantly win.

Rabin's open threats that the government in Damascus (capital of Syria) must be changed, made in the spring of 1967, encouraged the Russians, somehow, to pressure Syria to ask Egyptian President Nasser to make a move in favor of the Syrians.

Nasser allegedly complied, ordered the United Nations peace-keeping units out of Egypt, rolled out his tanks and closed the Straits of Tiran. And Israel responded, too, with an attack.

Rabin, the son of an American Jew who arrived in Palestine to fight the Turks during the First World War, was brought up in the hothouse atmosphere of the British-occupied Palestine of the 1930s. He and Dayan fought with the British against pro Nazi French Vichy forces in Syria, was imprisoned by the British after the war, thereby gaining that all essential jailbird of future leaders of ex-British colonies).

Rabin met his striking wife Lea Schinberg during their post-war years together in the Palmach, that predecessor organization to the Israeli Army which had fought off the Arab armies in the first Arab-Israeli War of 1948-49.

He rose quickly in the army of the 1950s, becoming Israel's youngest general by 1964. Following his wartime success in 1967 he was appointed Israel ambassador to the United States in 1968.

The unexpected conciliatory and go-slow skills of diplomacy which Rabin showed in this key job he will need now more desperately than what he had learned as general in Israel's wars. His Labor government holds very shaky power and he still must keep it together with the coalition forces said by Mrs. Meir.

And the opposition party Likud also has a well-known military hero as a leader and as his opponent.

THE ARTFUL DODGER

Period of Change

Developments in Forest Industries

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

For Canada's forest industries, it's either boom or bust.

This year, business is booming. Combined first-quarter profits of 19 leading companies in the group were 33 per cent higher than in the first three months of 1973.

Demand is high for almost all the end products of the trees. Lumber is the single exception.

In the past, the forest-products industry would have hastened to acquire new woodlands, install new processing equipment and build new plants to meet the intensified demands of the market.

Today, however, industry leaders are having second thoughts. History shows that each wave of capital spending has brought about a cycle of over-production with resulting price cuts and market upheavals.

The industry has been spending at an above-average rate in recent years, to modernize its operations, improve its productivity, and meet tougher standards for the control of air and water pollution.

Future spending by the Eastern Canadian forest-products industry is likely to emphasize the production of pulp and paper. Despite the current softness in lumber exports because of slowdowns in house-building in the United States and Japan combined with rail-car shortages.

But the example of the British Columbia industry, which has led the way in the utilization of the whole tree, seems to have persuaded the Eastern Canadian pulp and paper companies of the wisdom of investing in large new sawmills to produce not only lumber but substantial volumes of pulp chips and shavings for pulp manufacture.

Plans have been announced for the construction in Ontario and Quebec of four large new sawmills with capacity of more than 100 million board feet each, as well as several smaller mills.

As the forest-products industry expands, it is turning increasingly to the thermo-mechanical pulp process for newsprint production. Advantages are greater strength than conventional groundwood pulp, greater economies and abatement of water pollution.

Another technological trend could lead to the instruction of "module" pulp equipment, which would enable economical to contemplate newsprint mills with daily capacity as small as 50 tons—a possible answer to the industry's recurring problem of over-capacity.

The outlook for the newsprint industry in 1974 suggests a slower growth of sales, but higher prices nevertheless.

In the United States, newsprint mills have been running at 92 per cent of capacity since late last year, down from 99 per cent a year ago.

As a result, Canadian newsprint exports to the United States were down 4.7 per cent in March (according to the latest figures from the Canadian Pulp and Paper Association) and up only 0.8 per cent for first-quarter 1974, from comparable 1973 totals.

But higher domestic and overseas shipments are taking up the slack for Canadian newsprint producers who are seeking records for production and sales.

TORONTO—Government so far has managed to keep out of the bedrooms of the nation, but otherwise it certainly is ranging pretty far afield.

The citizenry across the country, or a good section of it, must be scratching its head over the federal Lalonde bill which would say by whom, when, why, and where there could be football in the country.

And now we are having a $5,000 inquiry here into the roughness of play between a couple of hockey teams. And Junior B teams at that.

After Bramalea Blues withdrew from their provincial final with Hamilton Red Wings following one game, alleging they were afraid there would be mayhem, the provincial government ordered an investigation.

What goes?

Is the next step an inquiry into whether husbands and wives are fighting too much?

Or whether there is too much hair-pulling in kindergarten classes?

Perhaps so.

But in the meantime there are practical, if perhaps not particularly sound, reasons for this sudden and adventurous interest of our governments in sports.

The Lalonde bill, of course, is calculated as a political ploy to be used in the next election, want to see a major intercontinental football league come into Toronto and possibly wreck the CFL.

And with our $5,000 witchhunt here there are two pertinent facts that have emerged.

One is that Bramalea Blues draw most of their support from the riding of Peel North. And Peel North happens to be the riding of a prominent PC by the name of William Davis.

Long before he became premier, Mr. Davis made it evident that sports were important to him.

When minister of education, for instance, he started the annual presentation of provincial sports awards to athletes and athletic officials.

And as long as the chancellor for Peel North is at the helm we can be sure the sports will always be of some consideration in the affairs of government in Ontario.

LETTERS

Blacks Suffer Most From Marxist 'Liberation' Hostilities in Africa

The following is an extract from a letter Jacques P. Lott of 1490 Sunset Boulevard, California, has addressed to External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp.

It concerns the government's controversial plan to send what it calls "humanitarian" aid to regions in Africa controlled by Communist-supported "liberation" forces.

In a covering letter, Mr. Lott explains he wrote the letter with a copy to the Intelligencer, "because of my deep concern for this tragic action of a friendly neighbor and loyal past member of the West."

I was saddened to learn of Implementation of your plan to aid anti-white terrorist groups in Africa. Your response to criticism includes a defence of this aid as "humanitarian" — it seems to me that any "humanitarian" charity would be bestowed with priority given to the victims of terrorism, if bona fide humanitarianism was the motive.

Far more black victims of this terror exist than white, including victims of slave raids on school-age black boys, trainees and concubines, death by torture and mutilation of Africans refusing to co-operate, and indiscriminate use of land mines in remote tribal areas. Obviously it is not the policy of Canada's Ministry of External Affairs to support the killing, maiming and enslavement of black Africans, though your beneficiaries cause these results.

The several Marxist terrorist groups are aimed at the destruction of whites and the dismantling of their social, national and economic structures, but fear closing with White for reasons which usually leads to the defeat or destruction of the terrorists. Instead they concentrate on coercing blacks into providing support for guerrillas through the combination of killing and torture of the black elite.

Private support for such movements is legitimate though of questionable morality in view of the methods and racism involved, but Canada being a member of Western civilization cannot escape the implications of support for forces that are implacably anti-Western. Canada cannot remain self-righteous, talking credit for "humanitarianism" while avoiding the dilemma of military aid. Canada is now a participant in a Marxist, anti-white, anti-Western terrorist movement against nations that have been Canada's friends and comrades-in-arms.

It is not enough to rule that turns Canada's government and "liberal-left" opinion against white-ruled Rhodesia, mixed Rhodesia, South Africa and the Portuguese provinces are more humanely ruled than any black-ruled nations and educational, economic and judicial standards there are far in advance of anything in black-ruled lands. Canada and its fellow supporters of Pan-African movements do not oppose Idi Amin's reign of terror in Uganda, one-party dictatorship in Kaunda's Zambia or genocide in Burundi and Rwanda. Thus it is not minority rule per se that Canada opposes long with the Israelis the terrorists, but only white minority rule. How can this be anything but anti-white racism? Tyrranical Black rule, more the norm than the exception, is never labelled "liberal" by or the object of opposition by "liberation fronts". It adds up to racial bigotry and antagonism by Canada's Ministry of External Affairs.

With what is known of like under Marxist rule, it is obviously not a future claim of freedom that would result if the beneficiaries of Canada's largesse are successful. Does this not disturb you?

Racism in any form is bad, but in much of the world there is no middle ground, and if forced to choose between white racism and a defense of my own race and civilization, there can be no middle ground. No white populations seek to restore racial injustices of the past and all provide in greater or lesser degree the means to support for black advancement.

I am one who has read and appreciated the friendly and unsolicited pro-U.S. message of Mr. Gordon Sinclair. I therefore do not imply criticism of the Canadian people who are uninvolved in this infamous support for terrorism except by the involuntary appreciation of their hard-earned tax money.

Guerrillas Offered Truce

Portuguese Freedom Is One Thing Future of Colonies Is Another

By JOHN D. HARERON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Gen. Antonio Spinola's moderate military junta in Portugal, which has released hundreds of political prisoners, ordered the secret police, allowed opposition parties to function and promises a new deal in Portuguese Africa, leaves the world's liberals aghast.

Especially where countries like Portugal, Greece, and since last mid-July, even communist, the military in power in conjunction with civilian leaders, have overthrown one of the worst kind.

Portugal under the former Caetano dictatorship had been the source of attack for all the countries committed to the success of the African liberation movements and an early end to Portuguese rule in Africa.

But in Lisbon these days, even the Communist party bitter foe for decades in both Portugal and Spain of authoritarian regimes, has unbelievably surfaced with Alvaro Cunhal, its leader, permitted back from exile.

And all this has come to pass through a military coup performed with the same cool precision by a Portuguese general who, now he's been doing the same thing, except against African guerrilla movements.

Spinola therefore becomes not only a fascinating study in Twentieth Century Portuguese history where right-wing dictatorships have perished but of contemporary military governments in general.

It's understandable why the world's liberals and "do-good-ers" generally are so reluctant to issue statements. The fact is they don't know what kind to issue.

More is promised from the Spinola-directed military junta, namely the formation of a provisional government and in time the first free elections in the hard-pressed Iberian nation since the 1920s.

But it is Africa, that contentious issue which spurred the coup in the first place from the military which were supposed to sustain the older order, where Spinola is making success or failure will lie.

The general does not propose to release the overseas territories as the Portuguese government has called them, only attempt something not unfamiliar to us in the British Commonwealth.

The two large and economically powerful provinces of Angola and Mozambique would be given a status not unlike that of British self-governing colonies before independence.

Portugal like Britain at an earlier time, would still control major foreign and defence matters. An African example would be Nigeria before independence in 1960 which was self-governing within the Commonwealth.

Portuguese Guinea might be abandoned, though the junta has not said so. About 35 countries in the United Nations have already given recognition to the break-away guerrilla, Guinea-Bissau People's Republic and the territory has little economic value, only a strategic one.

The Prelimo guerrillas assaulting Mozambique have rejected a self-governing concept in lieu of complete independence. But the junta has to accept a few surprises from Gen. Spinola as well as from those being the offer of a truce. Unbelievable a month ago.

The great unknown is how Spinola will overcome resistance or failure will lie.

Labor Motion Will Blackmail City Council

By MAURICE SWITZER
Managing Editor

Few crimes are considered more unscrupulous than blackmail. And even fewer stand as great a chance of success, particularly when "persuasion" assumes an apparently respectable guise.

Which brings us to this week's Quinte and District Labor Council meeting.

Ian Reilly, prominent spokesman for area labor, served notice of a motion that would seek an organized labor boycott of the next United Way campaign if Belleville's YMCA received a grant in lieu of taxes in the upcoming city budget.

Mr. Reilly hastened to point out that he was not against the "Y" in itself, but the fact that the organization "dips into the taxpayer's pocket twice" — once in the United Way campaign, and then through a municipal grant.

In other words, city council is being warned to discontinue a grant that past councils have, after considerable debate, deemed to be valid.

The consequence? Well, Mr. Reilly's motion implies that, unless city council sees the error of its ways, organized labor will do its best to stop a charitable drive that pumps over $100,000 into such Belleville agencies as the Canadian Red Cross Society, the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, Belleville Minor Sports Association, Belleville and District Association for Retarded Children, Victorian Order of Nurses, St. John Ambulance Association (of which Mr. Reilly is an active member), the Navy League of Canada, the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society, the Civic Action Committee, and the Central Volunteer Bureau.

There is also the unstated but very real threat that, by not heeding organized labor's decree, city councillors would be jeopardizing their personal political future.

After all, there are an estimated 5,000 card-carrying unionists in Belleville, not to mention voting members of their families, and this is a civic election year.

In Mr. Reilly's words, the labor council "swings a fair-sized club in terms of the thousands of labor members and public support."

What is behind this confrontation?

Motion proposer Reilly insists the crux of the issue is the manner in which the YMCA gets its funds.

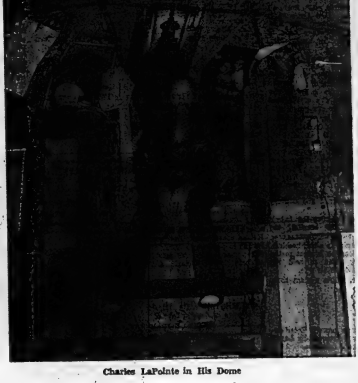
Unfortunately, even Mr. Reilly's integrity of purpose will not stop a bandwagon of people backing his motion because of a lingering animosity in this city towards the YMCA as an "east hill country club."

Despite efforts by Y organizers to reach the community in more ways — by offering free memberships to dozens of underprivileged youngsters, by opening up their facilities for as great a public use as possible, and even by responding to criticism from such groups as organized labor by including a permanent labor representative on their board — the YMCA remains one of those political footballs that nobody seems to want to punt back kick.

Mr. Reilly admitted as much when he told the Labor Council meeting that he realized there would be a number of people who would not normally support the Y who would support any who would use his motion as an official excuse not to.

But there is much more at stake here than whether or not city council will continue to write off an $8,400 annual YMCA tax bill.

If Mr. Reilly's motion is supported, who can say what the next demand of organized labor will be? Will councillors who eat Black Diamond cheese be risking their political futures because they are not honoring an imaginary grocery-shelf picket line?



Few people deny the right of employees to have differences of opinion with the people who pay their wages. But surely no group formed for an economic purpose has earned the privilege of exerting its collective pressure for purely political ends.

There are some matters that are questions of individual conscience. Why should a union tell one of its members which charities he should patronize any more than a plant manager should tell his supervisors which church to attend?

They say that religion and politics don't mix. Organized labor doesn't blend the cocktail any better.

Have You Ever Wondered...

- If city councillors get paid by the word?
- If people don't cry as much in "one-liner" gogrammicals?
- If any softball umpires in the city ever played the game?
- Why we wait on the Yardmen's "Olympic arena" when hell will freeze over sooner?

Day-care Centres Rare But Necessary Service

By JILL MORRELL

When the question, "What do you want to do when you're grown up?" was asked of little girls, they may have replied they wished to be "just like mommy".

Being "just like mommy" may have meant being a housewife. These days, if the answer "just like mommy" is given, it is possible that mommy is no longer a housewife.

More and more women are becoming less and less content with being just a housewife. Many mothers are career women as well.

Before deciding to continue their careers, which could be anything from a nurse to a police officer, mothers have to be assured their children will be cared for properly.

Parents want their preschoolers to be looked after by competent people and in comfortable surroundings.

In the Quinte area, day-care centres and nursery schools are not as numerous as many people would like. Parents and hopeful day-care workers would prefer more places to take two-, three-, and four-year-olds.

Of the 14 established places, there are only three day-care centres; the rest are nursery.

A nursery school looks after children for half a day; day-care centres take care of them for the whole day.

The establishment of day-care centres and nurseries has been helped by Early Childhood Education courses in community colleges. Loyalist College has graduated 40 such students over the last two years.

Many have had to leave the area and go where the jobs are. However, as in the case of four Loyalist students, there's always the possibility of setting up their own centres.

Annie Pearson received a LIP grant to set up the Quinte Day-Care Centre. When the grant expired, she was able to continue with financial assistance from local agencies.

Vera Berger and Karen White are supervisors at the Colborne Day-Care Centre. Wendy Turner is at Grace United Day-Care Centre in Trenton. The Belleville Day Nursery is supervised by M. J. Matergio.

While all of these supervisors have their educational institutions in common, they have many other things in common with other supervisors in the area.

When a day-care centre or nursery is established, the owner or proposer must adhere to the rules set out by the Day Nurseries Branch of Ontario's Department of Family and Social Services.

One of these is to assure that each child has at least 30 square feet of floor space. Others involve health regulations and number of workers required.

In the Quinte area, the places offered to look after preschoolers are slowly increasing.

Day-care centres are not only for normal children; special ones can be established for handicapped ones. The Ontario School for the Deaf has a centre for handicapped children.

The initiative for creating day-care centres can be found withing the community. Parents can get together and establish a co-operative day-care centre.

Bowling alleys and other recreational centres can offer nurseries or day-care centres. When parents bring children with them, it is possible for everyone to enjoy themselves when the young ones are being cared for properly or are under good supervision.

The Ontario government realizes the need for more centres, and is constantly examining the communities' needs. It is setting up developmental centres for handicapped children and may soon start one in Belleville.

Experiment in Geometry Pleasant Place to Live

By STEVE CAMPBELL

A Quinte-area experiment in building a "pleasant place to live" may usher in a new concept of housing for Canada.

Charles LaPointe, an ex-teacher now living in Prince Edward County, has been experimenting for several years on building such a place. He has found the basis for this accommodation in the form of the geodesic dome.

From the geometrical concept of the shortest distance between two points on a mathematically derived surface, the geodesic dome is an invention of Buckminster Fuller, whose original work on geodesic domes overturned the beliefs of many architectural designers.

Perhaps the most popular example of a geodesic structure in Canada is the United States pavilion, designed for Expo '67 and still in use at Man and His World in Montreal.

The basic form, consisting of triangles joined together as flat surfaces approximating a sphere, was discovered to have many unique and revolutionary properties. Unlike the square buildings of our modern society, the strength of the structure is not dependent on the weight.

A complete geodesic dwelling, strong enough to support large amounts of weight throughout its structure and large enough to hold a family of five, is light enough to be transported and fully assembled by helicopter.

Mr. LaPointe, who has built several connecting domes as his home in the Greenbush area of Prince Edward County, is a man who lives his convictions.

He believes that ordinary, cubic structures give a "boxy, imprisoned feeling" and that the dome has many advantages over conventional housing units.

His home south of Picton is what he calls "an organic home". It has grown over the years in accordance with the needs of his family of five, and in the interests of experimentation.

The diameter of the main dome is 28 ft. 5 in. It is divided by two walls near the centre of the dome which support a second-floor balcony. The two walls separate the kitchen from the main living area which has a ceiling 22 feet high at its tallest point. The additional domes house a bedroom and activity room.

The heating system, designed by Mr. LaPointe, consists of both wood - stove and electric heating. When the wood-stove is in use, the thermostat control is defeated on the electrical system; if the stove is allowed to go out, the electric heating takes over.

The house is insulated by polyurethane foam, a substance that acts as both a heat insulator and a vapor barrier. The foam is blown onto the walls as a liquid, where it adheres and foams immediately. It can also be blown into cracks and holes to seal the building from the elements.

Mr. LaPointe lives off his freelance writing while continuing his experimentation. He is part of a group known as Papilinq, a cross between the French and German words for butterfly.

"I don't call Papilling a construction firm," he said. "We're working on housing that provides a more environment for people."

He has begun construction on a new system of domes at the intersection of Highway 14 and County Road 1. This house will be a completely new experiment in dome construction.

"The house I'm living in now is a part of the past," Mr. LaPointe said. "I'm no longer concerned with the past, only the future."

His new house will consist of five or more connecting domes. The polyurethane foam will be contained within the walls, not exposed as in his present home. He plans to have a finished interior with wall panelling.

Mr. LaPointe is in the process of selling his Greenbush home to pursue his new experiments.

Fidlar Mills

Stirling Hoedown Draws Thousands

By MICHAEL LEA

Once every two or three weeks, hundreds of country music lovers descend on the village of Stirling. The occasion is the Fidlar Mills Jamboree, a unique presentation of country and western music.

At its beginning in November, 1966, however, the success of the show then called the Trent Valley Jamboree, were so doubtful of success that only two performances were planned. A capacity crowd of 400 with over 200 still standing outside soon dispelled any doubt and the Jamboree has since been a regular and successful feature in the Quinte district.

For the producers, Jack McCaughen and Ken Stapely, the decision to organize a jamboree was not lightly made. There were at that time no others in the area to learn from.

"We didn't take any formula from anyone else because there was no other formula. We created our own." That's how McCaughen describes the Jamboree's beginning.

The second show was just as successful as the first, so "we just kept on going, from week to week, from month to month, for about four years."

The shows, originally held in the Stirling movie theatre, were planned so that each was as different as possible.

There would be a crowd-drawer or two to ensure a good turnout. The remaining performers were either local groups or ones brought in from all over Ontario.

The sets would include fiddlers, singers, dancers and even rope twirlers.

The original Master of Ceremonies was Sean Eyre, CHEX Radio's "Sundance Sean". After two years, he was joined as a regular by CJBQ's Dick Lovering.

The popularity of the Jamboree was such that two live recordings were made, one in 1971 and the other a year later. The records were over a thousand copies each in the Quinte area alone.

McCaughen and Stapely remained together until September, 1971, when ill health and business differences forced McCaughen to withdraw. Stapely took on another partner and continued with the show, playing local high schools until the fall of 1971.

With his wife, Dorothy as co-producer, McCaughen then organized the Fidlar Mills Jamboree (Fidlar Mills was the original name of Stirling) in 1971. This show also toured district high schools before expanding the Stirling movie theatre as permanent base in the fall of 1973.

For eight years, the Jamboree has hosted a great number of well-known performers and has even produced a few "stars" of its own.

After singing only in duets, a Maple Girl, Donna Moon, had asked for an act of her own. An instrumental Hollywood movie style, a Toronto producer saw her act and liked what he heard. Before long, she had been offered a contract with a major recording company.

Another professional, the only prerequisite for appearing at the Jamboree is the ability and desire to entertain. McCaughen will only book artists who perform because they want to.

Meditation

Popular Illnesses Have Simple Cure

By MARILYN WILLIAMS

—Hypertension.
—Anxiety.
—High Blood Pressure.
—Cardiac Arrest.

These are among the most "popular" North American illnesses yet, in many cases, they can be psychosomatic. And a simple mental exercise, that takes just 15-20 minutes a day, is said to be able to remove the main causes of all four.

The exercise is a natural technique know as Transcendental Meditation and its followers — there are now some 50-60 in Belleville — claim that it enables you to enjoy increased tranquility of mind, with decreased physical and mental tension.

TM (as it's known) has been adopted by hundreds of thousands of people throughout the world in the 15 years since its founder, Maharishi Mahesh Yogi, started his travels to promote it.

Based on studies at some 40 universities and institutes of learning throughout the world, it is said that TM produces an "over all sense of fulfilment and internal harmony

Physically, TM creates a deep state of restful alertness that rejuvenates the nervous system and keeps it "normal."

Psychologically, TM eliminates mental stress and promotes clearer thinking and greater understanding. It makes perception clearer, improves a person's outlook, and makes them more efficient and effective in working and living.

Socially, it is claimed that TM cuts out tension and discord.

Transcendental Meditation is relatively new in the Belleville area. Courses started here 1½ years ago. Some 50 to 60 people have taken the seven-day courses, taught by Miss Jutte Hansen.

As she says, "Transcodental Meditation is for all people in any walk of life. It doesn't involve concentration or mind control. It is not a religion or a philosophy."

Babies - and Families - Get Better Start at BGH

By SHARON AIRHART

"We came to a point where we asked ourselves, 'Just whose baby is this?'

The words are Dorothy Taylor's. Unit co-ordinator, maternity floor, Belleville General Hospital. Prime mover behind the institution of Family Centred Maternity Care Program at the hospital.

In 18 months, she and the staff of the maternity floor, with assistance from the city's doctors and public health agencies, have adopted a program of care designed to help a family establish strong emotional ties from the moment of birth.

"Of course, our over all objective is the same as it has always been: the safe birth of a healthy baby to a healthy mother," Mrs. Taylor says.

"But add to that the provision of a learning environment for mothers and, most importantly, the inclusion of the father in the baby's first day of life, and you have our new program."

Instigated by a three-year government funded study conducted at Calgary Foothills Hospitals the family-centred maternity program includes a whole range of health services. Pre-natal classes for couples are the first step in the program and they include a tour of the maternity ward and delivery room.

Immediately after the birth, father can be brought to the delivery room to hold the baby and see his wife.

Later, within a short time, the three can be together in the hospital room, a departure from the days when 24 hours passed before even the mother got to see or hold her baby again. Fathers gets to feed baby, too, unless mother is breastfeeding.

Rooming-in, where the infant spends daytime hours in her mother's room, is part of the program for those who elect it.

Regardless of rooming-in, mothers get instruction from nurses in formula-making if they're bottle feeding and everyone has the opportunity to bathe her own baby.

At home again, follow up visits from the public health nurse offer advice and reassurance.

As Mrs. Taylor says, "We've come a long way in 18 months."

The co-ordinator, and members of the staff, attended seminars on the program at the Women's College Hospital in Toronto where the program has also been established.

It was proven to Mrs. Taylor's satisfaction that the Calgary study showed better family life was established early when the program was used and that mothers had fewer problems when they went home.

"It's a real delight to walk around here on Sunday afternoon," Mrs. Taylor says, "and see the fathers holding the babies and feeding them.

"The other way, they never saw the baby except behind glass, never really realized they had a child until they took it home.

"I think it's too late then, don't you?"

Mrs. Taylor credits her staff with much of the success of the program.

Calling them all highly-skilled and qualified, she admits they were apprehensive at first about the new relaxed atmosphere.

"Now they're enthusiastic. You see them wheeling the babies down the hall for little visits even if they're not rooming in.

"It brought us together as a staff, I think. Not just the post-natal care staff, either. The program requires the combined effort of the case room staff, the post-natal staff and the nursery staff as well as the public health agencies.

"It's been good for the hospital, too."

Mrs. Taylor adds that when instituting the program, she found herself asking why things had been done a certain way for years. The answer, which must be common to most institutions, was often "because that's the way we do it".

were just foolish."

"We decided a few things were just foolish."

After the program was adopted, Mrs. Taylor adds, "we could see how much improvement there was. How much more more relaxed the patients were, how much happier."

The old way, she says, mothers—and especially fathers— often weren't sure the baby was really theirs.

Now there's no question in anyone's mind.

"I feel that a mission has been accomplished," Mrs. Taylor says with satisfaction.

Dorothy Taylor is unit co-ordinator of the maternity floor at Belleville General Hospital where a new family-centred maternity care program has been instituted during the last 18 months. She says the program has benefitted staff and patients alike.

Best Bargain You'll Ever Find

Sharon Airhart

For $2.50, I know where you can get enough Vitamin A to protect 75 Bangladesh children for a year. As a bonus, you'll get a box of 25 beautifully designed note cards with envelopes.

If you're not in the market for Vitamin A, how about some medical equipment for a West African infant health station? The cost is $5, and along with the equipment, you get 25 large note cars with interchangeable greetings.

The seller of these bargains is Unicef. To go along with their popular holiday greeting cards, the United Nations agency has produced a line of year-round greeting cards with the same charm and appeal of the holiday cards.

If you're interested in a color brochure of the various note cards and greeting cards available, write Canadian Unicef Committee, 727 Church Street, Toronto 5, Ontario.

You can get a 36-page New Zealand spring lamb recipe book without charge from the New Zealand Lamb Information Centre, 36 Toronto Street, Toronto.

The Consumer Protection Bureau of the provincial government, receives many home driveway paving complaints. Fly-by-night companies usually appear in the spring, offering to asphalt driveways for a ridiculously low cost. Many homeowners sign for the job only to find later that the driveway cracks and weeds sprout through it. When this occurs nothing can be done because the paving company usually has gone out of business.

There are basically three types of driveway paving jobs:

1. An adequate first paving requires a six-inch excavation which is then filled with crushed and compacted limestone to a depth of four inches. To this, two inches of compacted asphalt is added.

2. For a severely cracked older driveway, a good job requires that the old asphalt be completely removed before backfilling with four inches of compacted crushed limestone. After this, two inches of compacted asphalt is added.

3. For a re-capping job, where minor cracks have appeared, a layer of asphalt over the original driveway is sufficient.

Always get two or three estimates before committing yourself to a written contract. Ask the contractor for the names of three people in your area with whom he has done business. Ask these people if they are satisfied. If possible, look at their driveways to check with The Consumer Protection Bureau, ministry of Consumer and Commercial Relations, Queens' Park, Toronto, to see if the paver is registered.

Jewett Runs Simon Fraser

Country Parlor Atmosphere

OTTAWA (CP) — Pauline Jewett is excited about her new job as president of Simon Fraser University at Burnaby, B.C.

"I don't see it as just a dreary round, but as a fun thing, kind of interesting and enjoyable," said the Carleton University political scientist, who has been teaching here for 18 years.

Dr. Jewett does not look like hard-nosed administrator one would expect to find in the $50,000-a-year job of running a university.

She has a warm manner. The creak of her rocking chair and the chiming of an old-fashioned clock on the wall help set the atmosphere of a country parlor rather than an executive suite.

Dr. Jewett seems surprised herself at the latest turn her career has taken. The only explanation she can give in an interview was, "I've always been interested in public affairs, but always."

She said: "I need a certain amount of excitement in my life—and challenges. I'm great on challenges. That's why I think it would be great to run a university. But the only kind of appeals to me is one that's fairly new, and has lots of problems.

"I really wouldn't want to work at a university that was all stable and settled in its ways."

She will take office Sept. 1 for five years with a year's leave of absence at full pay after that.

Dr. Jewett has spent a good number of her 51 years teaching at university. She refers to her students as "my kids". Known for her controversial views, she was a Liberal member of Parliament for Northumberland in 1963-65 and ran unsuccessfully for the New Democratic Party in Ottawa in 1972.

"I found one of the most exciting times at university in the late 1960s, when the young people were really radicalized—and they tended to keep me radicalized."

She is also known for her academic accomplishments, having studied at Harvard, Oxford and London School of Economics.

One of her aims as president at Simon Fraser will be to encourage what she calls "the spirit of free inquiry, which we must have if we are going to open new horizons and break into new frontiers of learning."

To help accomplish this, she said, "I want to bring the community more into the university, and the university more into the community, in various ways.

"I myself, I'll just be around a lot, you know, I'll be very accessible.

"I'll be talking a lot—I'll be, I hope, reasonably alive myself; so insofar as an example is set, that's the kind of example it will be."

Dr. Jewett said she plans to "go public" more than has traditionally been the case with university presidents.

"That means I'll be in hot water periodically and so will the university. I'll debate a good many issues with government and I'll do so openly. I believe in openness, so people know what's going on."

Within 12 days of Dr. Jewett's appointment, she had granted more than 25 interviews to the press. She was also flooded with letters of congratulation.

She does not attempt to define her "secret".

"Half of my own optimism, I'm sure, rises out of my own temperament. But I am also sure it rises out of knowing that life is really tough and yet you can deal with it and get things out of it that are valuable and good, not just for you but for society."

Ann Landers

Crabby Old Man 'Really a Dear'

Dear Ann Landers: One of the biggest problems of working mothers is that they are not around to see and hear what goes on with their children. Recently I had an experience that taught me plenty.

Our 13-year-old son told me the old man next door was a terrible person, that he yelled at the kids in the neighborhood for nothing and scared them half to death. My first inclination was to tell Buddy the old man was probably off his rocker and to stay away from him. My better judgment took over, and I told him to go over and speak to the neighbor.

I discovered the old gentleman was a dear person who likes children but was having a difficult time with them. Being all alone, his greatest pleasure in life is his little garden. The neighborhood dogs had been running through his property and digging up his precious plants. It wasn't the kids he was yelling at, but the dogs—trying to keep them off his place.

When mothers hear complaints they should investigate—not with a chip on her shoulder—but in a friendly manner—and find out what's going on. Now Buddy and the old gentleman are good friends and the boy is helping to keep the neighborhood dogs out of the old man's garden.—J.W

Dear J.: You've just given some very good advice. Thanks for sitting in my seat on this one.

Dear Ann Landers: I have seen letters in your column about Cooper's Droop, snoring and sloppy housekeepers, and what I am writing about is just as important and I hope you will print it.

I am taking Latin Three in high school. There are exactly seven students in the class. Because so few students want to take Latin they had to combine Latin Three and Latin Four. Why aren't more students interested? Some of my friends say Latin is a dead language so why bother? I find it very much alive.

I admit Latin is difficult, but so are chemistry and algebra and the attorney is high in these courses. My knowledge of Latin has helped me do better in English grammar and I scored very high in a national test in vocabulary because I knew Latin.

Please say a few words to encourage more students to take this great subject. Someone has to give them a push.—Rena Summus-Amor

Dear Rena: If you want a personal testimonial from me, here it is. I didn't take Latin in high school and I can truthfully say it was one of the dumbest decisions I ever made. I regret it to this day.

Successful Living

Task Force Helps Aged

By DORIS CLARK

As a means of bringing young and old together, as well as keeping aged folk in their home environment as long as possible, an innovative program called "Task Force" seems to be doing something quite notable in Greater London, England. Task Force was started eight years ago, mostly made up of students, who give their voluntarily to making themselves useful to elderly, often handicapped, people.

Where an old person is living in a dingy room, a group of students will band together to paint or lay linoleum or fix up plaster. The volunteers who know something about this such as professional decorators do the supervising. In Greenwich, one borough in which there is a Task Force Centre, two rooms a week are scheduled for decorating.

Seniors are helped with gardening when it gets just a little too tough on joints bending and with age. Last year 164 gardens were spruced up by the Task Force in Greenwich.

There are other things. An old person living along may need such a simple service as a letter to be mailed, or shopping to be done. Sometimes the worry of an abrupt notice from a creditor or from a government department is relieved by an explanation, and things straightened out.

Putting up storm widows can be an insurmountable obstacle to an otherwise self-sustaining elderly person, whose muscles can't do what they used to do. Yet it doesn't take young person long to lift a window, climb a ladder, push a lawn mower, cart in milk, bread and vegetables from the store. Perhaps reading the paper aloud to the soul whose eyes are dim can make all the difference in keeping him in the stream of life.

The whole program is morale-building. It is also tops for letting young and old take a look at each other and see first hand that they like what they see; discovering that each has something to give the other in the way of understanding and a greater enjoyment of life.

"The act of visiting, of sparing time, is an act of caring. For a person who is neglected and isolated, who feels socially deprived, it is an act that adds life to years."

These facts and others are described in an enlightening article, "Youth: When You Are Old", by Nathan Markus, in the May-June 1973 issue of Canadian Welfare.

A notable percentage of Great Britain's population was growing well into the pensioned-off bracket during and after war years while here in Canada we were still trying to figure out how to compensate breadwinners who were unemployed, and youth who needed help with upper-level education.

Now that old age is catching up with us even here, there are experiments and trial projects of many kinds being encouraged in a tentative sort of way. There are even some which are well off the ground, imaginative and reliable.

Let's hear about some of them. For the inspiration of the rest of us. Canadian reader-volunteers in the area of aging are invited to report in.

The Experts Say

Tips on Paint

OTTAWA (CP) — For the inexperienced, painting can sometimes be a frustrating experience.

But if a few basic rules are followed the job can be a smooth running operation, says the federal department of consumer and corporate affairs.

In its consumer publication Contact the department says the best place to seek advice about paints is from the man who sells it.

"Paint manufacturers know what their products will or won't do and they go to some lengths to label the degree of performance qualities of their products.

To calculate the number of square feet to be covered on a wall, multiply the width of the wall in feet by its height. For ceilings, multiply its width by its length.

"Most cans of paint will indicate how many square feet the contents will cover.

Churchmen Quarrel with Bank Over Loans to South Africa

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

NEW YORK (AP) — Churchmen and the banker disagreed.

Your loans "retard the day of justice," the churchmen told the banker.

"We don't agree [at all," said the banker, H. E. Ekblom, president and chairman of the board of the European-American Banking Corp.

The case typifies the conflicting interests which often show up as a result of church actions on the socio-economic front.

Such religious initiatives in the corporate area have multiplied lately through church shareholding leverage and other means, seeking to inject church principles into commercial policies and conduct.

Sometimes the religious groups win a point they consider of moral concern, such as steps to improve the environment or racially equitable hiring practices.

Often, however, intervention by churches is shunted aside as impractical or erroneous. But they keep at it.

In an "open letter" to the European-American Banking Corp., 10 top Protestant, Roman Catholic and Eastern Orthodox leaders said the bank has arranged loans totalling $200 million to the South African government and its agencies since 1970, and added:

"We believe your bank's loans directly undergird [that] country's white supremacist policies. . . . As religious leaders in this country, we implore you to end your complicity in racial oppression and cancel these loans."

Ekblom, asked for comment, said "the bank regrets that these people don't like what we're doing," and added: "We have a policy of dealing any place where sound loans can be made and where good relationships exist."

He said "economic ostracism is not the answer to improve the lot" of South Africa's 80 per cent black population.

"The best way to improve their lot is through economic growth and employment."

Ekblom also said that if American-based banks refused loans to South Africa, "it simply would mean that a bank in London or Paris would take over."

The church leaders maintained that withholding bank loans would be similar to the United States government occasionally denying credits to some nations as an expression of "no confidence," and added:

"Your bank's loans cast a visible vote of confidence, with cash, in the future of white supremacy on the southern tip of the African continent."

The churchmen also noted that major U.S. denominations, through joint efforts in 1966-1969, were successful in halting a $40 million loan to South Africa by a consortium of U.S. banks, but that the European-American bank has since been "the only agent" to arrange even larger loans.

They said the $200 million constituted 20 per cent of South Africa's foreign loans for the period.

Love Most Important Of All Spiritual Gifts

By DR. GORDON C. SMYTH

When the heart is stirred speech is inspired. This partly explains St. Paul's pinnacle of writing — the Hymn of Love in 1 Corinthians 13. Referring to the many gifts — that of faith, hope and love, he assures his readers that the greatest is love.

Love, that alone endures through eternity, is the most important of the "gifts referred to in chapters twelve through fourteen, where the Apostle is discussing "spiritual gifts". It deserves to be ranked one with the character of the source of love — God Himself.

Modern psychology points up our need for love, for feeling wanted. Although many may joke about TLC (Tender Loving Care), we know that it is a vital part of life. Infants and children sense the reality of love before they can pronounce the word. They cannot be duped by sham. The emotion of love cannot be pretended.

How applicable to hear a parent saying, "I can't understand my son. I bought him everything he wanted. I did this and that. Giving ad infinitum the things which were given to him. What did he want?" The youth mercifully wanted the greatest gift of all — love.

However, we need to love as well as be loved. A wife once wrote to a friend, "Someday I hope my husband will start to capitalize (on) the need for loving rather than the need to be loved, and that commercials will emphasize the same."

The woman realized that it was when her husband was under pressure that he told her that he hated her. She knew that a bit best he did not really mean what he said. She added, "The declaration is more important to the declarer than to the hearer." That was a profound insight.

Philosopher Bertrand Russell produced a book, "Why I Am Not A Christian". And yet, in a lecture at Columbia University, he spoke words to challenge us, with all his apologies left in.

Note what Dr. Russell said, and digest it. "The root of the matter [of the world's evil] is very simple and old-fashioned thing, a thing so simple that I am almost ashamed to mention it, for fear of the derisive smile with which wise cynics will greet my words."

No matter, Russell went on, "the thing I mean is love, love to forgive me for mentioning it — to love, Christian love, or compassion. If you like, please have a motive for existence, a guide in action, a reason for courage, an imperative necessity for intellectual honesty."

Sephardic Jews' Leader Recalls Days of Amity

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

NEW YORK (AP) — The spiritual leader of the world's three million Sephardic Jews, Israel's chief Rabbi Ovadia Yosef, says Jews and Arabs once lived together in friendship and have the shared background for doing so again.

"There is a definite potential for both cultures to come together and flower together, once the political questions are settled," he said in an interview here while visiting the United States.

Rabbi Yosef, 54, one of two Israeli chief rabbis and the foremost leader of Jews with ancestries in countries bordering on the Mediterranean, said those Jews particularly have common cultural roots with Arabs.

Recalling his own four years as head of a rabbinical court in Egypt before Arab-Israeli fighting broke out, he said in that period the Jewish community there took full part in Egyptian civic functions.

"That is how it could be and how it ought to be," he said.

The branch of Judaism which Rabbi Yosef leads, Sephardim, is a Hebrew word literally meaning "Jews from Spain," but it also includes Jews from other Mediterranean countries, including predominantly Moslem countries of Syria, Turkey, Lebanon, Egypt, Iraq, Iran and Algeria.

The Jewish population in Moslem countries declined sharply, most of them moving to Israel since the fighting began. Rabbi Yosef was born in Baghdad, Iraq, and his wife in Syria. Both know Arabic.

He noted that one of the most influential Jewish philosophers, codified Jewish law in the 12th century, wrote in eloquent Arabic and his thought remains influential in Arabic culture.

"We have had that kind of interchange," Rabbi Yosef declared.

Although Sephardic Judaism represents a minority of the world's 14 million Jews, they make up about half of the Jewish population in Israel.

Rabbi Yosef also expressed hope that conditions soon may permit immigration to Israel of Syria's 4,000 Jews and of the world's largest community of black Jews—about 20,000 in Ethiopia.

Jewish law recognizes no difference in skin color," he said. "Every man is born in the image of God."

On a political issue, he said it is an "open question" whether he will recommend that Israel's National Religious party support Israel's government administration without a change in Israel's law of return.

Theology Students Headed by Woman

HALIFAX (CP) — The two women studying for the ministry at Atlantic School of Theology make up for their lack in numbers.

They were the only nominees for the student pastor awards — Lorraine McCaskill, 22, of Kentucook, N.S.

Miss McCaskill says she feels she must do a good job to show women are capable of providing leadership to a group as diversified as the college's students.

The students include those studying for the ministry and those taking courses in theology on a part-time basis and ministers engaged in continuing education. There are students from the United, Anglican and Roman Catholic churches.

Miss McCaskill says there is a role for both men and women in the ministry. Women find it easier to talk to a female rather than a male minister.

"It is hard to change some people's conception of what a minister is just as it is difficult for some people to accept male doctors."

She say many people have a misguided conception of theology as a pure academic exercise. But as a second-year student, her course load is "pretty heavy" with a substantial amount of practical work as well as academic study.

Bata Strike Over

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

BATAWA — Bata Shoe operation is expected to be back in full swing Sunday midnight following successful negotiations with the company's engineering employees.

Two weeks ago, the 200-member International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers walked out.

Picket lines set up around the plant and diminishing raw-materials stock soon forced layoffs of other workers. All 74 Picton employees and more than 90 at the Campbellford plant were laid off.

Bill O'Rourke, general manager of Bata's footwear division said Friday negotiations had been successful and workers were being called back. He said this weekend trucks would begin travelling to Picton and Campbellford bringing in supplies and full operation is expected Sunday

For the 200 workers, a total of 93 cents an hour was won over a two-year contract.

A union-company announcement terms the wage hike "substantial". The contract included a number of other fringe benefits.

Alec Lawrence, general manager Bata engineering division, said improvements covered a variety of areas, "particularly holidays and overtime premiums".

With the new contract the average union pay will be $4.40-$4.58 an hour in the first year; followed by an hourly 45-cent raise in the second year. No cost-of-living clause is included in the agreement.

The raises reflect about a 26 percent increase in wages over the two years, company officials claimed.

During a special meeting Friday morning, union members voted 159 to 35 to accept the offer.

It's Books-to-ballots Again

By HARRY MULHALL

TWEED — Once in a while a quiet-spoken accountant in this village becomes the most formidable public official in Hastings County.

For Reg Dunham that transformation has now taken place once-again.

Mr. Dunham is returning officer for Hastings federal constituency.

As such, he now has put away his business books and is "preparing to impartially police another federal election in the riding.

By Monday, he expects to have his headquarters open and under organization in Belleville. Within the week, says Mr. Dunham he'll have his enumerators instructed.

By the following Monday, says Mr. Dunham, they should begin canvassing all households in the riding, taking down the eligible names that make up the voters' lists for the July 8 election.

It's the third general election since his 1967 appointment, but despite the practice, this is likely to be his busiest. Primarily, that's because there are more voters.

There are 24 more polls in the riding since the last electoral map was drafted for the 1973 campaign. In Belleville, there now are 182 polls compared to 84.

Biggest reason is population increase.

Also, there's the aim by national electoral authorities to speed up the voting process and to cut down on keeping the number of voters in a poll as compact as possible. The maximum now is 350.

Mr. Dunham doesn't have far to go to finish the all-important ballot boxes.

Once they were lodged for safekeeping in the old Hastings County jail building. It's been torn down. Now he keeps them secured in his own basement.

New Opener For Quinte Exhibition

Quinte Exhibition directors have their fingers crossed, but it looks as though they have a success on hand.

Their innovation — splitting the exhibition into two fairs, one in the spring and one in the fall — seems to be paying off.

Although wet and chill weather was against it, the fair on Ra first day Friday pulled in crowds, and the midway appeared as packed as it ever was on the busiest day of the traditional August fair.

Everett Gowsell, manager, was thrilled that the directors' gamble seems to be paying off.

"The August event came at the wrong time of the year. It was too early for the fall crops, everyone was away on holidays and it was competing with the Canadian National Exhibition and the Ottawa exhibition."

Quinte Exhibition is first on the fair circuit this year and had turned down almost as many entries, for lack of space, as it accepted.

The increase in the number of exhibitors reflects the pre-summer buying mood. The former August fair opened during a retail slump period.

School classes are also heavily select, include the Harry J. Clarke mini-zoo of orchids, mice, hamsters, chinchillas and birds. Bayside Secondary School has proved an unusual exhibit by its technical department "constructed by application" that shows metal work techniques and products.

On the midway, Miss Astra dives into a wet sponge three times a day and the new Polar Express ride offers stomach-sliding thrills.

In Ben Bleecker Auditorium a rock combo plays nightly and "they just came along and volunteered their services," says Mr. Gowsell.

Speculation, Developments Hit Farmland But...

The Land Is Still Producing Although Farmers Are Fewer

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

Farmers may be selling out.

And food-productive land, may increasingly be falling to developers, industry, urban homeowners, earmarked for energy and communications projects—in Hastings county as elsewhere.

It's a situation that has Canadian farmers' spokesman sounding cautiously hopeful.

But—for the present—says a provincial government agricultural official, there scarcely is a remaining acre of arable land not producing in Belleville-area townships.

"Rapid continued reduction in the number of active farmers as result of retirement and speculative purchase of farmlands for future housing, commercial or industrial use, overall farm production in Hastings county is holding its own.

The reason that production is generally steady is that as older farmers go out of business, the slack is taken up by neighbors who expand their operations.

Not So Retiring, after all

Even retired and semi-retired urbanites who buy country acreages as a weekend retreat are getting into the production game.

Not really when such properties are purchased the new buyers are not too interested in land quality. But many do start up small beef herd operations.

Douglas Tipper, Hastings County Agricultural Representative says it gives such retired or semi-retired parttime farmers something to do and is all part of the rural economic force.

It is when such aspiring farmers attempt to get into general farm production—a possibly marginal land that they run into financial problems.

There is just no way the unexperienced owner of 50 or 60 acres of such land can afford today's prices for machinery needed to work his land.

For instance, used tractors at today's auction sales bring as much or more than they cost new 10 years ago.

And other farm equipment is in the same price bracket.

Faced with such equipment costs, Mr. Tipper says it is difficult for such people to set up a viable farming operation.

The alternative, if he wants his land worked and have some crop for home use, is to enter into a share-cropping agreement with a farmer neighbor-seeking to increase feed production.

Mr. Tipper, says the main reason milk production is holding up is due to increasing use of bulk storage tanks by dairy farmers.

He says that when a farmer changes from can to bulk shipping, the result usually is that another two or three cows are added to the milking herd.

The extra cows are added because the farmer likes to see his bulk tank full.

Net result is that even though older dairy farmers are retiring, milk production is being maintained by the addition of more cows by other farmers.

And, the fact there are many farm auction sales as older farmers retire, doesn't mean their farms are going to stand idle.

When the farms are not sold to neighbors they are almost immediately rented by other farmers. Because of soaring feed costs they want to increase production of home grown feed.

Mr. Tipper says this holds true whether the operation is a dairy herd or beef animals.

"I don't think there is an acre of good land for rent between Stirling and Campbellford," he said.

Because at high feed costs, the estimate is that corn planting alone this year will increase demand from 10 to 20 per cent.

Mr. Tipper estimates 90 per cent of farm auction sales are by part-time farmers going into retirement.

But in areas adjacent to the larger urban centres even part-farmers, attracted by soaring land prices, are selling out to speculators.

Even here, however, sale of farmland does not necessarily mean farms are going out of production.

The new owners, while wanting their land to be developed, take advantage of farm tax rebates available by keeping the land in production.

They don't tie up acreages with longtime leases but rent speculative lands on a year-to-year basis to neighboring farmers.

Also, farm lands remaining in production are more attractive than when vacant and growing weeds.

Season Opens in Hastings

Pickerel Have Run; Poachers Rapped

As of today, the entire Quinte district is open to pickerel fishing.

But some already have been discouraged from participation or are taking to the sea son with heavy hearts.

These are the fishermen who try to beat the season by starting early — and illegally — and wind up facing poaching charges.

This year, such poaching charges have been laid in the area than for some time.

Provincial conservation conservation authorities estimate more than 100 alleged poachers have been charged in recent weeks in the Tweed and Napanee conservation districts, supervised by the Ministry of Lands and Forests.

Pickerel fishing opened last weekend along the Bay of Quinte and Prince Edward County. It started in Hastings, Lennox and Addington and Frontenac counties at midnight. Indications are it could be a good season in some waterways, maybe the best in years, say ministry officials.

Scene of most of the poacher patrols was the Bay shoreline area — a prime spawning ground for pickerel and pike that includes Prince Edward and the Trent River.

This breeding area that also produced much of the poaching charges as reinforced government conservation officers and provincial police kept a close watchful eyes on the spawning grounds.

About 50 charges have been laid during the long-drawn spring spawning run, says Jack Stewart, wildlife co-ordinator at the ministry's Napanee office.

"We've concentrated more violations than in the past two years," he says.

With the charges — which will be processed through the courts in the next two months — went confiscations of such big items as automobiles, a boat and nudds. Along with standard illegal weapons — gill nets, spears — there were some new refinements used.

For the first time, a scuba diver gun was confiscated from one man. In Consecon Ville, Napanee and Prince Edward areas there were incidents of fish being taken by rifle fire.

In all, Mr. Stewart figures, over 150 pike and pickerel averaging a total 500 lbs. were taken by conservation patrols. A five-pound spawning pickerel can produce 30,000 eggs per pound, he says.

In one Napanee area, where the run is lighter, five charges of poaching were laid.

Ministry officials say the pickerel run looked good in such areas as Moira and Skootamatta Lake in Hastings.

In the Trent River, believes Mr. Stewart, the run was "excellent compared to the past three years."

Queen Vic's Program Needs More Volunteers

Queen Victoria's community school program will officially wind up a year's business with the election of five officers at the school Wednesday night at 8 p.m.

Many of the courses offered during the winter are now finished but the final assignments are going forward for the spring and summer.

The three workers hired on a Local Initiatives Program grant will finish their terms at the end of the month.

The organizers are asking all interested people in the school neighborhood (the East Hill area) to attend the meeting Wednesday night. Only through participation of the community, they say, can the program continue. Anyone desiring for volunteers to sit on the executive, and to serve as program co-ordinators, instructors and supervisors of the teenagers' program.

This year the program had 14 instructors and 19 supervisors for the teenagers.

What a Little Community Can Do When it Bestirs Itself a Little

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

SHANNONVILLE — There's a big parade here today at this Highway 2 hamlet.

But behind the homely hoopla is a serious Quinte county event that says: Look what a little community can do when it stirs itself a little.

Shannonville is small But in rural Tyendinaga township — population about 2,500 — it's a gravitational point for service and all-round community activity. And it's never had much all-round community activity — to now.

Then, early last year, Hastings County school authorities decided to close down the 1834 three-room brick schoolhouse one of several moves toward centralized improvement.

Local ratepayer raised the inevitable protest, met to take of its association. Some voices rationalized little was to be accomplished in protest. Why not take a positive tack, it was suggested, and turn the situation to advantage?

So they formed the Tyendinaga Community Association, talked with the school board, leased the building.

Objective was a township community centre, a meeting-place social project in an area of small, scattered population.

The idea caught and held. Now, the association has about 200 members, many of them volunteer workers of youths and adults working to shape the conception from the schoolhouse in the past year.

As a result this is what has happened to the Tyendinaga community since last Christmas:

It has its first library, financed through the township, with books rented or supplied from the Belleville and Lake Ontario Regional Library systems; a township senior citizens group has been formed; local youth have a dance hall; adults have rooms for hobby and other activities.

Best of all, says association chairman Don Ellis, a driving force in the project, it has finally created a focal point of community expression.

"There's been great support and acceptance from the community," he says. "At first, maybe some of them might not have got the concept of the over-all program.

But they saw the idea and went with it."

Much remodelling had to be done, and it's been carried out as funds came in from the programs

More remains to be done. Especially, outright purchase of the Building. It's leased to December 1975 with an option to buy only $7,500, says Mr. Ellis. Soon the association hopes to start banking toward purchase day.

Creating the project as volunteers has made friends of people "who only nodded to one another before," he says.

And, with young people involved and given a social outlet there "hasn't been a single instance of youthful mischief in the hamlet since," he claims.

Steve Gonsja, longtime township resident and Hastings County registrary is pointed library board chairman for the library, also stresses the community perspective:

"The ways development is spreading you get the idea we're almost a suburb of Toronto. Then something like this comes along. It takes work and participation. But you get the idea of the grassroots system and the community at work..."

Big-dream Donations Dissipate

Date of the current federal election campaign dissipates dreams of easier-filled war chests for some local political party organizations — including those in the Bellerville area.

It's all hinged on new election legislation which allows tax deductions for declared political contributions as part of proposed campaign reforms.

The law — which was happily stressed in Belleville in the past two weeks at Liberal and New Democratic Party annual meetings — would have permitted anyone declaring a $100-donation to a political party to receive a $75 tax credit. In effect, this meant making a sizeable contribution without financial stress, a boon to less-affluent underdog organizations.

Larger donations received smaller credits on a sliding percentage scale.

Now, says Kerry Soden, treasurer for many local federal Liberals, such sources are out. For the current election is under the old system — once more dig that much harder for political re-assurance.

The legislation was to take effect July 15. Only bitch now is parliament is dissolved — headed for an election dated July 8.

If both Belleville meetings it was evident Liberals and NDP were expectantly looking to the new legislation to cushion campaign costs.

"What it would have meant," explains Mr. Soden, "was that in one year you just needed 1,000 people to donate $100, knowing there was a $75 tax rebate. And, without too much trouble you could have raised $100 — which is about the average campaign costs.

Now, the law is going to hurt all candidates because it simply means there is going to have to reach into their own pockets that much harder.

Kel Kincaid, president of Belleville Progressive Conservatives, said the legislation would have made matters less complicated.

"Personally, I don't know where they're going to get money from in an election," he said. But common sense tells you such a measure would have made things less complicated as what's happening is an increasingly expensive operation — a pre-occupation with paigning."

Garry Sherman, NDP Hastings treasurer, doubted even if the measure was in effect "it would make much difference to us locally."

The NDP already draw subscriptions from membership — up to $15 for a family — for those who want to belong, aside from labor donations, and much reliance on volunteer work, he said.

"We would have got a little more. But we weren't counting on it," he said.

The legislation passed by parliament but not effective until after the election, would also impose strict limits on campaign spending, curb use of television time by political parties.

Friday, leaders of the three major political parties were trying to reach agreement on voluntary campaign spending limits.

Hit Waiter Fined $100.

A Belleville man, Brian Hill, 20, Victoria Ave. was fined $100 Thursday in provincial court after he was convicted of assaulting a waiter at the Canadian Legion lounge April 5.

Hill and two companions had entered the Legion late April 5 after drinking at several local hotels and became involved in an argument with a waiter who refused to serve them since they were not members, throughout the trial.

In the course of their argument, Hill, who pleaded guilty punched the waiter in the mouth before leaving to go to another hotel.

WHA Final Starts Sunday

Good News And Bad in Chicago

CHICAGO (CP) — There was good and bad news for Chicago Cougar fans Friday.

The day started right when club president Wilbur Kaiser reached an agreement that will provide live television coverage in the Chicago area of the first game in the World Hockey Association playoff final between Houston Aeros and the Cougars.

The game, scheduled to start at 8:30 p.m. EDT Sunday in the Randhurst arena in suburban Chicago, is the first of a best-of-seven series.

The Aeros provided the bad news when coach Bill Dineen said Friday that although the 12-day layoff between games worries him, "one guy it should benefit is Gordie Howe."

"He had a broken foot near the end of the season, then the flu. But now he's much better than he's been in a long time, he's ready."

Kaiser said the television agreement was made because the Randhurst arena holds only 3,000 people.

The second game of the series, also to be played in Randhurst, will be televised on a delayed basis Wednesday night.

Howe came out of retirement at the age of 45 and led the Aeros in points this season with 100, including 31 goals.

While Gordie and his sons,

Selkirk Leads Cup Final 3-1

OTTAWA (CP) — "If we don't win the cup now we don't deserve it," said Selkirk coach George Dorman after his team took a 3-1 lead in the best-of-seven Centennial Cup final Friday night.

The Steelers dumped Smiths Falls Bears 11-5 in the fourth game and hope to wrap up the series here tonight, Dorman said.

Smiths Falls outshot the Manitoba team 49-22 and controlled the play for most of the game at generally took a heavy toll on the Steelers.

Selkirk played more than 16 minutes of the game short-handed before about 2,800 fans.

"I said our chances but couldn't make things click," said Smiths Falls coach Gus McKenney after the game.

Mike Cluboy opened the scoring for the Steelers at 4:39 of the first period when his team was short-handed. The Selkirk defenceman broke up a Smiths Falls play and shot the puck between the legs of goalie Fraser Greenwood.

The second goal of the game came at 16:32 of the second period when Rick Klassen blasted a slueline drive past Greenwood. Perry Henningsen and John Kennery of the Bears were scored interference penalties at the time.

In attempt to narrow Selkirk's lead, McKenney pulled Greenwood late in the third period for an extra forward and Don Robertson scored for the Bears.

The goal came when Robertson picked up a loose puck during a scramble and zapped it in off the post to beat goalie Andy Stoess.

"Our defensive game was right on tonight," said Dorman. "But Stoess played a great game and that's what you've got to have in playoff hockey—but goaltending."

The Steelers took 13 of 20 minor penalties assessed during the game.

Howe, 13 times a first-team all-star in the National Hockey League, has won first-team honors in his first season in the World Hockey Association with Houston Aeros.

The 45-year-old veteran of 25 seasons with Detroit Red Wings in the NHL, where he also made the second all-star team nine times, edged WHA scoring champion Mike Walton of Minnesota Fighting Saints for the right wing spot on the WHA's first team this season.

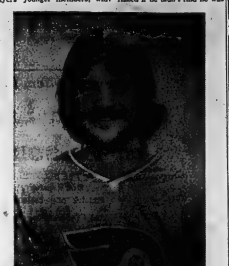
The defenceman says his club, and defence in particular will have to play as "tight as possible."

Kindrachuck Seeks Fifth



Flyers Easy To Figure Out

PHILADELPHIA (CP) — It's not difficult to figure out why Philadelphia Flyers have a bright future in the National Hockey League.

"They're not making the big mistake," said defenceman Carol Vadnais of Boston Bruins. "They keep after us all the time."

Of course, it also helps to have players like Bobby Clarke, Rick MacLeish, Orest Kindrachuk and goalie Bernie Parent.

Kindrachuk, 23, one of the Flyers' younger members, will be seeking his fifth goal in the playoffs when the Flyers entertain the Bruins in the third game of the Stanley Cup final Sunday, starting at 4 p.m. EDT. The best-of-seven series is tied 1-1.

He played one season for San Diego Gulls, a Western Hockey League team that has a partial working arrangement with Philadelphia before moving to the Flyers two seasons ago.

He spent his junior days with Saskatoon Blades of the Western Canada Hockey League. Despite his 49 goals and 100 assists during the 1970-71 season, Kindrachuk was passed up by NHL clubs in the amateur draft.

But Philadelphia scout Jerry Melnyk advised the Flyers to sign him to a professional contract and he reported to the Gulls.

"In previous years I had a tendency to be lazy," Kindrachuk said. "I always thought I'd taken that big step, that extra step, but I guess I didn't.

"But here the whole team has helped me. They all work hard and he work I do to keep up with them has helped me."

Asked if he didn't find he was

"I have a feeling that this is my last year as a coach-I want to go back to school and maybe after this year I'll have enough money to do it."

The 49-year-old native of Winnipeg said he left the University of Manitoba after two years to pursue a playing career that led to coaching.

LOS ANGELES (CP) — Gordie Howe, 13 times a first-team all-star in the National Hockey League, has won first-team honors in his first season in the World Hockey Association with Houston Aeros.

The 45-year-old veteran of 25 seasons with Detroit Red Wings in the NHL, where he also made the second all-star team nine times, edged WHA scoring champion Mike Walton of Minnesota Fighting Saints for the right wing spot on the WHA's first team this season.

Howe's son and team-mate, Marik, was the left wing choice on the second team.

Walton and centre Wayne Carleton of Toronto Toros, J. C. Tremblay of Quebec Nordiques and Al Hamilton of Edmonton Oilers form the defence and Gerry Cheevers of Cleveland was voted the second-team goalie.

Remparts Oust Hawks

CALGARY (CP) — When Quebec Remparts defeated St. Catharines Black Hawks 11-3 Friday night to qualify for the Memorial Cup junior hockey final Sunday everybody was surprised except the Remparts' brass.

"I didn't know we would win so much," said Quebec's by so badly—but few believed it until the Remparts won six in a row.

Quebec's crowd of 6,745 watched the Remparts score six goals in the third period to make it look easy.

Real Cloutier collected three goals for the Remparts, while Jean Beaudoin and Jacques Locas added a pair each. Singles came from Richard Perron, Michel Lachance, Jean Perrault, and Guy Chouinard who also had four assists.

St. Catharines got goals from Bob Dawson, Dave Hudson and Will Paiement.

Paiement was one of many prospects approached by agents and representatives of National Hockey League and World Hockey Association franchises this week.

The Remparts, who lost 4-1 to Catharines last Sunday in the first game of the three-team playoff, led the Black Hawks, 1-0 and 5-2 by periods.

Quebec directed 25 shots at goaltenders St. Catharines Frank Sallve and Larry McIntyre, who replaced Bill Cheropita, sent home earlier this week in a disciplinary measure.

Goaltender Robert Sauve of Quebec, particularly outstanding in the first two periods, and I don't know if it's important," said Emms.

"He's a great hockey player. He has not played as well in this series as he can play. I think something should be done to help us protect young men from the agents who do not care about the men and do not care about the game."

Paiement was outstanding considering pressure imposed on him this week, accompanied by rumors he had been signed or drafted by Kansas City scouts of the NHL.

St. Catharines owner Hap Emms said he did not know whether Paiement had signed a long-term contract.

Barrie Can Wrap Up Title Tonight

Barrie edged Cranbrook Royals 4-3 Friday to take a 3-2 lead in the best-of-seven final series. If Cranbrook wins tonight, the seventh game will be played Sunday.

Both teams, which had defeated to the reference earlier in the series, expressed satisfaction with the officiating Friday.

Bill Bucyk of Edmonton, a referee in the Western Canada Hockey League and the World Hockey League, was in charge of the game.

In the first period, Bucyk assessed 11 penalties, two of them majors when the game was briefly seven minutes old. His firm handling of the first period resulted in only two second-period penalties and none in the third.

The third period was the first regulation period in the series that was penalty-free.

Earlier in the series, Barrie playing coach Darryl Sly said the referees, from the Western International Hockey League—Cranbrook's home loop, were "making a farce of the Allan Cup."

Sly made his comments after Barrie lost 4-3 in the second game of the series. The Flyers had protested that one Cranbrook goal had not gone into the net. They also claimed one of their shots went in and out of the Cranbrook net. It was not counted.

Then, after the fourth game

Wednesday, which Barrie won 5-4 in overtime, Ron Hutchison, Cranbrook manager, said there should be neutral referees.

"I consider it totally unfair to the home team to have to play a series in which the officials are from the WHL," he said.

Hutchison said the referees had become accustomed to Cranbrook players over the season and "it appears to me they are watching certain players who they know through experience tend to play the game a little aggressively."

WHL references have officiated three of the five games in the series. For the third game, a referee from the Ontario Hockey Association was used.

Reagan opened the scoring for Barrie Friday with a goal midway through the first period.

In the second, Powis and Martin gave Cranbrook a 2-1 lead, but Barrie bounced back with seven goals to win.

Miller tied the game early in the third, but Hincks scored the game-winner for Barrie at 12:31.

Walker Hardware has operated at the same location for over 100 years having been established in the year 1867. Farm hardware, harness and paint were the main things sold in those horse and buggy days.
In 1966 Walker Hardware joined with hundreds of other progressive hardware dealers across Canada and became a member of Home Hardware Stores Limited for co-operative purchasing purposes. Walker Home Hardware is Independently owned; the Directors being Wilbur M. Fox, Doug. V. Duminie and Ron W. Fox — the Officers, Wilbur and Doug.
The main-floor hardware and paint departments were completely remodelled recently. Merchandise is now displayed in a more modern and efficient manner for the convenience of customers, resulting in quicker service. A grand opening of the new department is planned; the dates will be announced in this paper next week. There will be dozens of Special Prices and Prizes for customers.
In the modern market place, where costs and prices continually spiral, the "Red Coats" of Walker Home Hardware continue to sell quality at fair prices, coupled with value, service and dependability to all customers.

20 TIPS TO BETTER GOLF
by George Knudson
Copyright 1974, Toronto Sun Syndicate

TIP NO. 1 PRE-SEASON CONDITIONING

Although it is helpful to be generally fit when the golf season begins, no amount of jogging, swimming or the like will prepare you for swing a golf club.

The best way is tone up your wrists and arms is to use a weighted club. You can purchase a weighted head cover or a heavy ring that slips over the shaft or one of your woods — use an old club if you prefer.

For a copy of George Knudson's new booklet "TWENTY TIPS TO BETTER GOLF," send $1.00 (cash or money order) to cover cost and the name of this newspaper in GOLF TIPS, P.O. Box 255, Station "A", Toronto, Ont.

Start by doing simple lifting exercises, holding the club with the last three fingers of your left hand as illustrated. This builds up the wrist and forearm.

To tone up the shoulders and upper arms, swing the weighted club as you would a regular wood. Keep at it and you will feel your strength and club control improving.

$50,000 in Purses

Frontenac Offers Rich Stakes Program

To ensure that this season will be the most exciting and successful in the history of harness racing in Kingston, Frontenac Downs has offered the richest stakes program ever to horsemen in this area.

With only eight stake events scheduled, the total estimated purse is nearly $50,000.00, almost twice as much as was offered for the entire racing season several years ago.

As well as this lucrative stake program, several top quality invitational races will be conducted at the "Downs". The first one in this series will be this Sunday, the Ivan Guernsey Invitational Pace, which has seven starters of 2:03 to 2:04 caliber facing the gate. The field consists of:

Sir Edward Pick—Ian McEachern — took a mark of 2:03 3/4 last year. Has been racing at Greenwood.

Mary Bing — Doug Brown — has finished a very close second in her last two starts in the preferred ranks.

John's Duke—Vern Moulton — started only three times this year making one of them a win. In the remarkable time of 2:05 1-5 at Blue Bonnets in January. This horse has earned nearly $18,000.00 lifetime only 22 starts last year.

Prima Blossom — Garry Filson — is bound to be tough after having a couple of starts in her. She has finished third in her last two starts.

Johnny Bing — Guy LaRush — this famous 12 year old campaigner won last year in 2:04 1-5 on a half-mile track. During 1973 added another jumped up almost immediately earnings near the $112,000.00 mark, for Mrs. Norak Peters. He, as usual, is bound to be the favorite.

Luciano — Bernie Corcoran — everyone knows how tough this horse is after winning its last four starts racing preferred and invitational horses.

Bessie Hawthorn — Rejean Boily — last year was the first year of racing for this mare. Despite her greenness she still won 12 of her 26 starts and earning a lifetime mark of 2:04 3/5 for Rejean Boily and Cam Wynnamaker, of Cosecon, Ontario.

Tentative dates for the stakes program are:

Ontario Racing Commission (ORC) — Two Year Old Pacing Colts — Sunday, June 23, 1974 — $9,000.00

Ontario Harness Horseman's Association — Belvedere Pacing Stakes — Sunday, June 30, 1974 — $5,000.00

Midway — Non-Winners $1,500.00 Lifetime — Sunday, August 4, 1974 — $3,500.00

O.R.C. — Three Year Old Pacing Fillies — Wednesday, August 21, 1974 — $9,000.00

Hiram Walker — Non-Winners $2,000.00 Lifetime — Sunday, September 1, 1974 — $3,500.00 This popular stake is still accepting $5.00 nominations until May 15, 1974.

"Why shouldn't the average Canadian have a car that's built to last?"

Something terrible is happening in Canada, and everywhere we look for clear matters we're getting more and more accustomed to things not lasting very long. We accept it as a fact of life.

Shirts seem to rip easier. Shoes fall apart faster. There are lighters you throw away when you're finished with them. Furniture just seems to be nailed together.

Craftsmanship, it would appear, is fast becoming a corny, out-of-date idea.

"Quality keeps going down yet prices keep going up."

Take cars, for example. A car is the second most expensive purchase (after a home) that most Canadians make.

It's a big decision and it costs a lot of money. So you'd sure like to think that it's one item that would last.

Yet how many 7 or 8 year old cars do you still see driving around these days? In fact, how many 4 year old cars?

Not too many.

Unless they're Rolls Royces or Volkswagens. (There are over 200,000 Volkswagens 4 years old and older driving around in Canada.)

All thirty or forty thousand miles, it's not unreasonable to expect a Rolls to last indefinitely. But at a mere $1/10th of the price, why Volkswagens of all the other cars in the world?

"Some people think we're crazy."

In spite of the fact that few things in life are made the way they used to be, we still make our cars the way we used to.

With all the time and thoroughness.

So thorough, that the editor of a famous American motoring magazine wrote, "I cannot praise it understatedly and fulsomely enough."

Which is understandable. Since we have never understood the meaning of "planned obsolescence" as it relates to a large part of the auto industry. As phrased by a noted businessman/author/economy others, it states "...maximum sales volume demands the cheapest construction for the briefest interval that the buying public will tolerate."

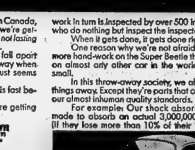
It starts with the way we painstakingly make a car.



From the moment its first two parts come together, it starts to be poked, eagle-eyed, tested and re-tested by a group of the most uncompromising people in the world. The 8,749 VW inspectors. As if that weren't enough, their work in turn is inspected by over 500 inspectors who do nothing but inspect the inspectors.

When it gets done, it gets done right.

One reason why we're not afraid to lavish more hand-work on the Super Beetle than ever is on almost any other car in the world. Big or small.

In this throw-away society, we also throw things away. Except they're parts that can't meet our almost inhuman quality standards.

For example: Our shock absorbers are made to absorb an actual 3,000,000 shocks. (If they lose more than 10% of their "spring",

One of the most expensively built cars in the world.

A little crazy maybe, but the only way we know to make something as close to perfect as is possible.

"Why do they keep bringing out new cars each year? Is something wrong with last year's?"

For the last 25 years, we've done something else nobody else thought of doing. We didn't spend all of our money working on looks. We've worked on the works. (Who wants to be driving a car that'll look a couple of years old in a couple of years, anyway?)

And the money that's saved by not retooling for frivolous new styles each year gets poured right back into the car.

So you'll find intelligent and desirable things on a Super Beetle that you won't find on many more expensive cars.

Like: A sealed bottom. A MacPherson strut front suspension. 15" wheels for longer tire life. Negative steering axis radius. It causes the Super Beetle to move straight ahead as you brake, when one side of the car is riding on ice or snow.)

Parts that are interchangeable from year to year. Materials and workmanship that are the best money can buy.

Warranties and service or "Where are they now that I need them?"

Our madness doesn't stop with the way we make the car. It extends right into the way we service it.

We call it the VW Owner's Security Blanket and again, it gives you a package unlike any other in the world.

A 12 month 20,000 mile warranty including a 24 month 24,000 mile extended warranty for internal engine and transmission components, electronical analysis with four free check-ups, express care and a dealer repair guarantee.

If a warranty repair takes overnight, we'll even lend you a free car by appointment for as long as it takes.

The mechanics who work on our cars are something else again.

It takes at least three years to become one. They're factory trained, and when they're not working on Volkswagens, we're working on them. At even more VW Factory courses that we send them to regularly so they can even further perfect their techniques and knowledge. Finally of our experts. (When you work as hard as we do on perfecting a car, you work equally as hard at perfecting the men who work on the cars.)

"They got a lot when you bought it? Why should you get so little when you sell it?"

Strangely enough, one of the nice things about owning a Super Beetle is selling it. Since they're built to hold up, depreciation is held down. In a sense, the older it gets, the more valuable it gets. Used cars and check the prices of used Super Beetles. Because they rarely look used, the prices we're generally high. (Quite often a 4 year old one will be worth more than some 5 year old cars that cost twice as much to begin with).

Common sense again. When you make something that lasts, everything about it will last.

Which might help to explain why more Beetles have been sold (over 16½ million) than any other single car model in the history of auto manufacturing. And why more of them are still on the road.

If you're looking for a car that's proven it can actually deliver what it promises, year after year, drop into your nearest VW dealer's and look very carefully at the Super Beetle.

If nothing else, it'll at least re-assure you that somebody's still around who believes making it last, comes first.

Price Not Signed With WHA Team

MONTREAL (CP) — Larry Sacasni, a lawyer representing Pat Price, said Friday the 18-year-old defence star with Edmonton Bleders of the Western Canada Hockey League had not signed a contract with the Vancouver Blazers of the World Hockey Association.

There were reports Friday that Price had agreed to a five-year, $1 million pact with the Blazers.

"He has not signed with the Blazers or any other WHA team," Sazani said. "We have been talking with the Blazers and we have come fairly close.

"There are still a couple of points that have to be straightened out.

"It could be that he will sign and it could be that he will not sign.

"He is interested in Vancouver. He's from Nelson, B.C. and he likes the idea about playing in Vancouver."

A report Thursday said Price had been selected by Washington Capitals of the National Hockey League as their No. 1 amateur pick.

Sazani said he had talked to Washington about Price "but they may not even draft him.

"They are also interested in Greg Joly and I don't think they'll take him," Sazani said.

Joly is a star defenceman with Regina Pats, who are involved in the Memorial Cup playoffs in Calgary.

In Vancouver, Joe Crozier, general manager of the Blazers denied that Price had signed with them.

"We are certainly making every effort to sign him," Crozier said.

Price had 37 goals and 68 assists to lead Saskatoon in scoring this season.

Crozier was also in Calgary Friday to sign Ron Chipperfield, a high-scoring centre into association with Brandon Wheat Kings of the WCHL.

Calgary, Ernie McLean, general manager of New West, minster Bruins of the WCHL said "the reason for all these talks this week is that no club wants to waste a draft choice on a player it can't sign.

Owner Hal Emms of St. Catharines Black Hawks, who met Quebec Remparts Friday in a middle-ground Memorial Cup semi-final, confirmed that his top 18-year-old, Wil Paiement, has been drafted by Kansas City Scouts of the NHL.

"I don't know if he will be signed," Emms said.

Jack Gillies of Regina Pats, who impressed coach Scotty Bowman of the NHL Montreal Canadiens last season as he plays it like a pro right now," has been asked several times this week whether he has signed.

He consistently said no, but he announced that he too has signed with a major league club.

Bucks Force Seventh Game

BOSTON (AP) — A clutch basket by Kareem Abdul-Jabbar gave Milwaukee Bucks a 102-101 win over Boston Celtics Friday night, forcing a deciding game in their best-of-seven National Basketball Association final.

The two teams meet for the title in Milwaukee Sunday afternoon.

Abdul-Jabbar hit while moving toward the baseline just four seconds after John Havlicek had put Boston in front 101-100 with a baseline jump shot.

Dave Cowens scored on a jump shot for the Celtics to tie the score 86-86 at the end of regulation time. Havlicek then knotted the count 90-90 in the closing seconds of the first overtime.

The Bucks withstood a furious second overtime burst by Havlicek who scored nine of Boston's last 11 points.

Abdul-Jabbar scored only four of his 34 points in the two overtime sessions. However, he saved his last basket for the end.

We Can Survive Without Football

TORONTO (CP) — Fullback George Reed of Saskatchewan Roughriders said Friday that the World Football League is causing some people unnecessary worry.

The all-time rushing leader in the Canadian Football League said the WFL is going to cause improved conditions for players in the CFL.

"But I don't think you're going to see any dilution in Canadian football. We can survive. We've been through worse. Most players, the ones you really wonder about, will honor their contracts.

"There might be some who will test the option clause and that's not a bad idea. The option clause, that's something else personally, I don't like it.

"You're supposed to become a free agent if you play out your option plus one year—if 5-per-cent reduction in pay—but it doesn't work that way.

"That should allow you to move freely but you can't. Your option clause cuts your salary 10 per cent, has to be reimbursed. If a team isn't satisfied, you might not be able to play for any other team."

Reed, president of the CFL Players' Association, is one of 30 stars who will compete today in a charity touch football game against members of the National Football League Players' Association.

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Philadelphia Atoms edged Baltimore Comets 3-2 on a penalty kick by Jim Fryatt with 10 minutes left in Friday's only other game.

The Metros made first-half goals by Fernando Pinto, who scored on a rebound shot, and Vojin Lazarevic, who knocked in a corner kick by Gene Sierri-cer, stand up for the victory.

Driessen Slams First Homer In 51 Games For Cincinnati

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Evan Dan Driessen was surprised at his first home run in 51 games, which ended Cincinnati Reds' 10-game drought. Driessen, who also had two singles, clouted his homer in the fourth inning Friday night to give the Reds a 3-2 win over Houston Astros in National League baseball action.

Tom Seaver, who scored ahead of Driessen, jumped up and down four times on home plate because "it's been so long I wanted to make sure I got it."

"It was a fast ball, just above the knees," said Driessen. "I've been trying to hit a homer all year. So far this and the lay-offs have just killed my rhythm."

In other games, Philadelphia Phillies beat Pittsburgh Pirates 3-2; Montreal Expos edged St. Louis Cardinals 5-4; Los Angeles Dodgers downed San Diego Padres 7-5; San Francisco Giants shaded Atlanta Braves 5-4 in 13 innings and New York Mets thumped Chicago Cubs 7-2.

Dick Ruthven and Mac Scarce stopped the Pirates on four hits to lead the Phillies. The only hits off Ruthven were by Richie Hebner in the first and ninth innings and Richie Zisk in the second. The Phillies got a home run from Mike Schmidt in the sixth inning.

It was all the best integrals of the Expos that Steve Rogers, their ace pitcher, stayed in against the Cards. After the Montreal, had dropped three games in a row and nine of his Rogers was pounded for four runs and five hits in the fourth inning but the Expos, trailing 4-3, scored two unearned runs in the fifth on Willie Davis single and a bases-loaded walk to Ron Fairly.

"I wasn't looking to take Rogers out," said manager Gene Mauch. "I was looking for him to get somebody out."

Steve Renko, who homered earlier, doubled in the tie-breaking run in the eighth inning after Don Cory's single and a sacrifice to spark the Dodgers. Ysidro Monday scored on a pinch single by Tom Paciorek. Cey and pinch hitter Kie McMullen also homered, while Derrel Thomas connected for the Padres.

Gerry Maddox of the Giants singled, Bobby Bonds in the 13th inning after Bonds led off with a single off Buzz Capra and went to second as Vic Davies grounded out. The Giants came from behind twice. They tied the score 3-3 in the fifth on Dave Kingman's double, an infield out and Bonds' sacrifice fly. Chris Speier hit a home run in the seventh, making it 4-4. Darrell Evans hit a three-run homer for Atlanta and Hank Aaron doubled home the Braves' other run.

Jerry Grote drove in two runs with a bases-loaded single and Dave Schneck hit a two-run homer, leading the Mets and Jerry Koosman, 4-0, to victory. Grote's single was the first of his three hits, came as the Mets scored three times in the second inning off Cubs' starter Burt Hooton. Schneck homered in the seventh off Ray Burris.

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — The all-star teams from the rival American and National Basketball associations apparently is on as scheduled at the Providence Civic Center May 18. McNally Happier Winning Games On Playing Field

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Left-hander Dave McNally of Baltimore Orioles says it's fun pitching when baseball games but he would be happier if he didn't have to watch from the bench.

He allowed only six hits during his nine innings Wednesday night but was relieved with two outs in the ninth after Bobby Grich singled, pinch-runner Enos Cabell was sacrificed to second and Earl Williams delivered a tie-breaking single.

Kline departed and the Orioles picked up an insurance run on a sacrifice fly by Don Baylor off reliever Tom Hilgendorf.

In other games, New York Yankees downed Milwaukee Brewers 7-2; Detroit Tigers edged Boston Red Sox 3-2 on Leon Ashbeck's beat Minnesota Twins 4-2; California Angels shaded Kansas City Royals 2-1 and Chicago White Sox topped Texas Rangers 8-7 in 14 innings. McNally raised his record to 3-2 while Hilgendorf dropped to 1-4.

"We both had real good stuff," said Kline. "We had our chances to score and we didn't. They just outlasted us. Maybe next time I'll outlast him."

Baltimore scored in the third inning on a home run by Mark Belanger and Cleveland tied it in the seventh on a homer by Frank Duffy.

Dick Tidrow of New York checked Milwaukee on seven hits to even his record at 2-2. Sandy Alomar and Chris Chambliss contributed run-scoring singles for the Yankees who held on to first place in the East. Don Money and Darrell Porter connected for the Brewers who have dropped five straight.

Pinch-hitter Ben Oglivie stung Yankee relief man mates by doubling home the winning run with one out in the ninth for De-

Gendron Named Coach

QUEBEC (CP) — Jean-Guy Gendron has been named coach of Quebec Nordiques of the World Hockey Association, the club announced Friday.

Gendron, who played for the Nordiques for two seasons, replaces Jacques Plante, who resigned last Saturday as coach and general manager.

Plante, who joined the Nordiques in the fall of 1972 after playing five seasons for Philadelphia Flyers of the National Hockey League, has also played with New York Rangers, Montreal Canadiens and Boston Bruins in his NHL career.

The Nordiques announced Tuesday that Maurice Filion would replace Plante as general manager.

LAWN PROBLEMS?
A great many poor lawns should simply be dug up and re-built. In most cases the whole contour and sub-drainage should be corrected. In others, the owner has a simple choice between stately old trees and turf. It's almost impossible to have both.
We do however have a few suggestions that will keep the bull dozer away and peace in the family.
1 — Fertilize Frequently
Rather than once a year, fertilize frequently. Simply keep large feed on hand and feed poor turf every month all season. Help grass compete with those voracious trees.
2 — Aeriate and Verticut
3 — Kill Weeds
Weed and feed or sprays are effective under good conditions (high temperature and adequate moisture).
4 — Over-Seed
One of the best new turf grasses on the market is HIGHLIGHT CHEWINGS FESCUE. We've never seen a grass as good for use for shade or poor soils. It has a nice fine yield green texture. Try HIGHLIGHT before calling the bulldozer man.
5 — Water Well Once a Week
Don't spray lightly every day, soak right down to sub-soil once weekly.
6 — Again Fertilize
Grass can't compete with all the problems that create a poor turf unless it is well cared for nutritionally.

April Rise in Cost of Living Index Provides Fuel for Election Fires

OTTAWA (CP) — With inflation billed as the main issue in the July 8 federal election, a new increase in the cost of living produced the first new fuel for campaign fires Friday.

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield said in a statement the figures justify Parliament's decision Wednesday to defeat the government on the basis of Finance Minister John Turner's budget.

"If Canadians needed any further evidence of why the Trudeau government's budget was unacceptable," he said, "they have it today in the latest consumer price index statistics."

While Statistics Canada reported that the cost of food consumed at home declined by two-tenths of one per cent, Mr. Stanfield said in a statement the cost of items other than food increased almost a full percentage point from March to April.

Mr. Stanfield said the budget "offered nothing to deal with the widespread and serious inflationary expectations that exist in Canada, and obviously the problem is still growing."

Despite then slight easing of home-consumer food prices on a monthly basis, they were 15.2 per cent higher than in April, 1973.

Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan took the blame for government-sponsored increases in the cost of milk, butter and skim milk powder and for controls on imports of lower-priced United States eggs and turkeys.

He told milk producers in Cherry Valley, Ont., that food is still a bargain and prices for home farm products remain too low.

"I may not be popular with consumers," he said, "but I know dirn well I'm right."

Meanwhile, Ontario Premier William Davis, Newfoundland Premier Frank Moores, New Brunswick Premier Richard Hatfield, and British Columbia Conservative Leader Scott Wallace offered their support to federal Conservatives.

Mr. Wallace said the "hands-off attitude" of some provincial leaders is artificial because of the overlapping of provincial and federal affairs.—

But David Anderson, B.C. Liberal leader, said he expects he'll be too busy with provincial matters to help much in the federal campaign.

There's been jovial annoyance after having had an election less than two years ago," he said. "No one is enjoined."

Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed, and the other Conservative leaders, said he planned to campaign only "on a limited basis" and only within his own province.

In the 1972 federal election, he was active only two days.

Other provincial leaders could not be reached for comment.

Mr. Trudeau was to spend about 10 days before leaving Sunday to deliver a convocation speech at Duke University in North Carolina. The appointment was made some time ago.

Mr. Stanfield was to leave early today for a Conservative meeting in Truro, N.S., followed by a flight to Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.

Social Credit Leader Real Thwaites was to visit Montreal and Quebec City today before Democrat Leader David Lewis was to hold meetings with party officials in Ottawa before flying to Toronto centres of Oshawa, Brantford and Sault Ste. Marie, beginning Sunday.

Trudeau Will Speak Sunday At Nixon's Alma Mater, Duke

DURHAM, N.C. (CP) — In his first cross-border trip since he was forced to call a July 8 general election, Prime Minister Trudeau comes here Sunday to speak to thousands of may voters as the main commencement speaker at Duke University.

Sedate, well-heeled, Methodist-affiliated and the alma mater of President Nixon, Duke is conferring an honorary doctorate of laws on the Canadian leader in a ceremony arranged long before the Liberal government fell.

The on-again, off-again nature of some of the arrangements for the visit appear to reflect the uncertainty caused in Ottawa by the government's defeat Wednesday night in the Commons.

Under the most recent plans, both the official schedule and the prime ministerial party are being pared sharply.

Margaret Trudeau and the children, originally scheduled to accompany the prime minister, are to be left behind. A formal dinner Sunday night with Duke president Terry Sanford and university trustees is being dropped. Instead of staying overnight Sunday in a guest house near the campus, Trudeau will return to Ottawa Sunday evening.

What remains of the official schedule after arrival by government plane at 11:30 a.m. EDT is a buffet lunch with Sanford and other dignitaries, the commencement exercises and brunch in mid-afternoon, and an hour-long visit with students from Duke's expanding program in Canadian studies.

The visit is being regarded by officials of the U.S. government as a private affair. The Canadian Ambassador Marcel Cadieux will be in the Democratic Washington to accompany the visitor, but no high-ranking U.S. or state officials are scheduled to be present.

The advance word from Ottawa is that the Trudeau speech will, despite the sudden election call, adhere to the accepted protocol that visiting statesmen will by their domestic political differences at home.

Duke officials report a complete lack of security, wariness and discreet elation in the university community at the turn of fate which brings Trudeau to the neo-Gothic campus a few days after his picture has been featured on front pages across the country in connection with the parliamentary developments.

The University of North Carolina in nearby Chapel Hill, not to mention Duke rival, is also having its commencement ceremonies this weekend and its main speaker is "only" the state's Republican governor, James Holshouser.

Duke is setting some interesting precedents in Canadian studies. It recently became the first university in the U.S. to receive a federal grant of $85,000, for a Canadian program.

The money has become the first in the South to hold Canadian-studies seminars for high-school teachers from the area.

Lalonde Sees Foes' Talk Aiding Liberals

HALIFAX (CP) —Health Minister Marc Lalonde said Friday that Conservative Robert Stanfield's "double-talk" among opposition parties would assure Liberal victory in the July 8 federal general election.

Mr. Lalonde, here to attend the annual meeting of the Canadian Rehabilitation Council for the Disabled, said in an interview the Progressive Conservative party was a "confused" internal strife "despite the best efforts of Mr. Stanfield." The New Democratic Party, he added, had lost credibility by changing its stance on important issues.

Mr. Lalonde said divisiveness among the Conservatives would cost the party votes in the West and that "many" of the language rights issues would prevent it from establishing a base in Quebec.

The health minister reserved his strongest criticism for NDP leader David Lewis who brought down the government Wednesday with a non-confidence motion on the budget.

In response to the NDP leader's criticism that the Liberals had not done enough to help low-income Canadians, Mr. Lalonde said the Liberals had pumped an additional $1.5 billion into programs for the disabled. Canadians over the last two years.

Mr. Lalonde accused Mr. Lewis of talking out of both sides of his mouth" when the NDP leader claimed his party wanted to ensure that the average Canadian was protected from inflation.

By voting down the government budget, more than 500,000 senior citizens had been prevented from receiving additional benefits under the Canada Pension Plan. The election would also force a six-month delay in providing benefits under the plan to about 30,000 women, he said.

Mr. Lalonde said his party was "very definitely" impressed by recent Liberal victories in Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island elections and hoped to improve its standing in the Atlantic provinces. In the 1972 election, Conservatives won 21 of the 32 seats in the region and the Liberals 10.

"We will remain strong in Quebec but I think we have also Ontario. ..I don't know much about Ontario. ..I don't have many contacts there."

Price Increase Sought For Manufacturing Milk

OTTAWA (CP) — Ontario dairy farmers have been taking increasingly militant action over what they say are inadequate returns from milk production.

More than 700 at a rally here Thursday pledged full support to Ontario Federation of Agriculture efforts to have prices raised for manufacturing milk, that used to make butter, cheese, skim milk powder and ice cream.

They said they want either an increase from the marketplace or in federal subsidies, which already are worth more than $200 million a year.

Despite hefty increases in manufacturing milk prices April 1, the farmers argued that they still are losing ground. Average cost of production, they said, was about $10.85 for a 100 pounds, but returns to farmers amount to only about $8.

Industrial milk prices are regulated through the federal Canadian Dairy Commission.

Diphtheria Widespread

OTTAWA (CP) — An alarming number of diphtheria cases have been uncovered recently among western Indians and Metis, apparently spawned by squalid, overcrowded living conditions, Dr. Bill Watt of Edmonton said Friday.

Therefore, the disease may be more widespread than health statistics indicate, said Dr. Watt, chief epidemiologist for the Alberta health department.

He and Dr. John Davis, the federal government's chief epidemiologist, agreed in separate interviews they are confronted by a serious public health problem with no easy solutions.

They were commenting on statistics tabled in the Commons last week showing that diphtheria cases in Canada more than doubled between 1972 and 1973, from 68 to 162, more than half of which were in northern Alberta.

Oil Production Record for 1973

LONDON (Reuter) — World crude oil production reached a record in 1973 with an increase of nearly nine per cent over 1972, despite the supply crisis after the October Middle East war.

A statistical review published by British Petroleum Co. Ltd. Friday shows Saudi Arabia, in the forefront among Arab countries in the use of oil as a political weapon, actually raised its output 28 per cent in the year as a whole.

Other Arab oil exporters which cut production in the last three months of the year to bring diplomatic pressure on Israel also boosted their output substantially over the year—Abdu Dhabi by 24 per cent and Qatar by 18 per cent, the BP review shows. Iran raised its output by 16 per cent.

Iraq, the one major Arab producer which stayed out of the boycott, produced 35 per cent more crude oil than the year before.

But other major exporting countries whose exports are not serious in wishing to eke out their oil assets.

Kuwait reduced production by more than eight per cent, and Libya by three per cent. Algeria allowed its oil output to rise by less than two per cent over 1972 levels.

The United States, world's largest producer of crude oil, accounted for 16 per cent of the world output, but production three per cent less than in the previous year and was forced to import more than 300 million tons or 37 per cent of its consumption.

This made the U.S. the biggest importer as well as the biggest producer.

Spassky Is Ousted By Karpov

MOSCOW (AP) — Anatoly Karpov, 23-years-old chess prodigy known as "the Soviet Bobby Fischer," defeated Boris Spassky Friday, eliminating him from the world challengers' competition.

With the 11th-game victory over the former world champion, Karpov moved into the final round of the tournament to meet the next challenger for the crown Fischer took from Spassky two years ago.

His next opponent is Soviet grandmaster Viktor Korchnoi, who defeated former world champion Tigran Petrosian in Odessa to reach the finals.

Karpov won the four games he needed to eliminate Spassky, the last Russian to hold the world championship, with unexpected ease.

Spassky, the pre-match favorite, won only one game. The rest were drawn. The series was played in Leningrad.

Observers compared Karpov's achievement with Fischer's when the American crushed Spassky to win the world title.

Soviet chess experts say Spassky never recovered from that loss, and he may be finished as a top-rank chess player.

The Karpov-Korchnoi match is set for late this year and the world championship for 1975.

Mounties Back Drive To Form Association

OTTAWA (CP) — A meeting of about 2,500 RCMP members Friday night gave strong indication of support for formation of an association to bargain on wages, working conditions and other matters.

The third in a series of meetings being held to assess the mood of the 13,000 members of the force, the meeting saw considerable support for forming those who advocated an association.

Few spoke against the idea. The audience almost filled a hall in which sponsors had 2,500 chairs were placed. There are about 2,000 RCMP stationed in Ottawa.

Selecting Highly-skilled Immigrants Called Unfair

OTTAWA (CP) — A population expert from Ghana has urged Canada not to accept only highly-skilled and professional immigrants from developing countries.

Frederick T. Sai, assistant secretary-general of the International Planned Parenthood Federation, told a conference on world population Friday that Canada may appear to exploit poor countries by accepting only their most valuable citizens as immigrants.

Other delegates at the two-day conference agreed that Canada should formulate its own population policy—including immigration—before going to the United Nations population conference in Bucharest, Romania, in August.

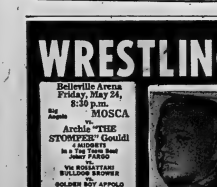
One participant said Canada is well known in parts of the world for looking poor countries of their desperately-trained professionals.

An interdepartmental government committee now is developing a position for the Bucharest meeting and a separate study is under way on immigration policy.

Under the current point system, skilled and professional people, and those with families in Canada, are given preference in immigration decisions.

Dr. Sai said such people are more valuable in their own hard-pressed countries than in Canada.

Bradford Morse, undersecretary-general of the UN, told the 250 people at the conference that soaring commodity prices in 1973 caused a transfer of wealth from poor countries to rich even greater than usual.



He said high prices for oil, grains and other goods provided a windfall of $29 billion to the rich countries. The poor earned a windfall of $5 billion, he said.

But he predicted that the recently-ended UN General Assembly session on resources will lead to measures to reduce the imbalance between rich and poor.

Delegates also voiced concern that rich countries are consuming resources far out of proportion to their share of the world's population.

Mr. Morse said a child born in the United States today will consume 25 times the amount of resources that a child in the underdeveloped world will use.

IN MEMORIAM

HAGERMAN — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Charles, who died May 10, 1973.
God looked around His garden, And found an empty place;
He looked down on earth and saw our sad face,
He put His arms around you, And lifted you to peace,
God's garden must be beautiful For only the best He sees.
Sadly missed by his wife Irene.

HAGERMAN — In loving memory of a dear husband, father and grandfather (Mr.) Hagerman, who died one year ago today, May 11, 1973.
Thy memory is our treasure,
Thy loving smile, Thy gentle voice we gave up to God.
But always keep you near,
For in our hearts you live.
But you did not go alone,
For part of us went with you,
The day God called you home.
If we could have one wish fulfilled,
The dearest wish we know,
We would ask God to let us visit heaven.
—Always remembered by wife Mabel, daughter Joan and husband and son Roger.

EDMUNDS — In loving memory of a dear wife, mother and grandmother, Rita Edmunds, who passed away May 12th, 1964.
Sweet memories, precious and dear,
Your name in whispers I'm sure to hear.
Seldom, a year, a thought absent, But always with that heart present.
In heaven where you are now at rest,
We love and miss you, God knows we do best.
—Sadly missed by your family.

EDMUNDS — In loving memory of my dear wife, Rita, who passed away May 12th, 1964.
Some days are lonely, some days are blue
But every moment I think of you.
Memories linger, memories stay,
Memories last from day to day.
When I see her vacant chair,
Memories bring her everywhere.
—Remembered by husband Ernest.

DENIKE — In loving memory of a dear mother, Mrs. Susan Denike who passed away in Belleville on May 12, 1973.
Loving and kind in all her ways,
Upright and just to the end of her days.
Sadly missed and true, to her heart and mind.
Beautiful memories she left behind.
—Remembered by son Harold and Ruth and grandchildren.

LITTLE — In loving memory of a dear husband, father and grandfather, who died May 13th, 1973.
Today recalls the memory,
Of a loved one dear to me,
And those who think of her today
Are those who think of me.
Sadly missed by Mary Little and Mary Walker and family.
But the Lord knows for who'lm he misses
Will never fade away,
Always remembered by husband Garnet.

CHRISTOPHER — In loving memory of our father, Harry Christopher, who passed away May 13th, 1972.
We think of him in silence,
We talk of him sometimes,
But still we think about him,
His memory we keep.
—Always remembered by Barbara and Ron.

EDMUNDS — In loving memory of a dear sister, Rita, who passed away May 12th, 1964.
We no longer weep when we hear her name,
For time passing years have eased the pain;
But memories and remembered she will always be
A precious part of our memory.
—Sadly missed but ever remembered by sister Flossie Murray, Mary and Eugene Brandt.

Periodic Binges Tough to Control

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: You had a question from a wife concerning her husband and periodic binges. I would like to thank you for your honest, informative answer.

Yes, we are Alcoholics Anonymous are familiar with the periodic drinker. Unfortunately for him, his alcoholic problem is more difficult to detect and therefore harder to accept than the daily drinker.

You mentioned Al-Anon to the wife, and again I thank you. Sometimes we can't "get through" to the alcoholic but if we can relieve the suffering of the spouse or any relatives involved, we feel we have accomplished part of our mission.

Actually I am very grateful to Al-Anon for my own sobriety, at least partially. Through Al-Anon my husband learned that he was perpetuating my drinking by trying to live my life for me.

When we both fully comprehended the slogans, "Live and let live," and "One day at a time," our thinking, and consequently our lives, began to change.

Maybe one day all doctors will understand alcoholism to the extent you do. We certainly appreciate your recognition of the problem and the resulting advice. How right you are each alcoholic is only one drink away. It's that first drink we have to avoid.—A.M., member of A.A.

Thank you for your kind words to me; thank you twice over for the information in your letter that perhaps will let some poor soul understand a little better what AA is doing and what Al-Anon is for. To those who ask where to get in touch with either group, just look in the phone book of virtually any city in the country.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My period came on when I was 13 but now I'm going on 16 and I haven't seen it in three years.

Do you think there's something wrong with my Fallopian tubes? Could they be closed? Should I see a doctor? Most people said that my period might skip from month to month in the beginning. I'd like to know what you think.—L. McC.

Some skipping is very common among your teen-agers, but not having a menstrual period for three years is not normal and should be investigated.

The Fallopian tubes—even if closed—would not account for it. More likely it is something in the glandular system—pituitary, ovaries, thyroid. Faulty nutrition is a possibility, so might be a severe emotional problem. Yes, you should see a doctor.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My granddaughter will be 13 years old and has never menstruated. She seems to be healthy and I have heard girls can live normal married lives without menstruation.—Mrs. R.A.

This young lady should have a thorough workup by an endocrinologist. Any undue delay in menstruation such as she has can be the result of glandular disorders.

The doctor would also examine the pelvic area to determine any possible abnormality there.

While she may seem to be healthy, failure to menstruate at her age is not normal, and the absence can raise the question of sterility or perhaps of some pituitary disorder, or disorders of the ovaries or the thyroid.

You are right, menstruation is not necessary to live a normal life, but it would be very wise to find out the reasons behind her condition.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: About six or seven years ago I had pancreatitis and peritonitis and was told I could never have any alcoholic beverages again.

I have abstained but have found from experience that an occasional drink doesn't bother me. I am wondering if I could not now drink socially without a recurrence of that dreadful disease?—J.W.

Pancreatitis can be caused by alcohol in something like 40 per cent of all cases—and, even in pancreas damaged from some other cause is bound to be sensitive to alcohol.

Evidently you have abstained—except once in a while. And got away with it. But that doesn't mean that you can keep on getting away with it. For one thing, if you start letting down the bars, it would be possible to get enough alcohol at one party to do some damage. For another, even a little bit of alcohol on frequent occasions can add up.

My advice is to go back on the wagon and stay there. You aren't going to know when you have passed the "safe" level until after you have passed it and the damage already occurred.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Would you comment on the benefits of taking cod liver oil for arthritis?—Mrs. R.F.

I don't know of any benefits from that.

Note to Mrs. M.S.G.: Osteoporosis is a loss of density in the bones. It does not "lead to cancer of the bone." But the softened bone can cause changes in joints and be painful.

Fish Multiply

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — United States biologists say that if mercury had not contaminated Lake Erie four years ago, pickerel in the lake would be extinct today. Because of the ban on commercial pickerel fishing, the population has increased dramatically on the lake's Canadian side. If the ban is continued for another two years, the situation will improve 100 per cent.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) You will be favored with valuable insights today. They'll enable you to help sort out a tangled situation that troubles a family member.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) Companionship will be very important to you. Make sure you have something planned you can share with one whose company you enjoy.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) This is a good time to catch up on little tasks you've neglected this week. You should be in the mood. They won't seem so laborious.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Set aside your worldly cares. Just do things today that give you personal pleasure. You're entitled to some fun.

Monday, May 13

Aries (March 21-April 19) Don't get too involved with friends in situations where you'd have to dig in your purse for cold hard cash.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) Your ideas are not in harmony with those of your contemporaries on how to handle certain things. With everyone wanting his own way, goals won't be realized.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) You will have difficulty in getting information that's important for your immediate needs. Don't despair. Keep digging.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) One who is usually generous won't be in a "giving" mood today. Save yourself from embarrassment. Don't ask for what's his.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) Make it a point to obey all the rules of those in authority, even if it conflicts with your way of doing things.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Pace yourself where your work or career is concerned. Otherwise, you'll build up a lot of unnecessary pressure and won't perform your finest.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If you're in the company of one who does not deal openly and frankly, it's best not to seek further involvement with this person.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Demands made today by your mate or associates are apt to be rather severe and distasteful. Don't let them throw you off-balance.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Be sure anyone doing work or a service for You understands what you expect from them.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Desire is likely to burn a hole in your wallet, causing you to spend more than you should on something you can well do without.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Morning is the best time to tend to personal interests. From then on, others will have your day mapped out for their reason.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) A stronger personality will dominate your thinking if you give him the least opening. Have faith in your own thoughts, ideas.

A rather conceited expert once said, "Of course, I overbid. Any time I play a notrump game or slam I figure on stealing a trick if I can't bid."

South's six notrump call could only be excused for that same reason. He had just 21 points and the unsatisfactory 4-3-3-3 distribution. The band was also a laydown since East king-jack of diamonds were bare and South was sure of three spades, one heart, three diamonds and five clubs. Nevertheless, he managed to get himself set with the aid of some super defence by East.

East played his jack of diamonds at trick one. He didn't go through any overtrick with this play. He knew his partner would not lead from an ace against a slam. He also could count points and it was apparent that West didn't hold even a jack.

South won the trick and studied a long time. Then he led a spade to dummy's queen and East came up with one of the fantastic plays of all time. He let the queen hold. Note that if he had taken his ace South would have been forced to take the diamond finesse and make his slam.

As it was South cashed three spades and five clubs to wind up with the singleton king of hearts and two diamonds. East discarded down to the singleton king of diamonds and ace and one heart. South decided West was holding the singleton ace of hearts and king small of diamonds. He led a heart to end play West and East cashed two tricks.

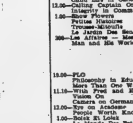
CARD Sense

The bidding has been:

West	North	East	South
	1♣	Pass	1♥
Pass	4♥	Pass	3 N.T.
Pass	4♥	Pass	4♠
Pass	5♣	Pass	6♠
Pass	6♦	Pass	7

You, South, hold:
♠K 2 ♥A J 7 6 3 ♦A 8 6 4 ♣Q 9 4

What do you do now?



Answer: Bid seven. Your partner came to life after you showed spade support. Your long small should be sufficient tympe support. Your heart and trump values to consider a grand slam.

TODAY'S QUESTION

You hold the same hand. East opens one spade. What do you do?

Compulsory Treatment Opposed

FREDERICTON (CP) — Spokesmen for civil liberties and labor groups appeared before the New Brunswick legislature's law amendments committee Friday to attack provisions of a proposed compulsory alcoholic treatment program.

But representatives of existing treatment centres, police and the clergy voiced support for compulsory treatment of alcoholics who would otherwise refuse rehabilitation programs.

The Inebriated Persons Treatment Act, introduced by the Conservative government last month, would allow a provincial court judge to send persons to an observation centre for 10 days if they had been picked up three or more times in a six-month period for public drunkenness.

Similar observation could be ordered for seven days on application by members of a person's family.

If there was reasonable prospects for rehabilitation, a judge could order treatment for as many as three consecutive 28-day periods. There would be a three-member appeal board.

There could be unlimited detention for those judged to be threats to themselves or others. Such cases would be reviewed every six months.

William Walker, speaking on behalf of the civil liberties section of the provincial branch of the Canadian Bar Association, said the government should remove sections which allowed unlimited detention.

"In effect, some alcoholics could spend a longer period in a facility than a criminal who commits murder spends in prison," he said.

It should not be a crime to be an alcoholic. It was "the right" of a person in a free society to be an alcoholic as long as others were not threatened.

Control Sought Of Fund-raisers

TORONTO (CP) — Bernard Newman (L—Windsor-Walkerville) introduced a private member's bill in the legislature Friday designed to crack down on professional fund-raisers.

The bill provides for the licensing of fund-raising firms, and the bonding of their staff. It also requires such firms to file a financial statement after each fund-raising event and limits the amounts that can be charged above expenses.

Safety Rules

OTTAWA (CP) — Proposed regulations for children's car seats, which some critics say are ahead of existing technology, will go into effect anyway, Consumer Affairs Minister Herb Gray announced Friday.

The regulations under the Hazardous Products Act will be brought in over the next 18 months. The first phase takes effect July 1.

Any child's car seat manufactured after July 31 and any sold after Oct. 31, regardless of when it was manufactured, must meet the new regulations.

May Not Attend

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Unions involved in the three-month strike at Duiler Cos Ltd. may boycott contract talks scheduled to resume Tuesday in Toronto under a provincial mediator, a union spokesman said Friday.

Ken Rogers, representative of the International Chemical Workers (ICW), said talks originally set for Monday were postponed a day to give union leaders time to decide whether to attend.

White Praised

TORONTO (CP) — The provincial-municipal liaison committee lauded provincial Treasurer John White Friday for his recent budget which they called "a milestone in the co-operative approach to fiscal management."

The committee said the budget's provision of $239 million to municipalities and local agencies had recognized the inflationary pressures being faced by local governments.

Army Chooses Canadian

LONDON (CP) — Commissioner Clarence Wiseman, head of the Salvation Army in Canada, was chosen today as the Army's next world leader. Wiseman, a native of Moretons Harbor, Nfld., will succeed the current world leader, Erik Wickberg of Sweden, after Wickberg's retirement July 5.

Canada's Prospects Good

WASHINGTON (CP) — Canada's economic prospects for 1974 appear to be comparatively good, Neill E. Currie, vice-president and economic adviser with the Bank of Montreal, says in a report submitted to the 7th general meeting of the Pacific Basin Economic Council. He was more optimistic than his counterparts from the United States and Japan.

Gap Still Wide

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli sources say the gap in the disengagement negotiations with Syria is as wide as ever despite a report by United States State Secretary Henry Kissinger of some progress toward an agreement.

Two Die at Falls

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — Two Niagara Falls, N.Y., men were swept to their deaths over Horseshoe Falls Saturday night as thousands of tourists watched in helpless horror. David Boyd, 29, and Don Walker, 20, were on a test run in their 16-foot boat when it was caught in the fast-flowing waters above the falls. Police said they believe a cotter pin broke causing the propellor to fall off, leaving the boat without power.

Quake Takes Lives

TOKYO (AP) — A powerful earthquake in southern China Saturday caused loss of life and considerable destruction to homes, a broadcast from Peking said Sunday. The report gave no figures. It was the first Chinese confirmation of the quake which had been reported by foreign seismograph stations early Saturday.

Breach Remains

CAIRO (Reuter) — Egypt categorically rejected today a Libyan overture to return to normal relations between the two countries, the official Middle East news agency reported. Relations were strained last month after Egyptian charges that Libya was involved in a plot to overthrow Sadat and an attack on the military academy here in which 11 persons were killed. Libya has denied any link with the incident.

Whites Are Angry

BEIRA (Reuter) — Gen. Francisco Costa da Gomes, chief of staff of the Portuguese armed forces, was met by several thousand angry whites when he arrived from Nampula Sunday night. The whites were voicing their anger even before news had reached Beira of the general's unconditional offer to the guerrilla movement to become "partners in the task of politicization and development of the people, who must have self-determination."

Inflation Foils War on Poverty

VANCOUVER (CP) — The hope that progress is being made in the war on poverty has been shattered because of inflation, Canadian Labor Congress president Donald MacDonald said said today in his final address as leader of the labor organization.

Mr. MacDonald, retiring this week, said in the text of his speech to the biennial congress convention that rising prices are causing a cruel injustice, particularly against those who spend their incomes largely on essentials which have increased in price faster than non-essential goods and services.

"Poverty has always stalked this land of ours, but it was our hope, which was perhaps naive, that we were at last beginning to eradicate it. Now that hope is shattered.

"In the light of current and prospective inflationary trends for the balance of this decade, and still lacking necessary income distribution policies, a solution to the poverty problem is nowhere in sight."

The labor chief said that for years unconscionable politicians "who do not give a damn for the ordinary citizen" have taken Canadians for a ride.

Politicians have tried to convince the public that an unemployment rate of 3½ to six per cent is full employment, while at the same time wages have fallen behind the cost of living, he said.

Mr. MacDonald cited Finance Minister John Turner's argument that real disposable income has increased as "statistical shenanigans."

The anti-profiteering bill, invoked in the Commons just before the government fell, also was a deliberate sham, he said.

Mr. MacDonald told reporters that union leaders will not even discuss the question of wage and price controls with Conservative politicians, who now are campaigning for the July 8 federal election.

"We don't believe in kidding the troops and all it would be is an exercise in hypocrisy," Mr. MacDonald said.

The CLC president also said workers will have to bargain for pay increases of 10 to 12 per cent just to keep up with increases in living costs. On top of cost-of-living clauses in all working contracts, employees should negotiate for a share in increased national productivity, he said.

T.C. Douglas, former national New Democratic Party leader, told union members gathered for the CLC biennial convention which opens today that controls would mean "freezes on profits and prices at their current high levels and on wages at low levels.

He and Premiers David Barrett of British Columbia and Alan Blakeney of Saskatchewan called upon labor Sunday to back the NDP banner while blaming banks and corporations for causing inflation.

The main issue in the (federal) election is not which political party will be elected, but whether the economy will continue to be dominated and controlled by the corporate elite of this land," Mr. Douglas said.

The NDP for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands said Canada has been riddled by corporation profiteering and the excess profits have driven the cost of living higher.

There has been a skillful campaign mounted in the country to blame labor for the cost of living, he said.

"I don't say every union has been simon-pure," he said. "But the government's own economic review states that wages have not been a major factor in the cost of living."

The Liberals and the Conservatives both supported tax giveaways to corporations, Mr. Douglas said. Labor's responsibility was to help the NDP curb corporate power.

Mr. Barrett said that profits made by banks recently have been immoral and usurious.

He said he would like to see the B.C. government get into the banking business.

A "people's bank" could offer loans at six-per-cent interest rates so that more housing could be built, he said. "We want a say in the banking industry in the country."

Mr. Blakeney asked the union members to support farmers in efforts to keep marketing boards rather than see marketing of feed grains turned over to the Winnipeg Commodity Exchange, a private organization.

Marketing boards have protected farmers in the same way that unions have protected workers, he said.

Premier Ed Schreyer of Manitoba also was scheduled to attend the meeting, but was busy with the visit of Princess Margaret.

8 Student Canoeists Missing

PRINCE GEORGE, B.C. (CP) — Searchers found debris Sunday night from canoes used by eight high school students missing on a trip down the Willow River about 30 miles east of here.

Police have not identified the youths.

Wreckage was found near Willow Canyon, about four miles downstream from Highway 16 where the youths launched three canoes and a kayak Friday afternoon.

Searcher Ron Mayo, a local farmer, said a log spans the river near the where the debris was found. Officials said the swift-flowing river, swollen by heavy spring run-off, could have driven the boats into the log before the youths had a chance to alter course.

The group had planned to travel about 40 miles down the Willow to the Fraser and on to Fort George Park in Prince George.

Six Perish in Fire In York Townhouse

TORONTO (CP) — A mother, her four children and a family friend died early today in a fire that destroyed a townhouse in the borough of North York.

Fire officials identified the dead as Vicki Guerin and her children Jacqueline, 9, Pauline, 7, Michael, 5, and Sean, one month old and a family friend, John McKeaver, 31.

The North York fire department said the blaze started just after midnight in the first-floor living room of the 10-year-old structure and quickly spread, blocking a stairwell, the only exit from the second floor where the children were sleeping.

Witnesses said the children appeared at the second-floor window of the attached row house and onlookers shouted at them to jump. Two girls and a boy pounded at the window in an attempt to smash it but witnesses saw them engulfed in flames.

Five of the bodies were found on the second floor. The baby was dead in its crib and two youngsters were beside their beds.

The first alarm was received at 12:24 a.m. that firemen fought the blaze for about three hours.

When the first of five fire-fighting units arrived about four minutes after the alarm "the fire was pretty well established."

The townhouse was burned out. Damage was estimated at $20,000 plus contents.

Fair-goers Enjoy Thrills

The rain that plagued the Quinte Spring Exhibition failed to dampen the enthusiasm of the thrill seekers who spent their time screaming around the rides on the midway. As Saturday's sunshine drew large crowds to the fair grounds, these riders enjoyed themselves on the Polar ride. Other fair-goers spent their time playing games of chance or viewing the wide variety of exhibits.

Bank Rate Raised Again After Frantic Borrowing

OTTAWA (CP) — In an attempt to restrain a ballooning economy, the Bank of Canada has raised the bank rate to 9% per cent effective today.

The increase of one-half of a percentage point follows a month of rapid expansion in money supply and the ballooning of bank loans outstanding.

It was only a month ago that the central bank raised the bank rate by a full percentage point to 8¾ per cent, surpassing the previous record of eight per cent for the central bank rate.

The bank rate is the rate charged chartered banks for loans.

Chartered banks borrow infrequently from the central bank but the bank rate is an important influence on the rest of the interest-rate structure.

The latest change follows a frantic month of rate and loan activity. The rate the chartered banks charge their best customers hasgone rally gone to 11 per cent from 9¾.

The statement Sunday from Gerald Bouey, governor of the Bank of Canada, said international pressures were partly responsible as short-term interest rates in the United States and Eurodollar market have gone up in recent weeks.

"During the same period, the pace of monetary and bank credit expansion in Canada has been much more rapid than needed to sustain the continued expansion of the economy."

There was a $1.34-billion increase in the amount of general bank loans outstanding during the five weeks to May 1, the latest date for which figures on banking operations are available. The total in general loans at that date was $31.98 billion.

Mr. Bouey noted that the recent postal strike was partly to blame for the increase in bank loans. Payments normally made at the end of the month were held up in the mails and many companies were forced to borrow to meet commitments.

It is not possible to accurately estimate the effect of the postal strike but it is clear there has been a rapid expansion of the economy.

During April the annual rate of increase in broadly defined money supply was running at more than 25 per cent. This is currency in circulation and chartered bank Canadian dollar deposits.

The annual rate of increase in money supply, seasonally adjusted, during the first quarter of the year was about 15 per cent.

The latest increase was the seventh in 14 months, from a low of 4¾ percent, set Oct. 22, 1971, and increased to 5¾ per cent April 9, 1973.

This period of rising interest rates has coincided with a period of rapidly increasing rates of inflation, due in part to sharply higher costs for petroleum.

At the same time, the economy has been recovering from what some economists called a recession. During the recovery, many industries bumped up against capacities.

There has been a sharp increase in investments in new plants and equipment in many industries to increase capacity and this has intensified competion for loan money.

Nixon Will Quit Only if Convicted

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon's daughter, Julie Nixon Eisenhower, indicated Saturday that her father would surrender his office only if convicted "on a charge of criminal action" in a Senate impeachment trial.

Both she and husband David Eisenhower portrayed the president as determined to fight impeachment to the end. Her father will fight impeachment all the way through a Senate trial, even if "only one senator believes in him," Mrs. Eisenhower said.

White House spokesmen, in Oklahoma where Nixon gave a Saturday night speech, were unavailable for clarification as to whether her statements meant Nixon would refuse to accept conviction by the Senate if voted on grounds other than "criminal action."

The young couple fielded questions from reporters in the East Garden of the White House. Occasionally they showed annoyance with the thrust of the queries.

"If the media has a hangup and an obsession about resignation and feels they must be reassured from members of the family that my father is going to resign, I feel as a daughter it's my obligation to come out here and say 'No, he's not going to resign,'" said Julie.

She said her father is "stronger than ever" and told the family during a cruise aboard the presidential yacht Friday night that he is determined to "take this constitutionally down the wire."

Gerald Ford Says House Won't Back Impeachment

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Vice-President Gerald Ford says he expects the House of Representatives judiciary committee to recommend the impeachment of President Nixon.

But he predicted Sunday that the full House would not support the recommendation.

In a television interview about Nixon's chances, the vice-president estimated current feeling in the House as 4 to 1 against impeachment.

Tops in the Province

The four-man ambulance service crew from City Ambulance Ltd. here in Belleville won first place in the Ontario Ambulance Operators' Association casualty care competion held at the Four Seasons Hotel during the weekend.

Here team captain Steve LaMorre, left, and Art McConnell demonstrate their winning form as they treat one of two air crash victims during one of the problem-solving portions of the competition. Other team members Rol Gilbert and Harry Hitchon, treated the other victim. The four men will represent Ontario at the International Rescue and First Aid Association's casualty care competition in Toronto in August.

City Ambulance Team Wins Provincial Title

From all over Ontario more than 40 ambulance attendents worked for nearly an hour and a half Saturday trying to provide emergency care for 60 accident victims at the Four Seasons Hotel.

The accidents were not real ones but the care the victims received was probably the best they would get in the province.

On Saturday, the Ontario Ambulance Operators' Association held its annual Casualty Care Competition at the Four Seasons Hotel and when the day was over the four-man ambulance crew from Belleville's City Ambulance Ltd. was awarded the Ontario Casualty care championship.

The Belleville team, composed of Steve LaMorre, Art MacConnell, Rol Gilbert and Harry Hitchon, were the top contestants in a competition that was held to test the efficiency and quality of the care offered to the public by ambulance attendents.

As the Ontario champions, the Belleville team will now represent the province at the International Rescue and First Aid Association's competition in Toronto in August.

There, they will compete with ambulance crews from all over Canada and the United States, for the honour of being designated one of the best ambulance service teams in the continent.

Eleven ambulance crews from all parts of Ontario competed for the Ontario championship at the Four Seasons Saturday, as volunteers from the Quinte area army and air cadet organizations and others posed as accident victims for three problem solving situations.

$722 Lost In Break-in

Belleville police are investigating a break enter and theft, that netted thieves approximately $722 from the offices of Beaver Lumber on Church Street, Sunday night.

PC Robert Thompson, of the Belleville police department discovered the break-in at the lumber company's offices around 12:30 a.m. Sunday while he was making his regular property checks.

Tiny Tim?

Eight championship Belgian show horses were a big attraction at this year's Quinte Spring Exhibition.

The horses, part of the Carlsberg Breweries Championship team and wagon, were on display at one of the horse barns at the fairgrounds and they proved popular with youngsters who had never seen horses that were so large. Here, Steven Potts of Belleville, and his friend Robert Woodcock, had to reach up on their toes to pat Tim, one of the lead horses. Belgians are the heaviest of all draft horses, weighing up to 2,600 pounds.

Authority Expects Option Extension

The Moira River Conservation Authority expects to obtain an extension of its option to purchase the 340-acre Potter property in Sidney township on the outskirts of Belleville.

The authority last winter took an option on the farmland property which it hopes to develop as a greenbelt and trailer park site.

Option price of the property is $770,000, of which Belleville would pay $161,662, with amounts of $19,029 expected to be paid by the townships of Sidney and Thurlow, and by the Moira Authority. The province of Ontario would pay the balance over a three-year period.

Sidney had agreed to its share of the cost, but Thurlow township last week went against contributing its $19,029.

The option on the Potter property runs out in the middle of this month, and the subcommittee executive met Friday evening to decide what action might be taken.

Today authority secretary-treasurer James McLeod said the authority expected to be granted an extension of their option to May 31.

In the meantime the authority will explore several other possibilities for raising Thurlow's share of the purchase price.

Girl Injured In 401 Crash

BRIGHTON — Seven-year-old Tanya Cleveland of Toronto remains in the intensive care unit of Trenton Memorial Hospital Monday after receiving injuries in a Highway 401 accident Sunday morning.

She and two-year-old Darrell, Nancy Cleveland and Joan Davis were all taken to the Trenton hospital following the single-car crash 8 a.m. Sunday.

With the exception of Tanya, all were treated and released, hospital spokesman said. Tanya received "multiple injuries and is in the ICU for observation."

Details of the incident were sketchy and investigation by the Belleville detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police continues.

Injuries Slight In Crash

A Stirling woman received minor injuries but did not require hospital treatment following a single car crash on Highway 33 just south of Batawa early Sunday morning.

Officers from the Belleville detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police said Linda Gizzard, of Stirling received minor injuries when the car her husband, Arthur Ross Gozzard, was driving spun out of control and went into the west side ditch.

No damage estimates are available.

Top Achievers

Five students from Belleville have been chosen to attend the Canada Junior Achievement Conference in Thunder Bay at August. All planners of the Junior Achievement movement in Belleville, they were chosen for their effort on behalf of their companies and the right to return to Belleville with the knowledge they gained at the conference. They are Kevin Postal, Steven Clare, Juliana Corrigen, Gary Davidson and Robert Miller.

Junior Achievers End Successful First Year

Five new industries set up in business in Belleville this winter, without the benign sponsorship of the industrial commission — and folded four months later.

But even their liquidation procedures were a success.

They were five companies set up by high school student members of Junior Achievement of Belleville, part of an international organization dedicated to teaching young people the elements of business operations on a do-it-yourself basis.

The organizations' firm annual banquet was held Saturday night at the Masonic Temple to celebrate the achievements of the founding members, their industrial advisors and their board of directors.

"You are a very select group," said guest speaker Russell Leal, business teacher at BCI and a graduate of two years of Junior Achievement as a high school student in London, Ont. "You should be proud of your achievements — they are by no means easy to come by.

Junior achievement is one of the alternate learning situations springing up outside secondary schools. It brings students together in a simulation of business activity, in which they band together in companies to raise capital (limited to $1 a share per investor) buy raw materials, go through a manufacturing process, sell the product and keep extensive records of all phases of the operation, finally liquidate and give a statement and return on their dollar to investors.

Don Potts, chairman of the board of directors and Garth Stephanson, executive director, introduced Junior Achievement to Belleville last fall. Handicapped by a late start, the project got off the ground in January in upper Front St. Premises donated from Frank Follwell.

Five companies produced five different products: bird feeding stations, glass goblets, wall hangings of carpet remnants, wooden signs and leather coasters.

The realities of business hit home in short order. The company with the highest sales record, $4600 the wall hanging business, returned a profit of 25 cents on its investors' initial $1 share. Before distributing profits, this company donated $15 to the Salvation Army.

The company with the highest return, 40 cents on the dollar, was second in sales. The leather coaster production company sold contracts from city applicians for coasters for promotional purposes and sold $307 worth.

The wooden sign company returned 4 cents profit to its investors on $200 worth of sales.

Two companies, those manufacturing bird feeders and beer goblets, showed a loss. But they were successes in their own way, emphasized Mr. Stephanson, for the effort expended and the utilization of raw products in producing a manufactured item.

Gary Davidson, valedictorian of the fourth graduate Achievement group, said the companies found it difficult to meet the demands of consumers and the projects were therefore successful.

"We learned how a company should be run — how to get together as a unit, instead of a collection of individuals," he said.

"Even if we don't go into business, in no way is this year a loss," he said.

Russell Leal said Junior Achievement "laid the foundations for my interest in business."

He called the project a "cram course in business."

"Business is striving to tell a story," he said. "Public confidence in business has slipped from 58 per cent in the mid 60s to 20 per cent in the early 1970s."

In a public opinion poll people were asked what profits most businesses make. The answer was 28 per cent.

Alarm Box

Saturday, May 11, 2:31 p.m., fire reported at 131 Sidney St., no damage.

Saturday May 11, 3:01 p.m., grease fire on stove at 108 Palmer Rd., no damage.

Sunday, May 12, service call for flooded oil burner at 15 Starling, no damage, 5:36 p.m.

The public was asked what percentage it considered just profit. The answer was 10 per cent.

In reality, North America's 1,000 most successful businesses reported a profit of 5 per cent.

Public confidence in business is slipping," said Mrs. Leal.

"Business must use every method to build up its confidence level and Junior Achievement is the ideal way."

The Belleville performance indicates tremendous growth potential," he said. "Let us never forget our motto: 'Partners in progress'."

Five Junior Achievers were chosen to attend the Canadian JA Conference in Thunder Bay during the last week of August. They are Rob Miller, Steven Clare and Gary Davidson, all presidents of their companies, Juliana Corregan and Kevin Postal.

Two Families Marooned

TWEED — Two families in the Salpidde area, five miles northeast of Tweed are marooned today, as the result of the sudden rise of Salpidde Creek which has ripped out a private bridge and flooded acres of low lying land.

Marooned are the Kenneth Credicott and Harold Laffman families.

Harold Vardy, area farmer, told The Intelligencer today that no one is in danger from the flooding, but Mrs. Laffman is being treated by a kidney machine at her home and is momentarily expecting a call to Kingston General Hospital for a kidney transplant.

Angus Duffy, Emergency Measures co-ordinator from Belleville, went to the Laffman home this morning to make arrangements for a possible emergency trip for Mrs. Laffman.

Also marooned by the sudden flooding of Salpidde Creek was Ontario Provincial Police constable Terry Fox, of Aurora, son-in-law of the Credicotts. Constable and Mrs. Fox were visiting over the weekend when the rising water washed out the driveway and bridge.

Mr. Vardy said a broken beaver dam in blueberry hills to the north may have been the case of the sudden deluge of water. At about 9:00 this morning, Mr. Vardy said the water appeared to have dropped about three inches from its peak.

The Credicotts heard the sudden rush of water during the night and Mr. Credicott, who drives a school bus, was not able to get the bus to the main road before the private bridge went out.

No immediate county bridges were believed to be in danger.

Ethnic Tradition

The folk culture of Europe conjures up an image of whirling dancers in colorful costumes — a combination of art form, exercise and aestheticism that strikes a responsive chord in most people.

The absence of this kind of ethnic cultural tradition in our midst, we have suggested of late, is Belleville's loss. We have the people — citizens and immigrants from many lands — but there have been little concerted effort to project such talent locally.

Consequently we are somewhat envious of the people of Brantford who a week ago were treated to Folklore '74. Described as the first multicultural festival of ethnic singers and dancers in Canada, it embraced no fewer than 1,200 performers (mostly youngsters of school age) from Hamilton, St. Catharines, Kitchener-Waterloo and the host city the Brantford area, a Hungarian dance group from Delhi. National groups participating included Estonians, Japanese, Italian, German, Turkish, Greek, Ukranian, Irish, Scottish and even an India-Canada choir from Hamilton.

Absent, perhaps, because of mercenary pique tinged with ethnic snobbishness that does not become them were the Belleville Indian dancers. Their request for $750 was turned down; the 36 other groups participated free of charge and festival expenses were paid by federal and provincial grants, the city of Brantford, and the Carling Community Arts Foundation.

We are very cognizant of the needs and aspirations of the Indian population, but we doubt if they won any friends by their action on this occasion in Brantford.

If ever such an event can be organized in Belleville — and we hope it does prove possible — let's hope it will not have any dropouts from among those who ordinarily would be eligible to take part. As we suggested recently it is a project the Quinte Arts Council might tackle — a prospect that is closer with the recent announcement by arts council president Manfred Koechlin that funds will be applied to developing new cultural programs for ethnic groups and youth.

Due Praise

When a person escapes death he invariably finds prayer comes much more easily than it did before. At the same time he may also be so shaken that the circumstances of his escape and those who may have come to his rescue are blotted from his mind.

Not so however in the case of 39-year-old Melrose Akit whose brand new car crashed through fencing in Montreal last week and all but plunged into a 70-ft. deep excavation. Only an axle gripping the shredded fence held the vehicle as it hovered nosedown over the yawning gap.

Frightened, but far from going into shock, Mrs. Akit nevertheless had difficulty finding enough to say in praise of workmen who shouted reassurances to her. Of the police and firefighters who came to her rescue, she said they "need more praise for what they do . . . when you need help they're always there."

Well said too! The role of these men is as much humanitarian as it is cognizant of law and order and the security of communities from hazards man-made or natural. The more co-operation and respect they receive from citizens the better the daily round is for all of us.

Keeping Accounts

In a recent article on this page about veteran Ontario legislature member James Noble Allan, the 79-year-old former provincial treasurer was quoted as saying that taxes are acceptable "but you have to let the people know what you are going to do with their money."

This sounds like excellent advice for any Government and especially for all political parties on the federal scene as they move into the election campaign.

Too often our hard-earned dollars are appropriated for all manner of purposes that should not be condoned. Governments should be more careful of their spending and more specific about how such funds are being spent.

Cabinet Could Include Communists

Gaullism in Decline as France Seeks New President

By CY FOX

PARIS (CP) — New political patterns are likely to emerge in France no matter who wins the two-round race for the French presidency. One major prospect is that the age of Gaullism may be dying.

The powerful Communist party, supporting Socialist Francois Mitterrand as the sole candidate of the Left, has tried not to embarrass him in the eyes of "bourgeois" voters toning down, for instance, the final stridency of its May Day celebrations this year.

But Mitterrand concedes that Communists would be members of the French cabinet if he ultimately emerges as successor to the late Gaullist president, Georges Pompidou.

Despite the fact that one non-Communist, non-Socialist, Jean-Jacques Servan-Schreiber, also sought the candidacy of Mitterrand, many Frenchmen who share the deep conservatism widespread in rural France would find the idea of Communists in office abhorrent.

For many years the Communists have been excluded from power despite their party's hold on one-quarter of the French electorate.

A political switch to the Left would have a counterpart of almost equal significance in the event of a victory by Finance Minister Valery Giscard d'Estaing, generally seen as the likely winner of the all-important second place in Sunday's initial election round.

Second place for Giscard would make him Mitterrand's only opponent in the final contest May 19.

Leader of the Gaullist-allied independent republican party, he debased Giscard has many enemies among dedicated followers of the late Gen. de Gaulle, who made scathing remarks privately about the finance minister.

Not least among current complaints of the "ultra-Gaullists" was Giscard's declared opposition to the general's ill-fated referendum proposition in 1969 for steps to make the highly-centralized French administrative system more responsive to regional interests.

The finance department, incorporating as it now does the economics ministry, is accused by Socialist and Left critics of being so powerful as to be a virtual government in itself in all France, with long-established and extraordinary powers.

Beyond this, however, is the fact that a first-round victory for Giscard would endanger what was expressed more than two decades ago by the famed Gaullist writer and minister, André Malaux, as a fundamental principle of contemporary French politics.

This was the idea that, essentially, there are only two great forces vying for control of 20th-century France—the Gaullists and the Communists.

Effectively, the way to persuade hard-line and bitterly anti-Gaullist Gaullists to come in behind the long-standing finance minister if he emerges as Mitterrand's sole opponent May 19.

But it may be difficult to win over men like Malraux and other "barons" of the original Gaullist movement.

It is even suggested in France that some orthodox disciples of the general might vote for Mitterrand rather than for Giscard on May 19.

In any case, what seems to be in the offing is a fragmentation of the polarized state of French politics achieved by de Gaulle between his own forces and their allies on the one hand and the Communists and other Left groups on the other.

Mitterrand and Giscard share many views as far as foreign and particularly European policy is concerned.

But a final victory for either seems certain to set off big changes in the fifth-republic France that appeared for a time to be a lasting legacy of the redoubtable de Gaulle.

Legislature Ponders Sunday Sales

By DON O'TEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — Government policy on Sunday retail sales in the province now is being settled slowly.

It has been learned that the policy now is before the policy committee on justice. It then will have to go before the policy and priorities board of cabinet, cabinet itself and following that, caucus.

It will then be made public.

And word now is that if it survives the considerable controversy it probably will receive in the above bodies it will be quite tough.

Tough in favor of restricted sales.

A clue to this was given in an off-the-cuff speech Premier Davis gave some days ago.

The premier didn't go into details but he made it clear that he favored as non-commercial a Sunday as possible.

And this is a clear indication of restrictions.

But just what the restrictions will be isn't known yet.

Solicitor-General George Kerr, whom provincial secretary for justice, held public hearings across the province looking for public reaction.

And one point he uncovered, which could have some importance, is that in the smaller communities there was little feeling for Sunday retail trade and in the larger centres there were sections of the public who liked the convenience of it.

This opens up the possibility that we may have a double law with some sellings being allowed in the communities while being banned in smaller centres.

Whether this is true or not almost certainly we are going to see some further restriction, and probably some practical form of enforcement.

It is unlikely, for instance, that the large supermarkets will be allowed to remain open—as more and more of them have been doing.

Amalgamation Falls Flat

Peterborough Examiner

Hope for an amalgamation of Lakeshore's Big Four municipalities has fallen on barren ground.

The latest blow to the proposed union of Port Hope, Cobourg, Hope and Hamilton townships came last week when the consulting firm of Totten, Sims-Hubicki Associates Ltd. presented a report to the amalgamation committee.

Ted Sims of the firm did not come right out and say it, but the intent was clear. As far as an amalgamation study goes, forget it.

"It is my opinion that an application for amalgamation of the four municipalities would not be approved by the Ontario Municipal Board and further it, is possible that the government of Ontario would not allow such an application to be heard," said Mr. Sims.

Mr. Sims gave three reasons for his pessimistic conclusion.

The first was that the size, population, assessment base and voting power of an amalgamated group would give it too much dominance in all county affairs.

Secondly, he said, the government is emphasizing reviews of municipal governments through restructuring studies and any study not in line with provincial guidelines would have little chance of success. "The provincial guidelines by the way, have not even been issued yet. They are expected soon.

Thirdly, said Mr. Sims, no bad inside information from a ministry representative that supported his pessimism.

One of Mr. Sims' reasons reflects a perfectly logical concern about the power of one municipal group over other municipal bodies. The other two reasons reflect the wishes of Queen's Park.

They can be boiled down into a simple statement. The amalgamation study shall not take place because Queen's Park does not want it to take place.

Queen's Park, it seems, has its mind made up. No whining or pleading from a group of municipal politicians will change it.

There is nothing startling in these conclusions. Minister of municipal affairs Donald Irvine has made the same point in less equivocal language.

The destruction of an amalgamation dream still leaves Port Hope and Cobourg with their basic problem, however. Both towns are facing tremendous pressure from developers and they want some method of controlling the pressure before it gets completely out of hand.

Mr. Sims suggested they could annex or freeze their land to stop development until the county and the province slowly and carefully decide what to do with the area. The suggestion, despite its obvious weakness, is in keeping with Ontario's prevalent philosophy of development control.

The philosophy seeks to gain nothing but time, time in which the provincial government is supposedly making up its mind on the long and complex aspects of municipal planning. It could be called the rabbit theory in honor of a small creature that acts in the same effective fashion for it burrows deep into the lights in the middle of the highway.

"When in doubt, freeze," says the rabbit theory.

Like the rabbits who have frozen their way to many notable deaths on our highways, Ontario seems to have nothing better to offer.

The Cobourg Mayor Jack Heenan remarked "The fathers of amalgamation are dead." Mr. Heenan has frozen and the developers shall live on.

Canada Needs Strong Government In View Of Prince Edward Veteran

Editor:
The Intelligencer.

I am no longer a young man, I have read a lot of history, and made my modest contribution to some of it. I like my fellow men, and I love Canada. I have seen Canadians die violent deaths because they too loved their country. When I look around the Canadian scene today I see much to displeased me.

People are finding it increasingly difficult to earn enough to pay their way, and it seems economic pressure is leading to strife and contention in an increasing extent. Rail travel, shipping postal services, education, air travel, are all subject to increasing strain. We the people are suffering increasing inconvenience, and increasing costs in consequence. And the economic welfare of our country is being subjected to enormous strain by these stoppages and strikes. I believe that it is past time for us to ask ourselves: "Is there no other way?" Would we like foods until there is nothing left to fight for?

Surely there must be a way to tie wages to the cost of living so that there is no longer any excuse to stop work. Humanity has devised many wonderful things during my lifetime. The achievements of the last half century are dazzling in scope.

I believe that the time has now come for us to turn our attention to the problem of living together. Certainly the man who works has a just right to a proper standard of living. But as I see it the good of the people, as a nation should be our first concern. If Canada begins to fail, we all fail. Canada must be governed by the Government of Canada, it must not allow itself to be unduly influenced by any one segment of the population, and no section of the population should be allowed to imperil the welfare of the whole. All just claims should receive right and proper consideration! But the age of violence, if it be on a civic, national, or international scale is gone. Today, there simply is not enough room in the world for violence, and we as intelligent and educated people should recognize this, and govern ourselves accordingly.

The place for internal problems to be settled is already provided for us, in Ottawa.

It is not any longer a matter that can be settled by strife in one industry, or one section of the public service. The picket-line is today as outmoded as the battering.

Our problem must be settled, while our grain, our vital supplies, and our communication continue to move. To think otherwise is, in my view, madness!

Party Chiefs' Reaction to Budget

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

The bowls of wrath from the Tory side of the House indicate the Turner budget was a reasonable one. Nobody really expected Mr. Turner to produce an NDP budget surely - even David Lewis.

When the Tories refer to the budget as a "socialist budget" then we can assume that it was not too bad.

Mr. Turner rightly points out that the battle of inflation is an international one - that only so much can be done in Canada itself. The international monetary trading partners of the western world must obviously affect Canada.

Mr. Lewis would do well to show restraint. By triggering the fall of the government it may well be that a fed up electorate will show their disenchantment by considerably reducing the NDP members in the house which would be a shame.

We can disregard the comments of Mr. Stanfield. He wanted an election not a budget. The election of a Tory government would put Canada back in the dark ages.

Status Symbols Suffer

Consumer Trends Are Shifting

Brockville Recorder and Times

This great, industrial western world is about to change. Talk of a world shortages of petroleum, copper, aluminum, newsprint, foodstuffs and a hundred other items will definitely force a drastic alteration in the life styles and habits of all North Americans.

We are already witnessing a shift in buying habits, as thousands of car owners switch from eight-cylinder gas guzzlers to smaller, more efficient six-cylinder models. And though General Motors and other Detroit-based manufacturers are being forced to build subsurface; they will adjust.

With the death of the big car as a status symbol, we will also witness a shift in priorities in family ownership. In years from now, the lucky man will own both 50-100 acres within driving distance of Brockville, and he will boast of his market garden, his cheap, clean water, his rewarding solitude. He will have a cozy wood stove, his farm fresh eggs, his inexpensive steak by the pound (somewhere on his acreage he'll have enough room for a few head of beef cattle), his fresh air and healthy exercise, and his much much lower taxes. And above all this, he will be proud and contented in his new found self sufficiency. And from his city counterpart, he will be openly envied.

With the purchase of his acreage, he will establish a trade place, some from necessity, some from convenience. That second car, once traded upon as an indication of success, will be replaced by a tractor; that garage will be converted into a barn or shed; those expensive restaurant meals will be bypassed, to purchase seed, fertilizer to produce their own gourmet meals.

The normal real estate prices in Brockville can be used as a guideline, there is no better time than today to pick up that small farm. An acre of land, with a "nice" but modest home, in a "nice" section of the city can cost as much as $60,000. For that kind of money, you can still buy a rather handsome farm.

And the children who are fortunate enough to grow up in the farm atmosphere? They will benefit the most. They will be taught the hard, healthy work, for much of their early lives. They will learn much about nature, the care of animals, and their own economic responsibilities.

Who knows? We might even have a revival of those strong, healthy rosy-cheeked individuals who built this country in the first place.

What's in a Question Dollar-wise ?

Ottawa Journal

That ludicrous argument over how much it costs the federal government to answer MP's questions is still going on.

The outrageous claim by a Liberal MP that a single question costs $1.2 million to answer shouldn't be allowed to consign the issue to the laughpile.

If the government can come up with a breakdown of the cost of answering MP's questions, it could form the basis for serious study of how to reduce those costs. The chief culprit will not be, as the government might like to imply, the opposition MPs who reduce the number of questions they ask.

The elimination of genuinely unnecessary questions would help, but there is a rather vital gap between government and opposition on the issue of what's necessary and what isn't. The effectiveness of the parliamentary system is related to a large extent on the opposition's right to ask questions that illuminate the gap.

Even if the government can not too bad.

establish the cost of answering questions, logically could ever estimate the potential cost to the political system and the country of not answering questions.

Still, let's suppose that a "privy council source" was close to the truth with an estimate of $9 million a year to answer MPs' question. As we should be spending that on prayers, that is a pitiful fraction of the total cost of "information," as it is called in Ottawa, gathering each year by the government — for reasons known to itself and suspected by others — and of the unnecessary information oblicited by MPs' questions? We predict the cost of the former would tower over the latter to an unbelievable degree. It is astonishing, extant. At the least, it would bring things in perspective. At best, the government might be moved to shift some of its vast underground resources of information to the job of answering MP's questions. If might overcome those curious delays that never seem to affect information the government wants to get out.

LOOKING BACKWARD

CLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

30 years ago

May 13, 1944

Another "V" flag, indicative that employees have subscribed the required percentage of their earnings in the purchase of Victory Bonds appeared floating in the breeze today over the T. B. Beggs Garage on Front street.

This business is listed in the group payroll section of the county canvass and earlier in the campaign was reported to have gone over its objective.

Minority Government Said NDP Prediction

PICTON — Charles Bates Eastern Ontario vice-president of the Liberal Party of Ontario and president of the Quinte Liberal Council says the NDP is working toward public acceptance of a minority government.

At a weekend meeting of the provincial Prince Edward-Lennox Liberal Association, Mr. Bates commented that the NDP caucus took a poll and every member predicted another minority government headed by the Liberals.

"Until the last two weeks I was never that suspicious of the Tories" remarked Mr. Bates.

He referred to them as an apparently dedicated and sincere party working for its people.

"Their position now has disturbed me quite a bit," he added.

Mr. Bates said that a pattern is being started as in Europe where there are many parties, no majorities and governments that are always falling.

He pointed out that many immigrants came here because in Canada a stable government.

He observed that, in the coming election, the NDP will be attempting to win an acceptance of a minority government.

He stressed that minority governments are not in a position to introduce the unpopular legislation that is sometimes needed.

Mr. Bates stressed the need for Liberal unity in the coming campaign, and noted that Prince, Edward-Hastings has a strong candidate in MP George Hees.

He said that "in this area George Cunningham appears in the race" but there may be other candidates at the Liberal convention.

Mr. Bates emphasized that George Hees "can't trot off to other ridings" if he has strong enough opposition in his own.

He predicted "a real big chance" for the Liberals to gain a majority government if "the big guns" can be kept in their own ridings.

Mr. Bates predicted that seats will be picked up in the Maritimes and held in Quebec where there should also be a gain of a few Social Credit seats and Conservative seats.

"The fight really is in Ontario," he commented.

Annual Meeting Poorly Attended

PICTON — The annual meeting of the provincial Prince Edward-Lennox Liberal Association failed to rally party supporters here last weekend.

Approximately 15 persons turned out for a business meeting and election of officers, followed by a dance at the County Centre.

President of the association, Terry Larstone of Napanee, said that he was "disappointed" in the attendance and observed that only five persons from Lennox had come to Picton for the meeting.

Since the secretary and treasurer of the association were absent, no reports from them were available. Only two members of the executive, Mr. Larstone and association vice-president, John Zade of Napanee attended the annual session.

Damage Heavy In Accidents

MADOC — Two weekend accidents involving Crookston area people caused extensive property damage and personal injury.

Douglas George David, 18, of RR 3 Madoc has been charged with impaired driving after he hit a railway warning light about 12:35 a.m. Sunday at the CNR crossing south of Madoc. He was alone in his car. Damage to the light was $30 and to the David vehicle was $500.

Three people were taken to Belleville General Hospital following an accident at 4:15 p.m. Saturday. Reginald Haggerty, 77, was turning into his driveway off Highway 62 at Ivanhoe Station when he was hit by a car driven by Peter Latour, 21, of Ann St., Belleville. Mr. Haggerty, his wife and Mr Latour all suffered bad lacerations and Mr Haggerty had broken ribs. Damage to the Haggerty car was $1,500 and it was considered a write - off. Damage to the late model Latour station wagon was also $1,500.

Cash, Pop Break-in Loot

Belleville police are investigating a break-in that netted thieves approximately $53 in cash and a case of pop when they broke into a home at 124 Gilbert Street during the weekend.

Police report that thieves forced their way into the home of Mrs. Joseph Masterson sometime between 7:30 p.m. and 10:50 p.m. Saturday. Approximately $53 in cash was stolen by a thief who stopped to have a bottle of pop before leaving the house.

Chairman of the nominating committee, Mr. Zado, said that he had contacted approximately 30 persons in seeking members for the executive but none was willing to serve.

After nominations from the floor failed to produce a candidate for president, Mr. Larstone, who had declined a nomination, agreed to continue in office until a replacement could be named by the executive. A motion was passed authorizing this action.

Two vice-presidents were elected, Clarence Inglis of Carrying Place, representative of Prince Edward, and John Zado, an incumbent representing the Lennox area of the riding.

Holt took office by acclamation.

In an election for secretary, Mac Dalmage of Cherry Valley defeated Mrs. Mary Nellsen of Cherry Valley.

New treasurer is Max MacDonald of Sophiasburgh, who defeated Mrs. Clara Slaven.

President Terry Larstone suggested that the new executive appoint a public relations officer.

"We certainly lack in public relations," he said.

A motion was passed authorizing the executive to make the appointment.

Arbitration Next Step?

TRENTON — Arbitration to settle the negotiation stalemate between the town and its professional firefighters still remains as a possible solution.

The contract governing the 10 firemen expired Jan. 1 and negotiations reached an impasse when both sides refused to modify wage increase stands. The firefighters demanded 18 per cent. The town was willing to give about 12.5 per cent.

Since talks broke off more than two weeks ago, there has been no word on ensuing action. The town, during a news conference, said the ball was in the firefighters' court, and expected arbitration would be the next step.

At that time the firefighters' negotiating committee said it would approach the membership for direction.

Frank Coleman, speaking for the firemen in the absence of union president Dennis Smith, said no meeting has yet been held. "No final decision has been made."

He explained firefighters continue to work under the provisions of the expired contract. He said the negotiating committee was still meeting to discuss the situation.

Straightening Up

Ian Darling, vice-chairman of the Trenton Library Board makes a last minute adjustment to a Moshynski painting hanging as a library exhibit for one month. A score of the Carrying Place artist's pieces are displayed in the library. The exhibit is part of a continuing library program to expose various artists work to library patrons.

Police Informed Pickets

Belleville police say that a complaint made by striking Block Dairmond Cheese workers that a police officer threatened to arrest them late last week when they were picketing outside the Ontario Cheese Producers' warehouse on Bay Drive was the result of a misunderstanding on the part of the strikers.

The police went to the cheese producers' warehouse in answer to a complaint by the owners that pickets were trespassing.

Deputy Police Chief Harold Reid said that the officers who were on the scene simply informed the picketers of their rights and responsibilities with respect to attempts to set up pickets on private property.

The giving of such information is standard procedure in strike situations, the deputy said.

William Cumbley, of RR3, Belleville, the man who told The Intelligencer on Friday that the police threatened to arrest him was not a member of the union that had set up pickets.

Displays Highlight Of Police Week

TRENTON — The motto for police week this year is "We Need Our Cops."

The Trenton police station, like hundreds of others across the province, is open this week to explain why.

Over the past week, officers of the Trenton department have devoted their own time, constructing many exhibits designed to explain the functions of the department.

While Police Week officially began Sunday, the local thrust begins Monday evening with an open house starting at 7 p.m. Each evening during the week, off-duty police officers will be on hand at the station to conduct tours and explain displays.

A major contribution to the display list is the exhibit of weapons confiscated in area investigations. Police will also be explaining the procedure of investigation, operation of the breathalyzer test and safety seminars.

Also compiled is a display of the community activities to which the police department has contributed expertise and manpower.

Police officers have been and are currently active in baseball and hockey leagues, scouts, air cadets and sea cadets.

The Brighton detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police is also setting up displays for the week and will be conducting school children tours throughout the celebration. Equipment and a display of finger printing techniques highlight the provincial police show.

Quinte Cuisine

Jan Szczerba, proprietor of the Continental Hair Stylists beauty salon, has enjoyed working in the kitchen since he was a young child in Poland. A Bellevillian for 20 years, he likes Canadian food, but thinks that Canadians could manage to eat more inexpensively than they do. He suggests the following recipe for Pierogi as a good method of serving a tasty meal within your budget.

Pierogi

2 eggs
½ cup water
2 cups flour
½ tsp. salt

Mound flour on the centre of the kneading board. Drop eggs into a hole made in the centre of the flour, and cut into flour with a knife. Add salt and water and knead until firm. Let rest for 10 minutes covered with a warm bowl.

Divide dough in halves and roll thin. Cut circles with a large biscuit cutter.

Place a small spoonful of filling a little to the side of each round of dough. Moisten the edge with water, fold over and press edges together firmly. Be sure they are well-sealed to prevent the filling from running out.

Drop pierogi into salted boiling water and cook gently for three to five minutes. Lift out of water with a perforated spoon.

Never crowd or pile pierogi. The uncooked ones will stick together and the cooked ones will lose shape and lightness.

Here are a few suggested fillings.

Cheese

Cream one cup of cottage cheese with one tsp. of melted butter. Add one beaten egg, three tbsp. white sugar, three tbsp. currants and ¼ tsp. cinnamon. Mix well and fill pierogi. Serve with melted butter and sour cream.

Cabbage and mushroom

Cook a quartered small cabbage for 15 minutes in salted water. Drain, cool, and chop finely. Saute one small chopped onion in butter, add two cups of chopped mushrooms and fry for five minutes. Add chopped cabbage, salt and pepper and fry till the flavors blend. Add sour cream, and cool before filling the pierogi.

Sauerkraut

Substitute two cups of rinsed, drained sauerkraut for the cabbage in the above recipe. You can leave out the mushroom and still have a marvellous filling.

Mushroom and meat

Grind finely ¼ cup cooked beef, and mix with ½ cup chopped mushrooms. Add one onion, chopped finely, and saute the mixture in butter. Add salt and pepper and two tbsp. sour cream. Cool, and fill the pierogi.

Seasoned mashed potatoes, prunes, apples, berries, almost anything makes a super pierogi filling.

Do you know any good cooks? The Intelligencer is looking for cooks in the area willing to share their recipes with our readers. If you're a good cook, or if you know one, write The Women's Department, The Intelligencer. Be sure to include his or her address and phone number.

Successful Living

Widow Upgrades Self

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: When my husband died, I applied for work at a small appliance manufacturing firm but I couldn't qualify.

Why? Because I hadn't graduated from grade 12. It didn't occur to me that one might require a grade 12 certificate to work on an assembly line. The counseling with whom I talked told me to put grade 12 on the application, as it appeared obvious that by now I had obtained a grade 12 level of education, through employment and living in general.

I did not put that on the application. Why? Because it was not true! But I did resolve to be upgraded, and to make a long story short, I can now type and do an office job, being considered as grade 12 level. I got the highest marks in my class. Right now there don't seem to be even assembly line jobs — but I challenge some employer to try me out. Sign me—

She Made It.

Dear She Made It: Sounds like an epitaph — but it really is the proper wording for your diploma! I'd say you were an excellent risk for any employer.

I'm wagering that if you keep in touch with all sources of employment it won't be long before you'll be settled into a groove you can enjoy. What you are doing will be an inspiration to other widows in Canada.

* * *

Dear Doris: At 18 our daughter started dating; she knew we approved of the boy. They gradually became serious.

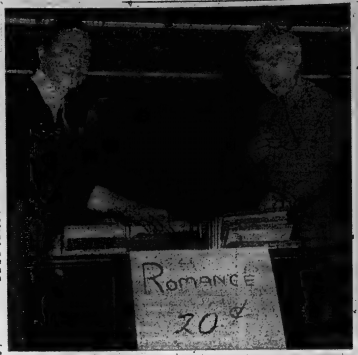
Then after three years she dropped him. He was terribly hurt. After four months of dating other boys she went back to him, promising us that she really knew her feelings now.

But once again she left him, and the poor boy is just going in circles, it has hit him so hard.

We are trying to help her not to make a terrible mistake. She still hates to hurt him, and is mixed up with her feelings; but she must think there are greener pastures. Yet we know she is making a mistake.

Worried Parents.

Dear Parents: How many hundred times have I heard that same story? Leave her alone.



Can't you see that she needs to circulate a little? Otherwise, she would not waver so much. It would be tragic if they were to marry and then discover later that their choice was wrong. When husband and wife become bored and dissatisfied with each other, what you have on your hands is a break-up.

There is still the possibility that another young man of sterling quality is waiting around the next corner to meet his kindred soul. — Her!

* * *

Confidentially Disappointed: Don't let yourself be put off new friendships just because you found one rotten apple in the barrel! We all have disappointments like yours.

Widen your circle of acquaintances by involving yourself in a new interest, or hobbies, or an evening course. I'm betting you'll make at least one new, true friend. When you give, you get.

Ann Landers

Hitch-hiker Pays Consequences

Dear Ann Landers: I beg of you don't stop warning girls about the dangers of hitchhiking. I know you've printed several letters in your column on this subject, but mine might make a stronger impression than most because I can tell them first-hand what it's like to be raped.

It was midnight. Not much traffic. The car was new. The man looked middle-aged and respectable. Two minutes after I got into his car I knew I was in for it. I was hoping he'd slow down just enough for me to open the door and jump out, but he never did. Before I knew it, we were parked on a side road and his hands were around my throat. "I can kill you in 10 seconds," he said calmly, "or you can be a good girl and co-operate."

I tried to scream but my throat was dry. I had no voice. His hands were powerful. He was like a jungle animal, the way he moved. He dragged me out of the car and threw me to the ground. I was no match for him. Besides, he looked crazy. I was afraid if I fought him, he'd choke me to death. So I co-operated.

When he finished with me he carried me back to the car, drove onto the highway and shoved me out on the grading. I was in a state of shock but I remember thanking God for sparing my life.

A middle-aged couple picked me up within a few minutes. They drove me straight to the emergency room of a hospital. The doctor said I was a very lucky girl. All I had was three broken ribs and a sprained neck. I could have ended up like dozens of other girls I've read about in the newspapers—raped and murdered.

The bus fare to the place I was going would have cost me $4.50. How's that for an O. Henry ending?—Exhibit A.

Dear A.: Thank you for telling your story. The best part of it is that you lived to write the letter.

Dear Ann Landers: Is it possible for a person to give him- self the hiccups just to attract attention? I always thought the hiccups was something you had no control over (like a sneeze), but there's this certain dude who manages to get the hiccups whenever he's at a party or in a movie, or during study period when it's very quiet.

Of course, everybody laughs when he hics and he's the centre of attention. I used to think it was an act and the hiccups were faked, but now I'm sure they are real. My question is, can a person give himself real hiccups at will?—Mrs. Sherlock Holmes

Dear Mrs. Holmes: Not everyone can; but some people are able to do it. I suspect this dude practiced until he had it down to a science. Too bad he feels he has so little going for him that he has to resort to this gimmick.

At Home

Mr. and Mrs. L. Shore, 129 Dufferin Avenue, will be At Home to friends on the occasion of their 50th wedding anniversary, Friday, May 17 from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. and 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. Good wishes only.

Women's Liberal Commission Says Women 'Won't Sit Back'

HALIFAX (CP) —Jean Rowley, president of the Women's Liberal Commission, says that within 1 years as many as one-third of Canada's members of Parliament will be women.

She said in an interview Friday that women are no longer willing to sit back and watch decisions being made in government.

"We don't want to take over from the men, but we are looking for equality in policy making," she said. " Women are as much first-class citizens as anyone. We have the intelligence to take on this responsibility and this is where we want to be."

Mrs. Rowey said the commission was formed mainly to stress the need for women to become actively involved in politics.

Michigan Tornadoes Kill One

HELL, Mich. (AP) — A series of tornadoes struck through southern Michigan Saturday. Officials said one person was killed and at least one other injured.

A woman was killed in Pinckney, about seven miles from here in southeastern Michigan, when a tornado demolished a house she was in, officials said. Witnesses in Hell said said one person was injured, one house was destroyed, three severely damaged and 15 moderately damaged by a twister.

Elsewhere, state police said damage was minimal.

Two Sasquatch Seen on Road

RED DEER, Alta. (CP) — Some will cry fake, others will be skeptical, but 42-year-old Ron Gummell of Calgary says that now he's a believer.

Mr. Gummell said he was driving east from Jasper Saturday morning on the David Thompson Highway near Abraham Lake. He turned a bend in the road and there, standing in the middle of the road, were two Sasquatch.

He said: "They were so big they could have picked my car up and thrown it into the lake."

He estimated they were 12 feet tall, very big and covered with hair. They had flat faces.

As soon as they saw the car they sauntered into the bush. "I was really shook up."

Man Held

CHATHAM (CP) — William Ritchie, 30, of Merlin was charged with non-capital murder Friday in the slaying of 28-year-old Pierrette Lavictoire a restaurant owner in Merlin.

Ritchie will appear in provincial court here today.

Police said the body of Mrs. Lavictoire was found Thursday in her apartment above the restaurant by a bread delivery man.

An autopsy Friday showed she was killed by gunshots in the chest.

Merlin is 15 miles southwest of Chatham.

Climb Peak

KATAMANDU (AP) — Three Japanese women have scaled 26,504-foot-high Mount Manaslu in the Himalayas, the highest peak ever climbed by women, but the expedition that took them to the top cost the life of one of their team-mates, a message received here said Saturday.

Guillaume Dismayed At Brandt Resignation

BONN (Reuter) — Guenter Guillaume, the East German spy whose exposure led to Willy Brandt's resignation as chancellor of West Germany, shouted in dismay when told his boss had quit office, it was reported Sunday.

"My God, my God, this is never what I intended," he shouted when interrogators showed him newspaper stories reporting Brandt's resignation last Monday, the pro-government magazine Stern said.

Stern said Guillaume told his interrogators: "That cannot be true—now that the relations between our two states are gathering momentum."

Guillaume, 47, a close aide of the chancellor until his arrest more than two weeks ago, has a Cologne prison cell with a special bullet-proof glass door.

Dispute Over

REGINA (CP) — Tentative agreement has been reached in a contract dispute, which saw registered nurses at more than 70 Saskatchewan hospitals sign a 34-hour walkout last Monday, a union spokesman said Saturday.

Nominate 3

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Waffle movement announced Sunday three of the four candidates it will nominate for the July 8 federal election.

James Laxer, 32, a political science professor at York University and one of the leaders of the group before it was expelled from the New Democratic Party in 1972, will run in York West.

Bela Egyed, 32, a professor of philosophy at Carleton University, Ottawa, will run in Ottawa Centre, and Mary Campbell, 53, a library worker at the University of Western Ontario, London will contest the Middlesex riding.

Recover Plane

BOGOTA (CP-Reuter) — Colombian police recaptured from three working-class hijackers Saturday night a Boeing 727 airliner that had been taken over 16 hours earlier.

One hijacker, identified by police as Carlos Arturo Tabares, 25, an agricultural laborer, was shot to death in the struggle, while 86 captive passengers fled from the plane by emergency exits. Fourteen of the passengers suffered injuries, mostly minor.

Self-firing Gun Got All Confused

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States Navy's new, self-firing anti-missile gun got so confused in its first test that "it threatened to sink Santa Barbara Island" and a friendly ship, says the General Accounting Office (GAO).

The radar-controlled gun thought the island was a fast-moving target, says the GAO report released Sunday by Representative Les Aspin (Dem. Wis.)

The yards-per-second speed was censored out of the public copy but Aspin said a classified version showed the gun thought Santa Barbara Island "was a very fast island."

During another test the gun "trapped, locked on to and declared as a threat" the U.S. Navy ship Hollister, the watchdog GAO said.

It said the incidents occurred during initial testing off the California coast between January and March this year of the new Phalanx anti-missile gun.

The Phalanx is essentially a "last-ditch defence" to shoot down enemy missiles headed for its ship, the GAO said. It said the Phalanx also can fire on planes and other ships.

The GAO said the tendency to lock on to ships in its arms warrants considerable attention "when it is considered that a Phalanx-equipped ship may be part of a multi-ship task force."

Passports Not Valid

OTTAWA (CP) — The passports of United States members of the Royal Winnipeg Ballet are not valid for travel to Cuba," a U.S. embassy spokesman said Saturday.

However, it appears the 41-member troupe—half of which are U.S. citizens—will have no problem carrying out a planned performance in Havana June 10.

There are other ways to travel than with a passport, said Ben Fordney, the embassy's information officer. Asked if U.S. dancers who went to Cuba without the state department's permission faced some sort of prosecution under U.S. law, Mr. Fordney said: "That's a technical question I'm not prepared to answer."

POPULATION CENTRE

Huronia, lying between Georgian Bay and Lake Simcoe, was the most densely populated part of what later became Canada in the early 1600s.

A Series of 18 Questions and Answers Designed To Explain The Intelligencer Want Ads So They May Serve You To Better Advantage

1. How Can I Place My Want Ad?

There are at least three different ways, one of which will surely be convenient for you.

(1) Almost all types of classified ads are accepted by telephone. Call 962-3171 (extns. 22, 23, 31, 32).

(2) Mail in your ad. Indicate the number of times you wish it to run and we'll bill you. The Intelligencer, 45 Bridge St. East, Belleville.

(3) If you are in the downtown area it may be convenient for you to drop in at our office. We're certain that one of these methods will answer your needs.

2. When Can I Place A Want Ad?

Office hours are 8:30 a.m. 'til 5:00 p.m. Monday through Friday. On Saturday we're open 9:00 'til noon. Play safe by having your ad in early.

3. When Is the Best Time To Call In An Ad?

Although the time when an ad is placed is not too important, some periods are busier than others. For the quickest service it's advisable to call early in the morning to place an ad for the following day.

4. How Do I Know If My Ad Is Worded Correctly?

A good ad tells the complete story. Tells what YOU would like to know if you were the reader. Intelligent, descriptive ads with prices get best attention and produce quickest results. If you are in doubt as to how to word your ad consult an Intelligencer Ad-Visor. Point out the best features of the item you're advertising. Always feature price! Remember — the more you TELL — the quicker you SELL! Price is important because Want Ad Shoppers know what they want and how much they plan to spend. A price creates only live responses and eliminates idle inquiries that waste time and usually end or start with the question "HOW MUCH?"

5. How Are Want Ad Rates Determined?

Want Ad rates are based on the circulation of the paper. The Intelligencer reaches approximately 18,000 homes daily or approximately 61,000 readers.

An Intelligencer Classified ad costs as little as $1.10 per day if run 6 times and reaches almost 18,000 homes each day. To send a postcard to each of these homes just once would cost $1080.00.

6. How Fully Should I Describe My Proposition?

Always describe your proposition as fully as possible. Try to put yourself in the reader's position and answer the questions that might be asked such as "Is the car you're selling has brand new tires, mention it in your ad. If the job you're offering pays $35 per week — mention it. If your cow is a top producer — mention it. If the home you are selling has a large yard — mention it. These are things that your prospective customers will want to know. The Intelligencer Want Ad is only as effective as the sales presentation your ad contains. The better you TELL it the quicker you SELL it.

7. Which Is the Best Day To Advertise?

One day is as good as another. Various agencies and researchers have made painstaking studies and have come up with very similar conclusions. No one has been able to prove conclusively that any one day is better than another.

8. Why Didn't I Get Results From My Ad?

Although, by and large, the results from The Intelligencer Want Ads are remarkable, occasionally you will find that your ad brings no response. There could be several reasons. It may be wise to reword your ad to make it more attractive. Then again, it may just be that no one was in the market for your particular offer at the time your ad ran. In this case it would be wise to hold your ad for a week or two, then try again. In any event Intelligencer Classified Ads are read by thousands of people every day. Make your offer attractive, give it a fair chance by scheduling it for six days, and if there is a market for what you offer — The Intelligencer will find it.

9. Do You Accept Any Ad?

No, we quite often turn down ads. We try to get complete information on any ad that sounds misleading or offers fantastic returns on investments. We feel we have an obligation to protect our readers from false or misleading advertising. We still reject certain ads on each week.

Should you experience any misrepresentation or fraud in connection with any advertisement notify the Intelligencer Advertising Manager immediately.

10. What Happens If You Make A Mistake In My Ad?

We correct it. But — errors must be reported immediately as we are responsible for only one (1) incorrect insertion. Typists and printers are human, therefore, mistakes happen now and then. It is customary for newspapers to make good on one incorrect insertion.

11. When Should I Use A Box Number?

Box numbers should be used only when absolutely necessary. Few people will take the time to write a reply to your ad, never knowing whether it will be acknowledged or not. A box number definitely cuts down on response you are likely to receive. For some reason or another people do not wish to reveal their identity and therefore use a box number.

12. Why Can't You Tell Me Who Placed a Box Number Ad?

We constantly receive requests to reveal who has placed a blind ad. We will not divulge this information to anyone! Advertisers who use Intelligencer box numbers are paying for a confidential service. It would be a serious violation of business ethics to divulge their identity.

13. Why Can't I Decide Which Classification I Want To Place My Ad Under?

Before Want Ads became as important as they are today it was possible to lump them all together without headings. As the power of Want Ads increased and they became an important advertising medium it became imperative to separate them in some logical manner. Classification headings were developed to make it easier for the reader to find specific ads. Our readers are accustomed to these headings and deliberate mis-classification would cause annoyance which wouldn't help the advertiser, The Intelligencer or the reader.

14. You Call Them "Want Ads" and "Classified Ads" Which Is Correct?

Both terms are correct. The term "Want Ads" is an older, perhaps more accurate description of our product. Want-Advertising is a market in which everyone can express and satisfy their needs and wants. "Classified" is a newer term growing out of the increase in Want Ads which resulted in more and more ads and as it really doesn't matter what you call them — they still work.

15. How Many People Read My Ad?

The Intelligencer's circulation shows an average daily circulation of 18,000. This means that 61,000 people see the paper daily. In recent studies made it was found that slightly more than one-half of the newspaper readers regularly refer to the Classified section daily. Of course, this is not always the same half. You have a reach of 31,500 readers in each issue or a possible total of 63,000 with two or more insertions.

16. Why Should I Run My Ad Again If It Did Not Produce Results the First Time?..

The market you reach through Classified is constantly changing. Just because your ad didn't produce results this week, does not mean that it cannot do so. People who didn't need a baby buggy yesterday may discover they need one soon. People who have jobs yesterday may not have them today. In The Intelligencer audience thousands of families' needs and wants are ever changing. An offer that produced no results this week may be overwhelmingly successful next week.

17. I Answered An Ad In Your Paper and Found That the Number Published Was Wrong. What Should I Do?

Mistakes are occasionally made. Please let us know immediately if you answer an ad and the phone number printed is incorrect. We can trace back and find the right number for you. By calling us about such a mistake you can help everyone concerned.

18. If I Have A Problem Regarding A Classified Ad What Should I Do?

If you feel that you have a problem which hasn't been resolved to your satisfaction be sure to call this to the attention of the Advertising Manager. Misunderstandings can develop and we do everything possible to correct them. If you have any questions about the manner in which your ad was handled, be sure to have them answered to your satisfaction.

We hope you will find the Intelligencer Classified Department courteous and willing to help you in every way possible.

Belleville goaltender, Jeff Merrill, puts the grab on a shot from Trenton's Bill Fox. Merrill and the Lions captured the B Championship of the local midget tournament in November. Jeff was a standout for the Lions and was awarded the tourney's Most Valuable Goaltender.

Busy Goalie Rakes in Awards

Jeff, a student at Quinte Secondary School, recently completed a strenuous season in goal for the Belleville Lions midgets.

Merrill played in all 58 of the Lions' games this season.

The reason?

It turned out, shortly after the season began, that Jeff was the only netminder the locals' had.

"I didn't mind it," commented Merrill, "the experience I gained through constant playing made it worthwhile."

The experience paid off in bit dividends for Jeff.

At both the Trenton and Belleville midget tournaments he was voted the Most Valuable Goaltender.

In Prescott he recorded four consecutive shutouts and was nominated the tourney's Most Valuable Player.

The number of games he appeared in the Lions net didn't hurt Merrill. As a matter of fact, he feels it helped him to improve his style and make him more of a stand-up goalie.

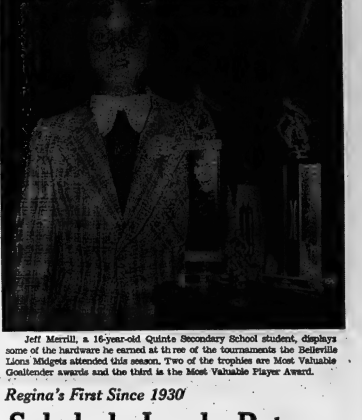
"The only real pressure I felt," said Jeff, "was knowing I had to have a good game every game."

"A couple of times in the season I wanted to pull myself out because I wasn't very sharp," he added, "but I knew I had to stay in because there was nobody on the bench to come in and take my place."

"If you win you're the hero," said Jeff, "but if you don't, it's because you weren't sharp, well, it isn't the nicest feeling you can have. And that's what I call pressure."

Jeff started playing hockey at the age of six in Peterborough. He didn't play all-star until age 11, a year after his family moved to Belleville.

"It's ironic," says Jeff's father, "right now Joe Peterborough-Petes are showing interest in Jeff, but if we hadn't moved from Peterborough he probably wouldn't have developed into the goalie he is now."



One of Merrill's former coaches, Hobb Burrowes, said, "with work and the right attitude Jeff can probably be a fine netminder.

Merrill played in 46 games last season and 58 this season as he is getting lots of work.

As for the attitude, Jeff answered that question when he said, "all I want to do with my life is become a professional goalie. That's a dream I want to see come true."

Leagues Prepare for Openers

The Industrial Softball League becomes the first senior diamond league to open its 1974 season tonight, with three games scheduled to start at 6:30 p.m.

Black Diamond takes on Brooke Bond at Prince Charles School; the Bell Telephone dependants meet Mead's at Sir MacKenzie Bowell; and the Post office faces Stewart Warner in their opening game.

One of the teams involved in tonight's opener, Black Diamond was feared to have been dropped out of the 13 team league, because of a strike at the plant. However team officials have decided to "play ball" with the rest of the league.

Most other leagues will swing into their schedules in the next two weeks.

The South Hastings Baseball League will open play for its 45th consecutive season Saturday night, with three game scheduled.

Shannonville meets Latta, Read travels to Melrose, and Plano's Concrete at Carnegie takes on the Reserve in the opening day lineup of games. All games in that league commence at 6:45, with the exception of Sunday contests, which will start at 2 p.m.

The Quinte Fastball League, formerly the Commercial Softball League, rated as one of the top leagues in Ontario, opens play for their inaugural season under the new title next Monday night, at the Alemite.

The Ellis Printing Juniors take on Howard and Robert Printing in the first game at 7 p.m., with the 1973 league Champions Rollins Construction meeting Trenton Auzer Men's Wear in the nightcap.

In Trenton, the action also begins next Monday night with the eight team Trenton Softball League opening with a twin bill at Bayshore Park.

In the first game at 7 p.m. the Dirty Dozen meet Birt's Handy Stand, with Rushnell's facing the Skyline Restaurant in the second game at 8:30.

Across the Bay, the Prince Edward North Shore League swings into action Tuesday May 21 night with a pair of games at Arrelsaburg. The first game of the twin bill borins at 7:15.

The new East Central Ontario Junior League will open on Wednesday, May 29 with two games. Scheduling in the league is not completed as yet.

Sly's Barrie Flyers Allan Cup Champions

CRANBROOK, B.C. (CP) — Barrie Flyers, the team that player-coach Darryl Sly says came here to win the Allan Cup, did just that Saturday night.

Barrie, led by Bob Baird's two goals, downed Cranbrook Royals 4-1 to win the Canadian senior amateur hockey best-of-seven final -2.

"They came to win, and they won," Sly said after the game.

He said he thought the final game was decided by holding a determined Cranbrook club to scoreless in the second period after the Ontario team had taken a 3-0 first-period lead.

"Cranbrook was a good hockey club, but Barrie was a little better."

Cranbrook playing-coach Eric Sutcliffe said Cranbrook improved after finishing second behind Spokane Jets in the Western International Hockey League, but Barrie was the best senior team it had faced.

"Barrie was well-coached and well-conditioned. We couldn't cope with their defensive style of play," said Sutcliffe.

Baird opened the scoring at 2:32 of the first period and got the winner less than three minutes later. Ken Rumkie ended the first-period scoring at 13:44 to give Barrie the 3-0 first-period lead.

In the third period, Dave Richalaben scored for Barrie with just 18 seconds gone. Geoff Powis got Cranbrook on the scoreboard at 10:22.

Ernie Miller kicked away 22 Cranbrook shots, while Leo Karchie blocked 27 Barrie shots

Smiths Falls Bears Earn Another Chance

OTTAWA (CP) — Smiths Falls earned another chance at the Centennial Cup hockey final Saturday and they did it with desire, said Bears coach. Glen McKenney.

The Bears defeated Selkirk Steelers 6-4 and now trail the best-of-seven junior series 3-2 with the next game tonight.

"If you play 90 games in a season you don't feel like losing the big one," said McKenney after the game.

"We won the game on skating, shooting, back-checking and 75 per cent desire."

Steelers coach George Dorman said his team still has the edge and "there's no panic on our part."

Beaver Corkran opened scoring for the Bears at 2:30 of the first period and Rick Dorman and Randy Reimer replied for the Manitoba club before the period ended.

Smiths Falls picked up two goals in the second, by defenceman Gary Nichol and Corkran, to give them a 3-2 lead.

"We took too many penalties," said Dorman after the game. "The Bears' first three goals were power-play goals and that doesn't help things."

The Bears took a 5-3 lead by 7:11 of the final period on goals by Barry Kerfoot and Earl Moulton.

The Steelers narrowed the margin to 5-4 on goals by Kelly Kehoe and a short-handed drive by defenceman Mike Sidosky.

Fraser Greenwood in the Smiths Falls net stopped 30 shots while Andy Sloan and Chester Reimer turned aside 41 for the Steelers. Dorman pulled Sloan late in the game in favor of Reimer.

Selkirk took nine of the 16 minor penalties, Dorman and Don Robertson of Smiths Falls received five-minute majors for fighting in the third period.

Randy Reimer took a 10-minute misconduct earlier in the third period for arguing a minor elbowing penalty he received.

Dorman said his team will have to shoot and check more to wrap up the series tonight.

McKenney said pride will help his team over the bump.

"There will be no change in strategy now, just pride, desire and a lot of hard work."

Sobchuk Leads Pats To the Memorial Cup

Regina's First Since 1930

CALGARY CP) — Regina Pats' big guns gave the Western Canada Hockey League club to a 7-4 victory over Quebec Remparts Sunday night and the 1974 Memorial Cup.

Sparked by centre Dennis Sobchuk, winger Glen Gilliss and defenceman Greg Joly, the Pats overcame a 3-0 deficit with four second-period goals, then scored twice in the final two minutes to win the junior hockey championship.

The cup goes west for the first time since Edmonton Oil Kings defeated Niagara Falls Flyers in 1966.

Sobchuk had three goals and an assist, Gilles a goal and an assist, and Joly three assists.

Sobchuk, Gilles and Joly and Glen Burdon also scored a goal each for the Pats, who bowed 5-1 to Quebec in their opening meeting in the three-team round-robin championship.

Charles Constantin, Andre Perreault and Jacques Locas scored Quebec's first period goals and Locas connected during a third-period power play to reduce Regina's lead to 5-4 with five minutes remaining.

Coach Jack Turner said he believed his club deserved to win but "don't sell them Remparts short. They're as good a club as we met all year."

Turner was pleased that referee Krry Fraser of Sarnia, Ont., was one of the best of the season working in the WCHL. "let us play hockey—that's the way it has to be in a national final."

Quebec coach Marc Picard said after the game "silly penalties in the second period made it hard for us to keep up tempo. Next year, we will be the winner."

Regina took 11 of 20 minor penalties. Gilles and Rich Nantais of Quebec signed a rousing second-period fight for the only major penalties.

Perreault of the Remparts was in the penalty box when the fighters were banished for seven minutes each. During the power advantage, Ulrich took a perfect pass from Sobchuk to put Regina ahead for good.

Sobchuk, who has signed a long-term contract with Cincinnati of the World Hockey Association for more than 1 million, ignited the Regina comeback in the second period after Quebec had taken a 3-1 lead.

He fired a spectacular shot past Quebec goaltender Robert Sauve during a power play and, moments later, set up Ulrich with a low backhander from directly in front.

Sobchuk added his second goal, Regina's fifth, less than two minutes later, setting up Ulrich. In the final half-minute, with Quebec defenceman Sobchuk found an empty net to end the scoring.

Coach Turner said the biggest goal was Burdon's which came with two minutes to-play. He swept around the defense and beat Sauve from the crease to give a lavatiire comeback started by Locas' second goal.

That preserved Regina's first Memorial Cup win since 1930. The Remparts won it last in 1971. Last year's winners were Toronto Marlboros.

Quebec reached the sudden-death final by blasting St. Catharines Black Hawks, Ontario Hockey Association champions, 11-3 Friday.

Sauve faced 32 shots—22 in the second period—while Ed Staniowski of Regina, steady during the Remparts' first-period blitz, faced a total of 31.

Villemure Is Tops

NEW YORK (AP) — Goalie Gilles Villemure of New York Rangers stopped two of three shots by Jim Pappin of Chicago Black Hawks to win the National Hockey League's showdown in the final competition Sunday on CBC and NBC television.

The victory was worth $8,000 to the Rangers' No. 2 goalie and $4,000 to Pappin. Villemure earned $19,700 and Pappin $10,200 in the head-to-head competition series which was taped before the start of the 1973-74 season. Four goalies and 15 shooters took part in the event.

20 Years a Golfer, Records Hole-in-one

The first hole-in-one of the young golfing season in the Quinte area was recorded on Saturday by a Belleville man at the Oak Hills Golf Club, near Stirling.

Don Fish, 41 Elvins St., used an eight-iron to fire the ace on the sixth hole, a par three, 120 yarder on the Oak Hills links.

The hole-in-one was the first for the veteran of 20 years on the golfing ball. He's a left-hand shooter.

He finished the nine hole round with a 42, including a nine on the third hole of the course.

His golfing partners for the day were John and Jack Doran, also of Belleville.

Joly and Sauve Receive Awards

CALGARY (CP) — Defenceman Greg Joly of Regina Pats and goaltender Robert Sauve of Quebec Remparts were two honors each Sunday night as awards were presented following Regina's 7-4 victory over the Remparts in the 1974 Memorial Cup junior hockey final.

Joly was named most valuable player and Sauve, borrowed from Laval Nationals for the playoff, was selected top netminder. Both also were named to the all-star team.

The other individual award, the George Parsons trophy for the player best combining sportsmanship and ability, went to Guy Chouinard of the Remparts. It was the first time the Parsons trophy had been presented.

Also named to the all-star team were defenceman Richard Perron and lefwinger Real Cloutier of Quebec. Centre Glen Burdon and rightwinger Rick Ulrich of the Pats filled out the team.

No players were selected from St. Catharines Black Hawks of the Ontario Hockey Association.

Flyers Lead Cup Final 2-1

Crisp's Goal Deflates Bruins

PHILADELPHIA (CP) — Terry Crisp admits he has work harder than most of his team-mates just to stay in the National Hockey League.

The 31-year-old native of Parry Sound, Ont., scored the winner Sunday afternoon as Philadelphia Flyers downed Boston Bruins 4-1 to take a 2-1 lead in the best-of-seven Stanley Cup final.

Fourth game in the National Hockey League final series will be played here Tuesday at 8 p.m. EDT and will be televised nationally in Canada by the CBC.

"I have to go out and bust my butt everytime I go on the ice just to stay in the NHL," said Crisp.

The Philadelphia centre had finished killing a penalty when he scored the winner unassisted.

Philadelphia defenceman Ed Van Impe emerged from the penalty box 24 seconds earlier but Crisp had not had a chance to head back to the bench.

Boston defenceman Carol Vadnais lost the puck to him deep in the Bruin zone and Crisp scored with a shot that went in off netminder Gilles Gilbert's pad.

The Bruins appeared to lose their momentum after that goal and, while the Flyers didn't score again until the third period, they mounted almost relentless attack they mounted after Crisp's goal for the rest of the game.

They forechecked the Bruins, back checked diligently and dominated the faceoff circle.

And the control exhibited by the Flyers paid off when centre Orest Kindrachuk and left winger Ross Lonsberry added to their lead in the final 20 minutes.

"I'm glad for Crisp because he isn't playing regularly," said Philadelphia coach Fred Shero. "But he can play anywhere and he helps wherever he can."

The Bruins had started strongly, taking a 1-0 lead when Johnny Bucyk scored after only 52 seconds.

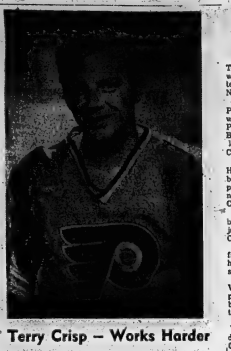
Bobby Orr passed the puck to Greg Sheppard who hit the post with his shot. Bucyk banged in the rebound.

Philadelphia pulled even nine minutes later when defenceman Tom Bladon's shot from the right point on a power play entered the Boston net in the lower right hand corner.

After Bucyk's goal, the Flyers handcuffed Orr and NHL scoring champion Phil Esposito, who had only two shots on goal in the game.

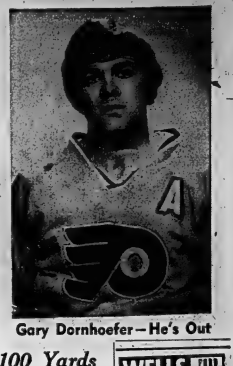
Captain Bobby Clarke won eight of the 12 faceoffs he took for the Flyers against Esposito and was 19 for 32 in the game. Esposito won only eight of 24 faceoffs.

Shero said the Flyers changed their strategy to defend against Orr's great rushing ability.



"We used to play him as other teams do—get on him in his end and make him pass to his partner—but then he goes free back into the play," said Shero.

"Today we wanted him to have the puck and we got on him quick—leaned on him, stayed in front of him, tired him out."



Boston coach Bep Guidolin was furious with the play of his team and said that only a half dozen of his players had performed well. He refused to name them.

The Flyers lost veteran right winger Gary Dornhoefer, who suffered a separation of his left shoulder late in the game. He will undergo surgery today or Tuesday.

Dornhoefer, who missed 21 games during the regular season because of injuries, was hurt when he was bumped heavily by Boston's Don Marcotte.

Bep Hasn't Seen His Power-play

PHILADELPHIA (CP) — Coach Fred Shero of Philadelphia Flyers has some friendly advice Sunday night for Bep Guidolin of Boston Bruins, his coaching rival in the Stanley Cup finals.

"Boston keeps their power play the same all the time and maybe we're starting to read it," said Shero Sunday after the Flyers thumped Bruins 4-1 to take a 2-1 lead in the best-of-seven National Hockey League final.

"I know even when our power play is going good I might change it a little to add variety," said Shero.

Sunday, the Bruins failed to score on any of the seven occasions they had a man advantage and managed only five shots on goal.

In the first two games of the series, they had a one-man edge nine times and a two-man edge once but managed only one power-play goal—the first of the series.

Guidolin, who stuck with his big guns during the first two games of the series, began to juggle his lineup late in Sunday's game.

He replaced NHL scoring champion Phil Esposito with Greg Sheppard for a key power-play faceoff in the latter's zone, breaking up the Bruins' top line of Esposito, Ken Hodge and Wayne Cashman.

The Boston coach was sharply critical of Esposito after last Thursday's second game, saying the centre wasn't coming through when they needed him.

Sheppard, who has been one of Boston's better faceoff performers, won the faceoff.

But the Boston power-play again failed to click and Guidolin asked about its ineffectiveness, commented:

"What power play? I haven't seen it."

"All their goals were perfect," said Boston goalie Gilles Gilbert. "I was screened on the first but not the second. The fourth goal was by me before I could react."

"We've got to skate more to make it a team effort," said Gilbert. "There are only three or four guys prepared mentally and that's not enough."

Shero said he watched films taken during the season of Boston-New York Ranger games because "we knew we were going to meet one or both in the playoffs."

His homework paid off in a seven-game conquest of the Rangers in the semi-final and has given the Flyers the series lead against the Bruins.

What did he notice about the Bruins in the films?

"I could see they were willing to be more physical in the first period, and I knew if we could hang on for that first 20 minutes then we should be able to skate them."

That's what the Flyers have done. They fell behind by two goals in each of the first two games of the series, then almost pulled the first one out and did win the second. Boston scored the first goal Sunday.

Gerard Gallant reached said the heat in the Spectrum may have been in the Flyers' advantage.

"It must have been 90 degrees out there today," said Kindrachuk. "It felt like I was carrying the pucks instead of one."

He said the "heavy ice had a lot more," and was probably one reason why his team's younger legs carried them through the game.

Rough Going In WHA Opener

CHICAGO (CP) — Houston stitches to close a gash on the top of his head.

The Aeros grabbed a 2-0 first-period lead on goals by Larry Hale and Gord Laboissiere.

But then we laid down and didn't play at all well in the last two periods," Mark Howe said of the Houston efforts that allowed the Cougars to tie the game 2-2 in the third period.

Goaltender Don McLeod, one of the main forces behind the Aeros' surge in the top of the West Division this season, continued his outstanding play. It wasn't until Bob Liddington's deflection at 5:42 of the third that the Cougars got on the scoresheet.

Marion Gordon tied the score on a disputed goal at 13:45 but Frank Hughes slapped in the winner about three minutes later when he was left unguarded in front of Chicago goalie Andre Gill.

"When we got that 2-0 lead we were a little more at ease," Dineen said. "We played much defensively after that."

The Aeros's defensive play, the area in which the Cougars have excelled, was sufficient despite the two Chicago goals. They cleared well and eventually forced the Cougars into the game-winning mistake.

The second game is at Randhurst Wednesday night.

Crockett — 100 Yards In Nine Seconds Flat

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Ivory Crockett of Peoria, Ill., a slender 24-year-old marketing representative for a computer firm, has become the Roger Bannister of sprinting.

Crockett set a world record in the 100-yard dash Saturday with a clocking of 9.0 seconds, becoming the first person to hit the nine-second barrier.

On almost the same date 20 years earlier, Bannister ran the mile in 3:59.4—the first person to do it in four minutes or less. His feat came on May 6, 1954.

Crockett's standard sliced one-tenth of a second off the record Bob Hayes set June 21, 1963, at St. Louis and equalled several times later.

Crockett, who set the record while representing the Philadelphia Pioneers Club at the Tom Black track meet at the University of Tennessee, then earned the recognition that had eluded him since his college days at Southern Illinois.

His previous best official time was 9.2, but he was always overshadowed while at Southern Illinois by other great sprinters.

His best showing in the National Collegiate Athletic Association championships was a fourth-place finish in 1972.

McAuliffe Comes Back To Haunt the Tigers

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Detroit fans who didn't like Dick McAuliffe when he played for their Tigers have even less reason to be happy with him now.

McAuliffe, who played with the Tigers from 1961 until he was traded during the off-season, hit a tie-breaking double in the 10th inning at Tiger Stadium Sunday to give Boston Red Sox a 4-3 American League baseball victory.

Carl Yastrzemski and Rico Petrocelli singled off Detroit relief ace John Hiller before McAuliffe pulled a double down the right field line.

"It feels strange, very strange," said McAuliffe about playing in Detroit against the Tigers. He asked to be traded to the Red Sox to be near his New England home.

"I heard a lot of remarks in the stands," the second baseman said. "Bad remarks initiate you, things like: 'You couldn't make our team.'

"It doesn't irritate me so that I play better or worse. It just irritates me that baseball can be like that."

Hiller failed to check the Red Sox for the third game in a row. The Toronto native won the series opener Friday after giving up a three-run homer, then was charged with the loss in Saturday's game.

DICK McAULIFFE

In Sunday's other American League games, Chicago White Sox beat Texas Rangers 5-4, Oakland A's mauled Minnesota Twins 9-2, Milwaukee beat New York Yankees 7-3 and 5-1, Kansas City Royals swept California Angels 3-2 and 5-2, Baltimore Orioles and Cleveland Indians were rained out.

In Saturday's games, the A's beat the Twins 4-1, the Brewers nipped the Yankees 3-2, the Orioles hammered the Indians 12-1, the Rangers shaded the White Sox 3-2, the Red Sox toppled the Tigers 8-5, and the Royals trimmed the Angels 10-2.

Pat Kelly hit a two-run homer in a three-run third inning Sunday and Ken Henderson and Ed Herrmann drove in runs in a decisive seventh as the White Sox beat Ferguson Jenkins.

Dave Hamilton, in his first start of the season, pitched seven solid innings and the A's pounced on the Twins for five runs in the fifth inning to coast to victory.

George Scott, John Briggs and Don Money drove in two runs each for the Brewers in their opening game victory.

Rookie Kevin Kobel pitched a three-hitter for his first major league win and Scott and Dave May hit homers in the rain-shortened eight-inning nightcap.

Hal McRae and Tom Healy hit fifth-inning homers and McRae hit a tie-breaking single in the seventh for the Royals in their first game.

McRae and Frank White each drove in two runs as the Royals scored all five of their runs in the eighth inning of the second game.

'They're Maniacs' - Watson

Injured Astro Player Showered with Beer

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Houston's Bob Watson, bleeding—and nearly unconscious—slumped to the artificial turf during a National League baseball game Sunday at Cincinnati's Riverfront Stadium.

After an effort to catch a fly hit by the Reds' Merv Rettenmund, the Astros outfielder crashed into the left field wall and collapsed.

The incident took place during a 4-2 Cincinnati win in the second game of a doubleheader. The Reds also won the opener 5-4.

Watson's two-run homer earlier in the second game had given Houston its only runs.

"He was laying there bleeding and could have been blinded from hitting the wall," said outfielder Cesar Cedeno. "I wish I could have climbed up there with a ladder."

"They're maniacs," said Watson, who needed 12 stitches to close a wound under his right eye after the collision.

Expos were rained out at Montreal.

In Saturday's games, the Expos downed the Cardinals 3-2, the Giants nipped the Braves 5-3, the Mets downed the Cubs 6-1, the Astros defeated the Reds 4-2, the Phillies tripped Pirates 3-1, and the Dodgers overcame the Padres 8-6.

In Sunday's game, Mike Anderson drove in two runs with a sixth inning homer and Del Unser drove in three runs for the Phillies who took over first place in the East Division.

George Medlwald's ninth-inning single scored Chicago pinch-runner Matt Alexander, beating the Mets' Tom Seaver, who also gave up a two-run homer to Jose Cardenal in the first.

Steve Yeager's two-run single capped a six-run 13th inning for the Dodgers, who won their fifth in a row, in Wynn, who hit three home runs Saturday, hit another in Sunday's game.

Hank Aaron's 713rd career homer highlighted Atlanta's first-game victory. An error by shortstop Craig Robinson led to a four-run San Francisco eighth inning in the second game.

Newcombe Captures WCT Title

DALLAS (AP) — John Newcombe of Australia burst the bubble of 17-year-old Bjorn Borg of Sweden with a 4-6, 6-3, 6-3, 6-2 victory for the $50,000 first prize Sunday in the World Championship of Tennis, but the old left them cheering.

Stunned by Borg's whirlwind opening attack that swept over four straight games and two service breaks in the space of 20 minutes, the 23-year-old Newcombe brought his big game into harness and swept the next three sets, although Borg never lost confidence.

Besides the $50,000 first prize, the richest prize in tennis, Newcombe won use of a luxury automobile for a year, plus a diamond ring and $1,000 in clothing for his German born wife, Angie, mother of his three children.

Borg, who won $30,000, delighted a sellout crowd of more than 9,000 with the poise and aggressiveness of his attack.

CESAR CEDENO
Headed L Leader

Cincinnati manager Sparky Anderson raced to the fallen outfielder and shouted angrily at the fans who had showered Watson. About 12 of them were removed to the cheers of the Fred Norman pitched a five-hitter in the opener and Clay Kirby allowed two hits in the nightcap for the Reds. Retter-mund, Dave Concepcion and Johnny Bench homered for Cincinnati in the opener.

In Sunday's other National League games Philadelphia Phillies trimmed Pittsburgh Pirates 8-7, Chicago Cubs edged New York Mets 4-3, Los Angeles Dodgers tripped San Diego Padres 15-9, and Atlanta Braves downed San Francisco Giants 5-1 in the first game of a doubleheader, then lost the second 6-2.

Amazing Comeback By Hill

HOUSTON (AP) — Dave Hill made a dramatic comeback in the final round of the Houston Open golf tournament Sunday, shooting a seven-under-par 65 for a 276 total and a one-stroke win over Steve Melnyk, Rod Curl and Andy North.

Hill apparently had fallen out of contention with a 74 in Sunday's morning round. A double round of 36 holes was required Sunday after Friday's second round was rained out.

He played the afternoon's front nine in 32, four under par. He dropped two birdie putts of 15 feet, two-putted for a birdie on a par five and chipped close on the other one.

Celtics NBA Champs

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Boston Celtics coach Tom Heinsohn had the last move, and it spelled checkmate for Milwaukee Bucks.

In a game highlighted by the cerebral gymnastics of a chess match, Heinsohn's last-minute tactical change Sunday gave the Celtics their 12th National Basketball Association title, 96-95.

Old pro John Havlicek drew the Bucks' defence away from the middle, allowing Dave Cowens to shoot over and slash through it for 28 points as the Celtics buried the Bucks 102-87 in the seventh and deciding game.

Cowens, while spotting Milwaukee's seven-foot two-inch Kareem Abdul-Jabbar five inches in height, also pulled down a game high 14 rebounds.

Boston's 47-42 rebounding edge fueled a fast break attack which, along with ceaseless pressure defence, finally wore down the Bucks in the fourth quarter.

Havlicek, voted most valuable player of the series, sank only six of 20 shots Sunday after having averaged 28 points in the first six games.

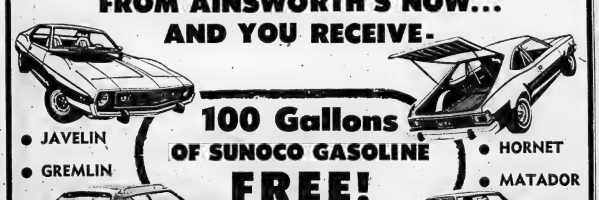
But with the Bucks double-teaming Havlicek almost every time he advanced to the front court, Heinsohn ordered the Boston captain to decoy Milwaukee's defence away from the middle.

"We totally confused their defence," said Heinsohn.

"We knew they would concentrate on stopping Havlicek because he was getting down along the baseline and creating too many situations. We were working down the middle instead of along the baselines."

The Bucks, 17 points down midway in the third quarter, stormed behind Abdul-Jabbar and Mickey Davis to within 91-88 in the first minute of the fourth period.

But Cowens retaliated with a running hook shot, touching off a string of eight consecutive Boston points.



Davis, who scored 12 of his 15 points in the second half, converted a three-point play as Milwaukee closed to within 85-76 with 6:41 to play. However, the Bucks got no closer.

Because the Celtics had earned $40,000 for compiling the best record in the NBA during the regular season, their share of the championship money is more than the Celtics'.

Boston's victory Sunday was worth $100,000 for a playoff total of $215,000. The Bucks' $65,000 share as final-round losers will enable them to split a pot of $220,000.

Election Crucial One

Davis Pledges His Full Support to Stanfield

SAULT STE. MARIE Ont. (CP) — Ontario Premier William Davis told cheering party followers during the weekend that he is pledging his total support to Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield in the campaign for the July 8 federal election.

The premier delivered a largely partisan speech Saturday to about 350 delegates to a buffet dinner at the climax of a day-long policy conference on northern problems while Mr. Stanfield waited in an anteroom of Sault College.

"I think the next federal election is a crucial one for the people of Canada and I intend to support Robert Sanfield," he said. "He has the capacity, the intelligence, the integrity to be a great prime minister.

Then in ringing tones he introduced Mr. Stanfield who had flown in three hours earlier from an afternoon engagement in Fredericton.

The federal opposition leader rebuked Finance Minister John Turner, saying the federal budget of last week provided ample reason to "bring an end to his short career."

He said Mr. Turner "had shown irresponsibility in being evasive in Parliament about providing details on estimated revenues Ottawa hoped to receive from the budget tax concessions to corporations.

The finance minister had also refused to confirm to Parliament what assumptions had been used in determining the inflation rate on budget programs, he said.

Earlier at a news conference Mr. Sanfield predicted the Tories would win 12 to 15 seats in Quebec and achieve a major role in the Commons.

He said a Conservative government would establish a commission which would define essential jobs in the public service.

The government, he said, would lay more stress on the need for illegal strikers in the Unemployment Insurance public service to live up to their collective contracts.

"This is an area in which I've been pressing for a long time and I think we have a real opportunity to establish a firmness is very clearly indicated," he said.

Inquiry would try to establish if the plan is really an insurance program or "a welfare plan in which the contributors are simply he also called for an inquiry by a new kind of tax."

Stanfield Accuses Trudeau Of Bid to Deceive Over Oil

FREDERICTON (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau tried to blackmail Parliament into keeping his minority Liberal government alive, Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield said Saturday.

The government misled the country by claiming before its Commons defeat last Tuesday that the national oil agreement would die if Parliament was dissolved before passing follow-up legislation, he said.

He quoted Mr. Trudeau as saying that the $4-a-barrel export charge on crude oil would be impossible to collect and the government would lose more than $700-million.

"I cannot remember a government and a prime minister trying to save themselves by attempting an act of fraud," he told the annual meeting of the New Brunswick Conservative party.

"That was nothing less than attempted blackmail."

There is no doubt at all that oil companies will continue to pay the export charge whether legislation exists or not, he said. They have already been doing so for months.

"There is no doubt now; there was no doubt when Mr. Trudeau spoke and no doubt before he spoke."

He said Energy Minister Donald Macdonald made this clear the day after the government fell by sending a telegram to oil industry officials asking them to abide by the domestic and export price restrictions in the agreement. It was negotiated by Mr. Trudeau and the provincial premiers in March.

The prime minister's statement might be excused by saying he was unaware of the facts, Mr. Stanfield said.

"But this was not simple ignorance. This was a desperate, frantic effort to cling to office at any price—to mislead the country and mislead Parliament.

"This was an effort orchestrated by the front bench of the government, initiated by the minister of energy, mines and resources, and endorsed by the prime minister of Canada."

"Mr. Trudeau and his colleagues, they've had their chance. They have failed themselves. They have failed Parliament and they have failed the country."

Turner Says Budget Best He Could Offer

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister John Turner says suggestions that he did not care whether his May 6 budget was accepted by the opposition since a Liberal defeat in the next election might land him the next party leadership are "pretty cynical stuff."

"It reflects a type of inbred gossip (in Ottawa) which fortunately—the Canadian people don't share," Mr. Turner told panelists on the CTV weekly program, Question Period, taped Friday for broadcast Sunday.

"When I brought that budget in I believed that it was the right thing to do in the economic and political circumstances of the time."

Trudeau MOTORS LIMITED

Wholesale Oil Prices Are Set

OTTAWA (CP) Refineries in Eastern Canada have been authorized to increase the wholesale price of motor oil heating oil and diesel fuel by up to 3.7 cents a gallon, a spokesman for Energy Minister Donald Macdonald said Saturday.

This compares to increases of up to 9.2 cents a gallon for the products authorized for Western Canada refineries.

The authorization was contained in a message to the oil industry by the energy minister late last night when a national voluntary price freeze ends.

Wholesale price increases approved for Eastern Canada refineries take into account a reduction in the federal subsidy to Eastern Canada.

The subsidy was originally intended to bring the cost of imported crude down to the established Canadian price of $4 a barrel. That established price was raised April 1 to $6.50, meaning that the subsidy had to be reduced to even prices up across the country.

Over-all price increases for oil products result of the Ottawa Valley were limited to 2.2 cents a gallon.

In addition, all refineries will be allowed to charge an extra 0.64 cents a gallon for premium gasoline, 0.62 cents for lower grade gasoline and 0.34 cents for diesel fuel as a result of federal sales tax increases. There is no federal sales tax on house heating oil.

All refineries may also increase wholesale prices an extra 0.4 cents a gallon as a result of operating and working capital cost increases.

Price Cut For Houses Reported

TORONTO (CP) — Prices of houses in a subdivision in Burlington, near Hamilton, have dropped about nine per cent in the last month and some real estate people are pinning the decline on high mortgage rates and recent tax changes.

In the Ontario budget March 26 down April 9, Housing Minister Sidney Handleman introduced a 50-per-cent tax on house-sale profits by speculators.

And in the last week, mortgage rates have risen as high as 12 per cent because of the unavailability of money.

Between January and mid-April this year, prices in the 80-house subdivision climbed about $1,000 a week. They hit a peak of $64,000 but now have dropped to about $58,900.

Lewis Wants Teeth For Prices Board

OSHAWA, Ont. (CP) — Although his official campaign doesn't open until later this week, David Lewis unveiled a preview of the New Democratic Party game plan Sunday, and "teeth" is the key phrase.

Speaking at a nomination meeting for Ed Broadbent, who has represented Oshawa-Whitby since 1968, Mr. Lewis unveiled two proposals on which he plans to expand over the eight-week national campaign: a price-review board with teeth and a two-price system for commodities.

He said the rising cost of living and control of inflation are the key election issues, and his party will produce a number of practical solutions to the problem during the campaign.

Mr. Lewis, leading the party in his second campaign as national leader, dished off the NDP's long-standing demand for a tough new price-review board with power to investigate and halt or roll back unwarranted price increases. The party has long said the present food prices review board is ineffective because it has no power to stop increases.

Mr. Lewis said a board with rollback powers will finally present a challenge to the "corporate powers."

The proposed two-price system for most basic commodities would be similar to the pricing systems now in effect for petroleum products and wheat.

He said Canadians should not have to pay inflated world prices for commodities produced domestically.

Trudeau Sees Sharing as Measure of Progress

DURHAM, N.C. (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau came to Duke University Sunday to receive an honorary degree and the kind of praise that he would welcome at a campaign appearance before Canadian voters.

Making his first sortie from Ottawa since calling the July 8 general election, Trudeau spent some six hours on the rain-soaked Duke campus.

He urged the 1,974 graduates to press the world's developed countries to adopt a new ethic of sharing and responsibility. He also chatted over tea and punch with members of the university's Canadian-studies program.

Trudeau hewed to the protocol that a visiting politician avoid controversy about both his own and the host country's politics. He mentioned the necessity for exemplary behavior by persons in positions of trust, but mentioned no names.

Faced with a standing ovation from the 7,500-member commencement audience and lavish praise from Duke President Terry Sanford, Trudeau expressed smiling regrets that because of equal-time restraints during the election, "I'm afraid they won't be able to use as much of that on TV as I might have wanted."

It was the first honorary degree from a foreign university that Trudeau has accepted, although an aide said he has received at least 50 offers from United States universities alone.

It was his first speech in the United States since a visit to Washington five years ago, and the first U.S. commencement speech by a Canadian prime minister since Lester Pearson, bending protocol at Temple University in Philadelphia, urged Americans in 1965 to stop bombing North Vietnam. The controversial speech earned former president Lyndon Johnson's wrath.

Trudeau's theme was a variation on one he has used frequently in Canada, that the gross national product is an inadequate measure of a society's progress.

Worse still, he said, "we not only continue the charade, we hold it out as a standard of conduct to the developing nations."

"What we face now is not deprivation, but the challenge of sharing. We need not do without, but we must be good stewards of what we have. . . . We are asked to concentrate not just on what we have, but on what we are."

President Sanford, a former Democratic governor of North Carolina, introduced Trudeau by praising his "intelligence and vitality" nd urging the audience to "learn from the Great mind of this great man of the 20th century."

And the citation which accompanied Trudeau's honorary doctorate of laws said it was given "in recognition of your intellectual and practical contributions to humanity, of your wise leadership, and of your vision of the future."

White House Denies Nixon Used Racial Slurs on Tapes

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — The White House has characterized as incredible, unbelievable and untrue a published report that quoted sources as saying President Nixon made disparaging racial and ethnic remarks in his private conversations.

In its Sunday editions, The New York Times, in a story quoting sources with direct knowledge of Nixon's comments, said the president referred to U.S. District Judge John Sirica and the White House conversation as a "wop."

The Times story quoted the sources as saying Nixon referred to persons in the U.S. attorney's office and the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission as "Jew boys."

Reached Saturday night in Stillwater, where Nixon delivered a university commencement address, White House press secretary Ronald Ziegler said of The Times story: "It's an incredible thing." He said the story is not documented.

White House counsel J. Fred Buzhardt, who has listened to the tapes, said in a statement issued Saturday night that the reference to Nixon using the epithet "Jew boys" is "just not true."

"It is a fabrication," Buzhardt said. "Such fabrications and attempts to portray comments in recorded conversations as racial slurs are unfounded and malicious."

Both Buzhardt and Ziegler alleged that during the last few days there had been a campaign by persons they did not name to cause such allegations to be printed.

Kennedy Won't Urge Nixon to Quit Post

CHICAGO (Reuter) — Senator Edward Kennedy said Saturday night every American feels a deepening sense of shame and outrage at each new Watergate disclosure.

But the Massachusetts Democrat, considered by many the leading candidate for his party's 1976 presidential nomination, said he will not urge President Nixon to resign, and feels constitutional procedures on impeachment should be allowed to take their course.

Princess in Winnipeg For Centennial Program

WINNIPEG (CP) — Princess Margaret and Lord Snowdon, after a weekend of Winnipeg 100th birthday celebrations that ranged from a formal ball to a three-ring circus, visit the western Manitoba city of Brandon today.

The couple, on a busy round of visits since their arrival here by air Thursday night from Minneapolis, was to make the 120-mile trip to the city of about 30,000 by train.

Government May Fall Over Divorce Issue

ROME (AP) — Italian voters today complete a two-day referendum on repeal or retention of divorce that might bring down Premier Mariano Rumor's government no matter how the vote goes.

By Sunday night, 73.8 per cent of the country's 37.5 million registered voters had cast their ballots for or against the divorce law, passed three years ago.

A majority vote against divorce would automatically erase the law from the books. But either a yes or no decision might split the fragile centre-left coalition government beyond repair, plunging Italy into another political crisis while the combant Christian Democrats tried to put together the country's 37th post-war government.

Diver Drowns

TOBERMORY, Ont. (CP) — A London, Ont. man drowned and three others were taken to hospital for recompression following a diving accident Sunday off Flowerpot Island in Georgian Bay.

The body of James Grant Marden, 21, was recovered by police divers in 100 feet of water.

Differ Rochdale Opinions

TORONTO (CP) — Residents at Rochdale College, the controversial residence in downtown Toronto, opened the building to public tours during the weekend.

"We've invited you here to show you what we are, to show you that we're not as you may form your own opinion," the invitation read.

And hundreds showed up for the tours through craft shops and promotions.

"I wanted to get out of there before the tour was finished," said Francois Morel, 24, of Ottawa when asked for his reaction.

"I was feeling sick to visit the place . . . dirty, filthy . . . no place for our young generation.

One Oshawa woman said:

"We really enjoyed it. They were all so friendly, so nice to us. And it's not like we read in the papers—all so clean, nice."

She declined to give her name.

To Walter Shaw PEI Farm Once Haven of Contentment

ST. CATHERINES, P.E.I. (CP) — Ask Walter Shaw Island farming as it used to be and the Buddha-like beam that breaks across his 86-year-old face tells all there is to know.

The smile speaks of fond pride in the rolling red land first farmed by the former premier's forefathers nearly two centuries ago. It tells of hard, honest work that yielded riches that have little or nothing to do with money.

On one level, the grin reflects a contentment gleaned from growing fine potatoes, raising good hogs and sleek cattle, building solid homes and barns.

On another, it's a sign of freedom, community and individuality.

Ask Walter Shaw about farming today and the smile disappears. It's replaced by a pounding fist that rocks the tiny mowdrop in its glass on the kitchen table and a roll in his r's that sends the word "terrible" hurtling past the wood stove and into the tranquil quiet of his two-storey West River country house.

"They've made a terrible mistake," he says, wrapping up in a phrase his feelings about government land-buying policies, tightly organized marketing groups and the official attitude that farming "has to be large to be worthy."

"Acreage is a factor," Mr. Shaw says with a boyish vigor. "But not such a tremendously big factor."

Instead, farmers serve themselves and the world better if they make what land they have "tell as highly as possible."

A proper - sized farm might be as small as 50 acres, and it might be as large as 500 if a man had sons to work with him. But farmers had proved that they must be diversified enough to ride out depressions in single commodities and small enough to be able to control costs.

Mr. Shaw's experience reaches back throughout his life, through 20 years as the province's deputy agriculture minister, eight years as premier of the 1956-65 Progressive Conservative government, a term as head of the P.E.I. Federation of Agriculture, another as chairman of the Horticulture Council of Canada, and years on his now rented 100-acre potato, boar and beef farm here.

He readily admits his theories don't necessarily make financially successful farmers.

"But richness is a relative thing.

"Who's richer, for instance, a fellow who wins a million dollars or a person who has a good, happy life surrounded by the things his hands have fashioned?"

He supports his theories another way, using farm statistics during the last few years to illustrate the effect of a generally-adopted government stance that older, poorer farmers should be razed off the land and replaced by fewer, but more aggressive, younger ones.

Island land in farm production dropped 150,000 acres to about 500,000 between the farm census years 1966 and 1971. The number of farms decreased to 4,643 from 6,357 during the same period. The number of farmers dropped correspondingly and have been decreasing at the rate of one a day ever since.

There are only about 4,000 left.

This has meant a steady drop in farm production. Potatoes, the province's main crop which, represents more than a third of yearly farm income, were grown on 39,000 acres in 1973 compared with 52,000 five years earlier. Production dropped to 3.77 billion pounds from 10.77 during that period.

The number of cattle, second-largest farm industry, slid to 106,052 in 1971 from 125,324 in 1966.

Milk production declined to 181 million pounds in 1973 from 244 million in 1966.

(A rare exception is tobacco, where acreage had risen to 3,254 acres in 1971 from a mere 607 five years before. Ironically, a government farm official expressed concern that a product harmful to health should be taking up land that could be used for food production.)

The Liberal government of Alex Campbell, both premier and agriculture minister, has attempted to arrest this trend with programs aimed at helping young people get into the business.

Land-banking programs under which would-be farmers can lease or buy farms on easy-credit and low-interest terms, a commission to screen sales of land to processing companies wishing to integrate their operations and other aids are being offered, along with a full range of federal programs.

Still, the average age of an Island farmer is 57 and Mr. Campbell says there remains a real need to "get new blood into the industry and strengthen the backbone of the province's economy."

The premier, unlike Mr. Shaw, says farmers "realize they must be organized to be effective in today's society."

The National Farmers Union (NFU) last year won the unprecedented right to bargain for farmers in cases where producers agreed that they needed such an agent to sell their goods.

But no farm commodity group has yet opted for the bargaining system to express its collective feelings.

Mr. Campbell says farmers should be encouraged to adopt whatever selling system they feel can get them the best return.

Mr. Shaw says farmers would be better served by a few government programs aimed at developing wise production and selling patterns.

As it is, "there's far too much interference in the liberty of farmers, so much that no farm groups can agree."

"Farmers are simply subject to too many commissions, boards, agencies, bureaucracies and people telling them what to do.

Allison Ellis, provincial representative on the NFU, expresses a different point of view. From his West Cape hog and potato farm, he says current farm problems are the result of steadily rising costs and the gradual swing into farming by processing plants interested in a guaranteed supply of potatoes and other crops.

Major processors, Mr. Ellis says, have gradually been acquiring large tracts of farmland, arguing that they want to grow about 20 per cent of their annual needs to assure supplies in the off-season months of April, May and June.

Mr. Ellis and the NFU want such vertical integration outlawed and the land holdings by processing companies to be restricted to 50 acres on which to grow test crops.

Without such control, he argues, processers hold a hammer over the heads of farmers. Product prices could be artificially depressed by the companies.

Land prices would soar beyond the reach of ordinary farmers, since a company could easily outbid a producer if it wanted a particular piece of land.

Mr. Shaw, on the other hand, says a little vertical integration by companies is a good thing; that they might as well farm land that would otherwise lie idle.

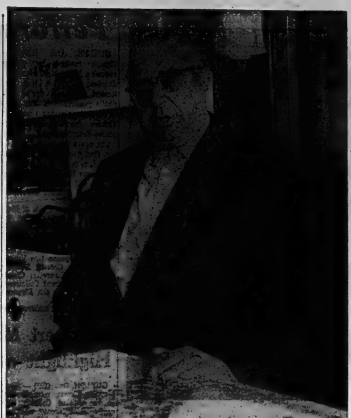
A company, like an individual, had a free-enterprise system right to buy and own land.

Mr. Ellis disagrees.

"It's a myth that there's any free enterprise left," he says. "If Imperial Oil raises fuel prices, all fuel prices go up. If the Bank of Nova Scotia raises interest rates, all interest rates go up."

What remains for farmers is the need to organize collectively and plan the needs of their sector of the farm economy.

"Farming as it was a dead. "Land is not inherited from our fathers, but borrowed from our children."



That sort of talk shakes Mr. Shaw to his roots. It means the end to a proud tradition represented by "possession of soil;" the prestige associated with an individual's right to do as he pleased with what he owned; "to kick a man off his property or invite him in for a piece of corn bread and a drink of rum."

Farmers who organize like workers in other industries lock themselves into a risky system where steadily rising costs must be met with steadily rising prices, Mr. Shaw says. They lose control of their lives.

Farming as it was perhaps offered farmers less money for their work, but it gave the incentive over their destiny.

"They may not have been rich, but they were comfortable," Mr. Shaw says.

Then, with emphasis, he adds: "And they were safe."

Ex-premier Critical

Walter Shaw's experience reaches back through 20 years as the deputy agriculture minister of P.E.I., eight years as premier of the 1956 66 Progressive Conservative government, a term as head of P.E.I. Federation of Agriculture and many years on his now rented 100 acre farm. Mr. Shaw blames the government for the present farm conditions in P.E.I. Government land buying policies, tightly organized marketing groups have created a situation where farms must be large to be profitable. (CP Photo)

"After 16 years of abuse and neglect my Lawn-Boy still works."

Back in 1957, Verne Olson of Calgary, Alberta, bought a Lawn-Boy power mower, model 5100. He didn't know it then, of course, but it would go on working faithfully for more than 16 years. That's what you get when you buy a Lawn-Boy—years of trouble-free use!

Compare our lowest-priced Lawn-Boy power mower with other so-called "bargain" mowers. The Lawn-Boy has a lightweight magnesium alloy housing that completely eliminates rust. A 2-cycle engine that uses pre-mixed oil and gas and does away with engine burn-outs from valves and sleep slopes. A rugged, reinforced blade and staggered wheels for a clean, level cut. And the quietest engine in the industry for quiet operation. Some models even offer Solid State CD ignition, which means faster starts, no ignition points to wear out and up to 4 times longer plug life.

As the years roll by, your Lawn-Boy will keep rolling with them. Choose from the budget-priced 19" model 5023; the 19" or 21" push or self-propelled Deluxe or Solid State models; 2 commercial models; a rider; or a cordless electric. In all, there are 15 different great Lawn-Boys. See your dealer now while his selection is still complete.

Remember, a Lawn-Boy may cost you a little bit more, but it lasts a lot longer, to boot. So, in the long run, it's well worth the investment...right, Mr. Olson?

Everything for Sale At a Price His Motto

VANCOUVER (CP) — City stamp dealer Fred Eaton has one motto—"everything for sale at a price."

Mr. Eaton said the maxim accounts for his ownership of a piece of American history, a book containing about 600 autographs of American presidents and government officials from Ulysses S. Grant to Theodore Roosevelt.

The New York dealer didn't want to sell it, but I told him that anything is for sale at a price," Mr. Eaton said. He declined to disclose the selling price.

"This book is worth a lot of loot and I didn't get it for $4,000 or $5,000.

"It fascinated me because it had a lot of romantic impact. It's one of the best of hundreds of collections I've seen in my 37 years as a stamp dealer."

The book, as yet unauthenticated, was evidently the private hobby of a retired officer, Capt. Charles D. A. Loeffler, doorkeeper at the presidential mansion from March, 1869, to March, 1909.

Capt. Loeffler was also interested in visiting statesmen. Winston Churchill, Canadian prime minister Charles Tupper and Prince Henry of Prussia signed the book.

Glued in one page is what appears to be a portion of an original receipt for goods to be issued by General Custer to the Seventh Cavalry in May and June, 1871.

Mr. Eaton said Capt. Loeffler's granddaughter sold the book to a New York stamp dealer.

"I think it's a shame it isn't in a museum. And it's a shame the dealer let it get out of the United States."

The book's eccentric future lies in being broken up and the pages sold individually, said Mr. Eaton.

"If anybody wants to milk it for all it's worth they will sell the autographs individually. That's happening to great books and stamp collections today."

But Mr. Eaton said it will not happen while he owns the book, his motto of "everything is for sale at a price" notwithstanding.

National Ballet a Hit in New York

NEW YORK (CP) — Veronica Tennant rediscovers herself every time she performs.

"Dancing becomes your life," says the principal ballerina of the National Ballet of Canada.

"It's at least nine hours of work a day, and it's very hard. But I think whenever I get out on stage and I hear the music something always is there for me. And it's like a rediscovery."

Her Giselle in Peter Wright's production of the 1841 classic at the Metropolitan Opera House was rated outstanding by New York critics.

The National Ballet completed its two-week spring season at the Met Sunday and returns for three weeks in July and August. It was the first time the 63-member company had presented Giselle in New York.

Miss Tennant portrayed Giselle "with a mixture of strength, vigor and style," says Clive Barnes of the New York Times.

The National Ballet of Canada happens to have one of the finest productions extant" of the venerable ballet, Barnes writes.

"Dramatically moving," says Michael Iachetta of the New York Daily News of Miss Tennant's performance. She danced "joyfully and beautifully as a girl in love, then she broke your heart as she slipped into madness."

Frances Herridge of the New York Post says she was excellent.

In The Sleeping Beauty, Miss Tennant's interpretation of the year by Youth for Christ International.

Princess Aurora was "nicely done," Barnes says.

"Her balances were good, and her musical phrasing was consistently interesting. She is a dancer of distinction."

Just turned 28, Miss Tennant has been with the company nine years. She is married to Dr. John Wright, a Toronto gastroenterologist.

Training your body to make muscles do certain things they don't want to do takes 9-to-15 years, the dancer said in an interview.

"At the same time, I think you really are training your other part of your body which is yourself, your emotional and intellectual makeup, so that you can handle all the blows that do come along the way.

"Like nerves, like pain when you have sore toes and muscles, all kinds of things that can go wrong on stage, and do go wrong.

"And yet, somehow, by the time you are a professional dancer, you know how to handle it. When you thought you were training your body, in the end it turns out that you were training your whole self, your whole being, to be a dancer."

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — Actor-singer William (Chad) Mitchell of New York pleaded not guilty in federal court Monday to charges of possession of marijuana and conspiracy to import marijuana from Mexico.

Mitchell, 37, free on a $25,000 bond, was arraigned before Judge Adrian Spears. No trial date was set.

Mitchell is founder of the Chad Mitchell Trio, a folk group that performed across the U.S. for about nine years.

Drug Enforcement Administration Agency investigators said Mitchell was arrested last Oct. 21 as he tried to get into a pickup equipped with a camper where agents found 490 pounds of marijuana.

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — Mayor Pete Wilson proclaimed "June Carter Day" in San Diego after the country singer was named woman and mother of the year by Youth for Christ International.

With Miss Carter at the Wednesday ceremonies was her husband, Johnny Cash.

MILAN, Italy (AP) — A judge hearing the divorce suit of American-born opera singer Anna Moffo and her Italian husband Thursday postponed the case until May 30—which might mean no divorce.

Miss Moffo and Mario Lanfranchi, a producer-director, agreed on a civil separation last year and have sued for divorce under Italy's three-year-old divorce law.

At the hearing Thursday, the judge asked the pair, as required by law, whether they were willing to patch up the marriage. Even though they said not, the judge ordered the postponement.

On May 12 Italians will vote in a national referendum on whether to repeal the divorce law. Repeal would cause all pending divorce suits to be dropped.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Doc Severinsen and his band are off the Tonight show and Johnny Carson is using recorded music and a ragtime player piano.

The American Federation of Musicians went on strike against the three television networks last Friday night and pulled its musicians off network shows. As many as 1,500 musician may be affected by the strike.

The most visible effect of the strike is the absence of Severinsen's band on the Tonight show. Network soap operas are using recorded music.

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor Henry Fonda checked into hospital Thursday for a readjustment of his heart pacemaker.

The device which regulates the heartbeat was placed in the heart of the 68-year-old actor after he collapsed backstage during a performance of his one-man Broadway show, Dear Liar.

Producers of Darrow said performances in Detroit and Denver have been cancelled but that Fonda will be ready for the show's May 27 opening in Los Angeles.

Performance Beats Handicaps

GUELPH, Ont. (CP) — Though marred by patchy acoustics in the high school auditorium where it was performed, the Guelph Spring Festival's production of The Rape of Lucretia starring tenor Jon Vickers drew prolonged applause Saturday night.

The opera by Benjamin Britten, first performed in England in 1946, tells the pagan story of the chaste Roman matron who was raped by an Etruscan prince and stabbed herself to death from shame.

Vickers sang the role of Male Chorus, who comments on the unfolding story in the style of Greek drama, though from a Christian point of view.

With Vickers in the all-Canadian cast, soprano Lyn Vernon sang Female Chorus; Patricia Rideout sang Lucretia; Claude Corbeil her husband Collatinus; and Allan Monk the Etruscan prince Tarquinius.

The high school auditorium is a modern one, but its relatively low, flat ceiling plays hob with acoustics in some parts of the seating area.

The Guelph Spring Festival, now in its seventh season, hopes to have a new hall and proper acoustics for opera by Guelph's 150th anniversary in 1977.

But The Rape was given a stunning performance, visually and musically. It has two more performances this week.

William Lord of York University, Toronto, and Colin Graham of England's Aldeburgh Festival used a set made of steel wire netting and translucent plastic, which seemed an anachronism for a story dated about 500 BC, but which under masterful lighting proved versatile. There was blood-red for the offstage sounds of Roman discontent with their Etruscan masters and delicate tracery for Lucretia's bedroom scene, gradually changing to ominous grey for the rape.

Nicholas Goldschmidt, director of music at Guelph Univer sity and artistic director of the Guelph Spring Festival, concluded. The orchestra calls for only 13 players, but Britten's scoring makes every note count and gives the music a rich and dramatic texture.

The libretto by Ronald Duncan, which Britten used for the opera, stresses the destruction of good by evil Lucretia's faithfulness torn asunder at the point of Tarquinius' sword and has Female Chorus ask whether that is all there is in the meaning of life.

The performance, with grants from the Canada Council, the Ontario Arts Council and the Carling Community Arts Foundation, was sponsored by the CBC and recorded for broadcast on radio early in July.

Schubert Masterpieces Highlight of Festival

GUELPH, Ont. (CP) — When planning a spring music festival in the rolling hills of this northwest of Toronto, what better music to include than a classical piece dedicated to a trout?

It was the concluding number on the Guelph Spring Festival's program by the Orford string quartet of Toronto, with guest stars Gary Karr, string bass player from Halifax, and Jean-Paul Sevilla, Ottawa pianist.

Franz Schubert's piano quintet, sub-titled The Trout, was written in Austria in 1819, using an earlier Schubert song about a trout swimming in a stream.

The quintet, which drew shouts of bravo from the audience of about 750 in Guelph University's War Memorial Hall, was played by Jean-Paul Sevilla, with three members of the Orford quartet—Andrew Dawes, violin; Terrence Helmer, viola; and Marcel St.-Cyr, cello.

Earlier, the second violinist of the group formed in 1963 at Mount Orford, Que., Kenneth Perkins, joined his colleagues in a Schubert string quartet published until 1871 after Schubert's death.

Karr and Sevilla opened the program with a Schubert sonata for piano and Arpeggione, an ancient guitar-like instrument which is played with a bow like a cello. Karr, a young virtuoso bass player gaining international acclaim, played it on a specially-constructed double bass with permitted him to play more nimbly and to get extra strength of tone.

Inflamed Artery Cause Not Known

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please explain periarteritis. What is it, what causes it, what is the treatment?—B.L.

Periarteritis (also known as polyarteritis nodosa) is one of the pumpkins. We know what it is, we have learned to treat it, but the cause is open to considerable speculation.

The disease involves inflammation of the blood vessels, primarily the small-and medium-sized arteries.

Because it can occur in any part of the body, or in several areas, the symptoms vary, depending on location and the number of blood vessels involved. Muscles tenderness and weakness are rather common symptoms. Others, which may or may not occur, include joint pains, skin lesions, changes in vision, even lung and heart problems.

A majority of patients have some form of kidney involvement which may (or may not) result in abnormal urine and high blood pressure. Intestinal blood vessels may be affected, vomiting, diarrhea and stomach pains are possible.

So, you can see from this that there is no way to describe a typical case, but it occurs more often in males past 30 than in females.

The cause is not known but there have been reports in various cases that it might be a sensitivity to certain common drugs, sulfa, penicillin, iodides. But it would appear that no single cause is likely.

The most effective treatment is with a cortisone preparation, using high dosage at first and then tapering it off to the amount needed to control the condition. This may have to be continued for months or longer. But—and this is hopeful—occasionally remission or even complete clearing up of the disease occurs.

Dr. Thosteson: Do you know of any effective treatment for neuritis of the optic nerve in back of the eyeball?—Mrs. F.H.

This is an example of the kind of question I can't answer with any assurance. Causes of such trouble range from infection to poisoning to multiple sclerosis. Once the cause is determined, there's a basis for selecting a treatment.

In many instances no cause may be determined. Under such circumstances corticosteroids (cortisone-type medication) may be used by mouth or by injection.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My daughter-in-law, who is like a daughter to me, does one thing that worries me. She lets household pets lick the dinner dishes clean. First it was a dog, now the cat.

She is soon to have her second baby, and her little boy is also a puppy eater and I worry about him eating off the same dishes that are just washed with our regular dishes. I think animals should have their own dishes. Am I a fussy grandmom?—Mrs. A.W.

You're probably worrying about nothing, although I agree that pets, for the sake of proper pet training, ought to have their own dishes. It's also easier to keep track of how much you are feeding the pets, and what. Human dishes need to be thoroughly washed and rinsed with good hot water, there'd be precious little left over to serve as germs, any more than there would be if somebody else at the table was coming down with a cold or something, and left germs on dishes or silverware. The washing, scalding and then drying would make them safe.

But I still think pets ought to have their own dishes.

Use Nuclear Fuel

TEL AVIV (AP) — A government official says that in 1980 all new power stations in Israel will run on nuclear fuel. Michael Ron of Israel's nuclear research centre said phosphates from the Negev desert may provide enough uranium for two plants, but the uranium would have to be enriched abroad.

To cover not always an honor

West opens the deuce of spades. The jack is played from dummy. If East covers with the king the defence will collapse. South will play the ace and king of trumps and ace of diamonds. Then he will lead a diamond to dummy's king and ruff a diamond. His next play will be to lead East in with the queen of trumps. East can shift to a club and give his partner two club tricks. But that will be all the defence can do.

Oswald: "If East holds back his king of spades the contract won't make. South will have no way to get to dummy for any diamond tricks he can set up. He will have to lose two clubs, one trump and one spade."

Oswald: "Lower an honor with an honor is a pretty good rule to follow most of the time."

Jim: "We might say it is a very good rule, provided you know when not to follow it."

Oswald: "Let's look at some of the exceptions. In general you do not cover the first time when one of equal honors is played against you."

Jim: "There is nothing wrong with South's no-heart contract. That is, there is nothing wrong except that bad breaks and good defence will defeat it."

The bidding has been:

Old Bakery in Operation

The old bakery still operates in Old Salem, north Carolina, just as it did when the Moravian community built it. The original oven, which is nine feet deep by seven feet wide is used daily and can bake 78 loaves of bread at one time. Many of the original buildings which were built by the Moravians who came to settle from Germany in 1766 have been reconstructed and are staffed by guides taught to work in the early trades. (CP Photo)

Museum of the Past

Life-style of Moravians Preserved in Old Salem

OLD SALEM, N.C. (CP) — The single men lived together in one house from the age of 14, when they were apprenticed to a trade. Single women lived in another house until they married and returned if widowed.

All women wore bonnets which revealed their status. Little girls aged under 14 wore cherry red; ages 14-21 dark red; single "sisters" blue and widows white.

The sexes were divided in death, buried in separate parts of the cemetery.

This was the life-style of a group of devout Moravians who came from Germany in 1766 to Salem, not to be confused with the witch-hunting Salem in Massachusetts. Old Salem, part of present-day Winston-Salem, is one of the few places in North America where one can see how communities lived in the early days.

Several original buildings the latest dating to 1830, have been reconstructed and are staffed by guides taught to work the early trades. Others have been restored as private homes.

The Single Brothers' House, a half-timbered four-storey structure, is a museum. The dining room has a long table, each place set with a pewter plate, a big spoon and fork and knife with bone handles.

The brothers did their own cooking.

Several rooms are devoted to the early trades. Outside one hangs an elongated coffee pot, a sign once attached to the Hinterhof shop. Now it is the symbol of Old Salem and a large silver replica stands on a street corner.

In the tinsmith's room, a worker may be making sausage stuffers, candle moulds or cookie-cutters shaped like a violin, hand, horse or mouse-rao. Most worker-guides are elderly men and women, often retired.

One room displays the dyer's craft. Here are skeins of wool dyed from natural dyes used by the settlers

Indigo was popular. However it had to be fermented 10 to 15 days and the odor was dreadful. Wives didn't want the stuff in their homes, so one house was built for the dyeing for the whole community.

The deep red dye from the cochineal beetles was a favorite color with the women. Some of the dyes included red cabbage, onion skins and black oak bark. The latter plus copperas sulphate produced a lovely green.

Root madder roots are a very old dye. King Henry VIII used them for hunting coats, now our hunting pink shade. In early days a prized gift to a bride was a bed of rose madder roots, a good start on the three years to maturity.

Here, too, are spinning wheels. Men did the early standup spinning but when a wheel was invented so the worker could sit at the side of the birdcage frame or distaff, women began spinning. Hence the term distaff side for the woman of the house. Also a spinster was a girl who spent more time spinning than courting.

The shoemaker's shop shows a pair of cheaper shoes with wooden pegged soles. At first shoes were made only by length and width. There were no left and right until 1785.

Nearby is what is believed to be the oldest standing tobacco shop in the United States. Across the street is the early bakery where loaves are still baked daily for sale in the old oven, nine feet deep by seven feet wide.

The church, the boys' school (now a museum) and the tavern are also open to the public. The church built and ran the tavern as lodgings for non-Moravian travellers and traders. George Washington stayed here for two nights in 1791.

Beside it is the annex, now a restaurant with excellent food served in six small dining rooms, seating 86, by costumed waiters. Reservations are definitely necessary.

Oxfam Seeks New Support

LONDON (CP) — Oxfam, one of Britain's biggest charities, is seeking new support with a publicity campaign shifting emphasis to its assistance for developing countries rather than disaster relief.

"An Oxfam spokesman said research has shown that Oxfam is best known among the public for its emergency relief work but most of its activities are directed to small-scale agricultural schemes, public health, vocational training and family planning.

"The famine in Ethiopia proved that the British still respond generously to a genuine starving-child situation," he said. "But we are convinced that most people prefer to support longer-term development work."

Free-enterprise PCs Intervene in Business

EDMONTON (CP) — While flying the banner of free enterprise, Alberta's Progressive Conservative government has been moving into areas once reserved for the private sector.

Premier Peter Lougheed and his cabinet ministers consistently stress their commitment to the free enterprise system.

But its efforts to exercise more control over the province's economic future, the government has increased its participation in areas once the exclusive domain of private business.

Premier Lougheed, who has worked closely with the NDP premiers in the other three Western provinces on issues of mutual concern, assures businessmen the government isn't interested in eliminating their role.

But as the owner of depleting natural resources, the province has to make sure that it gets a fair return and that small investors have an opportunity to share the wealth.

The throne speech opening the spring session of the legislature clearly presented the government's view:

"This citizen partnership approach, involving Alberta shareholders and their government, will strive for the appropriate balance of Alberta resource control and private enterprise management."

The government has two main vehicles for implementing this policy—the Alberta Energy Co. and the Alberta Resources Growth Co.

The energy company, which will be operational later this year, will be a joint government-investor undertaking that will allow expanded citizen participation in resource development.

The province will sell the company its natural gas reserves in the Suffield Block, estimated at four trillion cubic feet, and turn over its option to buy 20 per cent of the $200-million oil sand extraction plant being built by Syncrude Canada Ltd.

The first share offering of $150 million will be split between the government and private investors. Small investors, normally unable to afford resource company shares, will be encouraged to buy shares that are not expected to cost more than $20 each initially. An instalment plan is being formulated to help the small investor buy into the company.

Legislation establishing the resources growth company is scheduled to be introduced later this year. Based on the same government-investor concept as the energy company, it is expected to be given government interests in secondary processing plants.

As outlined in the throne speech:

"It will provide Albertans with the opportunity to invest in resource, petrochemical and resources-upgrading projects in the existing decade. By this means, balanced growth involving smaller centres throughout the province will be achieved."

A 20-per-cent interest in Interprovincial Steel and Pipe Corp. Ltd. of Regina was recently acquired by the Alberta government at a cost of $10.8 million.

The steel manufactured in Regina will be turned into crucially needed construction material such as pipe at subsidiary facilities in Alberta.

Industry Minister Fred Peacock says it is not a departure from the government's concept of free enterprise. If the economy can't be developed fully through private enterprise, Mr. Peacock reasons, then the government must intervene.

The government has taken an active role in oil marketing with establishment of a petroleum marketing commission that makes sure the best possible prices are obtained for Alberta crude. The commission buys and sells oil produced from Crown leases.

The government also has set up its own export agency and has conducted a series of trade missions.

Poi May Disappear From Hawaiian Scene

HONOLULU (AP) — Poi, the pasty Hawaiian food that tourists are encouraged to taste while their hosts gleefully await the usual polite "it's not too bad" reaction, may be headed for the endangered species list.

The production of taro, a root whose uncooked turnip-like root is pounded into the grey-colored poi, has fallen off in Hawaii for several years. The state hopes to reverse the trend.

The department of planning and economic development has provided $33,000 for a campaign to promote the use of taro and poi.

"If taro and poi disappear, we lose a historic institution and the tourist industry will lose a valuable promotion piece," said department official Arthur Kodama.

There were 165 taro farms which produced 9.6 million pounds on 400 acres in 1963, compared with 128 farms producing 9.02 million pounds on 455 acres in 1972, Kodama said.

The attributes of poi are hailed by nutritionists and physician . It is highly nutritious, low in fat and a lifesaver for infants allergic to milk and other foods.

Poi was the mainstay of the ancient Hawaiian diet and many mothers still swear by an evening "poi bottle" to avoid baby's pre-dawn bunger. They say the poi swells in the stomach for hours.

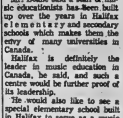
Music Centre Is Proposed At Halifax

HALIFAX (CP) — The construction of a $1 to $2 million music centre in Halifax to serve as a resource facility for musical education in Eastern Canada has been recommended to the Halifax school board.

Chalmers Doane, the city's music supervisor, says such an institution might eventually become as famous as the National Arts Centre in Ottawa.

Mr. Doane said Halifax has the potential to explore many facets of music education and the personnel to be leaders in many of these areas.

"With a lot of effort and dedication, we could have a $1 to $2 million music centre in Halifax. The city already has the basic qualifications."



Mr. Doane said a staff of music educationists has been built up over the years in Halifax elementary and secondary schools which makes them the envy of many universities in Canada.

Halifax is definitely the leader in music education in Canada, he said, and such a centre would be further proof of its leadership.

He would also like to see a special elementary school built in Halifax to serve as a music school.

Children at such a school would receive a normal education but with an emphasis on music.

The board has expressed interest in both projects but wants more detailed proposals.

Laser Used on Deuterium Provides Key to Harnessing H-bomb

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Ann Arbor, Mich., firm said Monday its scientists, using powerful laser beams, have achieved a definitive step toward harnessing the hydrogen bomb, fusion reaction for the production of electricity.

KMS Industries, Inc. said the development has been achieved by scientists of its principal subsidiary, KMS Fusion, Inc.

The announcement said the KMS scientists had, for the first time in the U.S., unquestionably produced so-called thermonuclear neutrons by heating a pellet of deuterium A, a form of heavy hydrogen—with a laser beam.

"The company believes," said the announcement, "its new system has the potential for commercial application by the early 1980s."

It said the major raw material which would be used in any such commercial process "is available in virtually inexhaustible quantities in the seas and oceans of the world."

The announcement quotes Dr. Henry Comberg, president of KMS Fusion, as saying the new research development not only provides a definitive step toward producing electricity from the so-called hydrogen fusion reaction, but also toward the direct generation of additional hydrogen from the same process. This, the announcement said, might lead to production of hydrocarbon fuels, such as methane.

For almost a 25 years, scientists have been striving to duplicate, in controlled and sustained fashion, the fusion reaction which gives the hydrogen bomb its big wallop.

Fusion involves the combining of hydrogen atoms so as to release nuclear energy.

Unemployed Total Declines in April

OTTAWA (CP) — Unemployment dropped to 5.3 per cent in April as the level of employment increased for the seventh consecutive month, Statistics Canada reported today.

The seasonally-adjusted April figures compare with 5.4, per cent for March while actual unemployment dropped to six per cent from 6.4.

Young women improved their job situations dramatically during the month and regionally Ontario made the best gains.

In Quebec, there was a significant increase in employment levels but this was balanced by a higher participation rate.

Actual unemployment totalled 568,000 out of 9,441,000 in the labor force. That labor force total meant that 57.4 per cent of the population—the participation rate—had or were seeking jobs.

The seasonally-adjusted unemployment rate—the one considered most significant by economists for assessing performance of the economy—compares with 5.5 per cent in February and January and a year and in April, 1973.

The rate for women went up 4.8 per cent in April from 5.2 per cent in March while the rate for men was unchanged at 5.6 per cent.

Workers in the 14-24 age group showed an improvement in 7.9 per cent unemployed in April compared with nine per cent in March. The more-than-25 age group was unchanged at 3.2 per cent.

Unemployment for men in the 14-24 age group went up to 8.5 per cent from 10.1 while for the more-than-25 group there was an improvement to four per cent from 4.2.

Regionally there were these changes comparing April and March: Atlantic provinces, 9.2 per cent and 9.3 per cent; Quebec, 7.4 and 7.3; Ontario, 3.6 and 4.2; Prairie provinces, 3.9 and 3.0 and British Columbia, 5.7 and 5.5

In Quebec there was an increase of 25,000 in the seasonally-adjusted number of men employed despite the slight gain in the unemployment rate. The reason was a sharp rise—to 57 per cent from 56.5—in the participation rate.

The Ontario improvement in the unemployment rate was caused by a gain of 32,000 to 3,508,000 in seasonally-adjusted employment.

On a seasonally-adjusted basis, total employment was 9,086,000 and unemployment 568,000. Total increase in employment was 27,000 to 2,429,000 while unemployment dropped by 6,000.

Wilson Says IRA Plot To Raid Belfast Foiled

BELFAST (CP) — The Irish Republican Army admitted today that British security forces captured one of its master bomb plans, but said it is winning the fight to oust Britain from Northern Ireland.

A spokesman for the Provisional wing of the IRA told reporters the master plan was "a doomsday plan we drew up some time ago."

Prime Minister Harold Wilson told the House of Commons in London Monday that the army captured the plans in a raid on the Belfast headquarters of the IRA's Provisional wing.

Security officials said the IRA planned to incite the Protestant majority in Northern Ireland to launch a bloodbath against the Roman Catholic minority. The IRA would then move into large areas of Belfast as Catholic "protectors" and occupy strategic positions, including the docks, television stations, newspaper offices and gas, postal and telephone installations.

As they were forced back in fighting with the British army, the IRA would burn Belfast.

Prime Minister Wilson said security forces may have averted a sectarian war by uncovering the plans.

Impeachment Evidence Under Close Study

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House of Representatives Judiciary committee is moving ahead with its intensive review of impeachment evidence while, from the White House, the word is "there isn't any chance" President Nixon will leave office voluntarily.

The Judiciary committee has scheduled a morning meeting to continue hearing the evidence its staff has collected during the last four months.

The focus of day-long closed sessions scheduled for today, Wednesday and Thursday was the attempted Watergate coverup, when the president learned of it, and what he did about it.

Extraordinary security was in force for the committee sessions. The committee hearing room was sealed with no one other than the 38 members of the committee and its staff allowed inside before or after sessions.

For the first time, committee members, other than the chairman and ranking Republicans were to listen to some White House tapes.

And on Wednesday, the committee is scheduled to vote on issuance of a subpoena demanding additional tapes. Notice of the meeting, sent to committee members Monday, did not specify which tapes would be sought.

Italians Rebuff Vatican Bid For Repeal of Divorce Law

ROME (AP) — The overwhelming defeat of the Vatican's campaign for repeal of the Italian divorce law spurred a drive today to end the privileged status of the Roman Catholic Church in Italy.

Despite a vigorous two-month campaign by Italy's bishops, most of its 100,000 priests and nuns, and the Vatican's political allies in the Christian Democratic party, Italians voted 3 to 2 in a referendum Sunday and Monday to retain the divorce law that has been on the books since 1970.

As soon as the results were known, anti-clerical groups announced a drive to collect signatures on a petition calling for a referendum on all laws giving the church a special position.

One such law stipulates that "the Roman, Catholic, Apostolic religion is the only religion of the state." Others give tax exemptions and other privileges to agencies of the church and Vatican employees.

The outcome of the referendum also was a rebuff to the Christian Democrats, Italy's dominant party ever since the Second World War, and its secretary-general, former premier Amintore Fanfani, who led the party fight against the divorce law.

The campaign divided Premier Mariano Rumor's center-left coalition government and promised new airesses for it in the future. The three smaller parties in the coalition—the Socialists, Democratic Socialists and Republicans—were for divorce, along with the Communists. The Christian Democrats and the Vatican were supported only by the neo-Fascists of the Italian Social Movement, whose backing usually is considered an embarrassment.

Thousands celebrated Monday night in Rome and a dozen other cities, singing, honking horns and cheering. There was some violence. Leftist and rightist youths battled with iron bars and sticks in Naples and nearby Salerno, and six persons were injured. Leftists in Milan and Turin to the force of a right-wing labor union, in Bergamo, which called for repeal of divorce, leftists stoned the building of a Catholic newspaper.

Foreigners Buying Ontario - - - White

SARNIA, Ont. (CP) — Provincial Treasurer John White said Monday that rumors of heavy buying by foreign investors in Ontario real estate prompted the province to introduce a 20-per-cent land transfer tax for non-residents.

"We don't know what the facts of the matter are, but we do know that there's a lot of buying going on," he told the Sarnia Rotary Club.

Among the rumors:

"One bears for instance, that 25 per cent of downtown Toronto is owned by Germans . . . 80 per cent of Spadina Avenue is owned by Hong Kong investors," he said.

The treasurer said Agriculture Minister Bill Stewart recently told him that German investors are buying farm land near Alba Craig, Ont., about 20 miles northwest of London, with the intention of leasing it to farmers.

"We shouldn't sell Ontario to foreign investors even though it may be an attractive haven for Japanese, Germans, Americans, and others."

Mr. White said the province considered a ban on foreign acquisition of Ontario land but dismissed it as unconstitutional on the word of legal advisers.

He said that if the tax penalty is not an effective deterrent, "I suppose we'll have to consider something stronger."

Quebec May Win Labor Autonomy

VANCOUVER (CP) — The ticklish question of greater union independence for Quebec members of the Canadian Labor Congress appeared closer to a friendly solution Monday as Quebec Federation of Labor president Louis Laberge predicted a more powerful executive by CLC president Donald MacDonald said.

The issue has threatened to drive a wedge between leaders of the QFL and the rest of the congress at the organization's biennial convention here.

The QFL has about 300 of 2,400 delegates to the meeting and has proposed that the congress give more control over education programs, labor councils and financing to the Quebec federation.

Such a delegation of powers has been stoutly resisted by the congress in the past.

But Mr. MacDonald said in his presidential address Monday that the congress must recognize that Quebec labor is unique and, while union solidarity must be maintained, the organization must ensure that interests of Quebec workers are protected.

His comments drew a pleased reaction from Mr. Laberge, the controversial QFL president who has in the past been strongly critical of congress leadership.

Stelco Resists Gillespie's Bid To Stop Increase

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says that federal industry Minister Alastair Gillespie met in Ottawa Monday with officials of the Steel Co. of Canada Ltd. (Stelco) in charge of the company's pending price increases.

Stelco plans to raise steel bar and plate prices by almost 12 per cent, effective Wednesday.

The Globe and Mail quotes Mr. Gillespie as saying after the meeting that Stelco feels the increases are justified by increased costs the company has experienced in recent months.

The newspaper also quotes Mr. Gillespie as saying Stelco executives suggested that a federal inquiry be held into the proposed price increases.

The newspaper says further discussions between the company and the minister are likely to be conducted by telephone, but no formal meetings are planned.

Wilderness Campsites To Be Tested in North Ontario

TORONTO (CP) — Leo Bernier, minister of natural resources, announced today that his ministry is establishing experimental campsites to control use of Crown land for public camping in Northern Ontario.

Mr. Bernier told members of a legislative committee that the experiment is being conducted in response to a report on the use of Crown lands by campers.

"I felt very strongly that we had to have some control over camping on Crown lands, and suggested that we have an experimental area," Mr. Bernier said.

The area selected for the experiment, which contains Mr. Bernier's own riding, is in northwestern Ontario from Ignace and Fort Frances to the Manitoba border. Last year, approximately $150,000 was spent on garbage cleanup in this area.

The project will be developed in four stages. This year, $225,000 has been set aside to develop specific areas for use by recreational vehicles.

The areas will be provided with garbage and sanitation facilities, and will have room for about 10 to 15 vehicles each.

"They will not be developed to anything comparable to our provincial parks. We will have very simple clearings. It will not be a wilderness park in the site itself, but at least we will have contained the problem into specific areas," Mr. Bernier said.

"I don't propose that we should develop all our Crown lands in Northern Ontario as a series of provincial parks, but I think we cannot deny the right of the individual to use those lands and to gain a wilderness experience and a recreational opportunity."

The ministry hopes the program will stop the use of side-roads, turnoffs and gravel pits as places for stopovers. The sites will be publicized through pamphlets and road signs.

The experiment is not intended to draw campers away from private and provincial parks.

Pay, Not Grants Council Suggestion

In view of the recent criticism of local organization receiving city grants, the city council budget committee should give consideration to a policy of buying services from the respective agencies.

That is the view of Alderman John Stock, who made the suggestion at Monday's council meeting.

He said the idea of the city buying services might be better than an outright city grant.

Mayor Robin Jeffrey said the matter would be taken into consideration, but added that a fee-for-service policy was already in effect with the Chamber of Commerce in its operation of the convention bureau and for tourism promotion.

Motorcycle Safety Week May 19-25

Belleville city council has agreed to sponsor a proclamation for Motorcycle Safety Week, May 19 to 25, but at least one city alderman feels the sponsoring Pinton Pushers Motorcycle Club should go a bit further.

The letter from the motorcycle club said the organization, the city police department and the recreation department had joined forces to bring the safety week ideas as a pilot project with the view of encouraging more safety - minded citizens. If the event is successful, an Ontario-wide motorcycle safety week would be planned for future years.

A quest for a proclamation but Council concurred in the re-Alderman Ben Clarke wondered why the motorcycle club didn't have an anti-noise week.

Some Benefits Of Age

If you want more house for your dollar, you have good cause to look over older houses. But there are other good reasons for shopping in the old ones too.

For one thing, there are simply more old houses than new ones. For every new house that will go up this year there is an abundance of existing homes already on the market.

Many older homes, especially those built before World War II, offer more abundant space than new homes do — a special attraction if you have a large and growing family, but a limited budget.

Most old houses are in well-established, well-developed neighborhoods. There will be no waiting for streets to be paved, sewers to be connected or schools to be built. All that is going to grace the neighborhood is probably already there, so that worrying about the future will have been done for you already.

Planning Budget Approved

A Quinte Planning Board budget for 1974, up 19 per cent over last year's costs, has been approved by city council.

The budget calls for an expenditure of $206,532 as compared with an actual figure of $162,219 last year.

The planning budget was before council on May 6 but was tabled for two weeks to allow for rescheduling of items. The confirmed budget figures were returned to council Monday to receive council approval.

The only objection came from Alderman George Zegouras, who said he still was not in favor of the budget as presented.

He noted that the budget was up 19 per cent over last year and included $20,000 for "additional consultants" and a reserve for operating funds.

He said council should be looking a lot closer into the budget.

Alderman Ben Corke explained that the additional consultants mentioned were hired to prepare the official plan for Sidney, Thurlow and Frankford.

Advertising costs for the year would be higher because of the additional public meetings that would be necessary. Also, salary costs this year were higher.

The city pays 64.14 per cent of the total budget costs; Trenton 20.86 per cent, Frankford 3.29 per cent, Sidney 13.05 per cent and Thurlow 9.66.

Motorcyclist Hurt in Crash

A Belleville man, Stephen A. Allen, 18, of 450 Victoria Ave., was treated for minor cuts and bruises at the Belleville General Hospital yesterday after the motorcycle he was driving collided with a car at the intersection of Bridge Street and Farley Ave.

Police report that Allen was driving his motorcycle north along Farley Ave. around 9.25 a.m. when he collided with a car driven east along Bridge Street by Fred Masters, 62, of Marlbank.

Allen was taken to hospital by ambulance.

Damage was estimated at $650.

Wednesday Peanut Day

This Wednesday, May 15 is the Kiwanis Club's annual Peanut Day. This is the day when members of the club canoe knocking from door to door selling Planters peanuts and peanut butter.

All money raised goes toward a good cause to help the Kiwanis in their welfare projects and to run the Shelered Workshop at the Kiwanis Centre on Dundas Street East.

Telephone Centennial This Year

New telephone directories are being delivered in Belleville this week.

The number distributed will be about 43,000 an increase of 3,500 over last year's total.

To commemorate the invention of the telephone 100 year ago, the directory features a computer panel picture on the front cover and a photograph of the Alexander Graham Bell homestead in Branford, on the back. It was there, in 1874 that Bell drew the first diagrams of the telephone.

On the lower right hand corner of the cover is the logo used to commemorate the centennial year of the telephone. It is a blue t-p-a-p-e on a white background with the dates 1874-1974.

Pool Fence Bylaw Changed

Regulations with respect to the installation of private swimming pools within the city have been changed slightly as result of a bylaw amendment approved Monday by city council.

Changes in the regulations relate to the height of fence surrounding the pool.

For ground pools a fence four-feet in height, four-feet back from the edge of the pool will be required. Former height requirements for a fence around a pool was four and a half feet.

The other amendment relates to above-ground pools and requires a minimum fence height of six feet above grade level, the fence to be four feet clear of any lot line.

Firemen: 'Ripoff;' Ex-MPP: Township a 'Loser'

New Ameliasburgh Protests to All-county Government

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Embers of protest against proposed centralization of local government in Prince Edward County are heating up in Ameliasburgh township.

Whether they will take fire may depend on a public taxpayers' meeting late this week.

Monday night there were two opposition developments:

— Ameliasburgh volunteer firefighters endorsed opposition and will pay for big newspaper advertisements urging township householders to oppose all-county government.

— Norris Whitney, member of the legislature for 20 years, now retired, circulated a statement to local newspapers warning Ameliasburgh would be a "loser" municipality in amalgamation of county townships into a one-tier government. He said there was "no urgent need" for a quick decision and the present county structure could be empowered to finance municipalities being pressed to provide services to expanding industry and housing.

Such opposition was predicted earlier this month by township clerk William Nightingale when the one-tier proposal was first presented county council by provincial government authorities. The township official warned Picton-centred local government would demand "quick sale of selling job" in Ameliasburgh.

Fronting the Bay of Quinte and southern shoreline facing Trenton and Belleville, much of the township's prime residential area is oriented to both urban centres across the waterway in Hastings County. The township also is included by the federal government in the Belleville-centred Canadian Manpower service that includes most of Hastings County.

Jack Jones, president of the 30 township firefighters, said the association will advertise against any move to amalgamate as a "ripoff" against Ameliasburgh.

The association claims taxes will increase; township residents will conduct local government business through Picton, which is a long-distance telephone rates.

Township taxpayers have paid higher rates than other county townships for services — like the volunteer fire department and the only township official jobs in the county — which could now be turned over to the all-county government, said Mr. Jones.

The veteran volunteer says the service over four years old, with two fire halls, two pumper and two tankers — is organized strictly to local advantage. Any change could affect fire-protection insurance rates, he claims.

Mr. Whitney, meantime, admits one over-all elimination of an all-county system. Municipalities, such as Picton and Wellington, now facing expansion problems without funds for services, would benefit.

But he offers this alternative: Eventually costs of such services are chargeable to the user. Therefore, the present county system could be authorized to borrow necessary capital costs.

If necessary, private bills could be presented in the Ontario legislature to empower any money project deemed necessary.

Some smaller municipalities could also consider amalgamating together.

Mr. Whitney's cautionary statement was issued Monday night as a letter to the editors of local papers. It will be published in total in The Intelligencer later this week. An Ameliasburgh sheep farmer, Mr. Whitney was a leading spokesman in county affairs until three years ago when he retired as MPP Prince Edward-Lennox, a Conservative seat now held by James Taylor. His senior government service followed local government involvement dating back to 1945.

The Whitney letter follows statements made last week by Reeve Russell Thompson who said township residents may be apprehensive because of misunderstandings.

But Mr. Whitney wonders if the move "fully understands all the issues."

One problem is the facilities that township taxes have created and which would come under a central administration. In Ameliasburgh, for instance, a proud possession is a pioneer museum. While local boards would be appointed at centralization, Mr. Whitney says, nonetheless, all facilities belong to the county government. Thus, if the county decided to shift artifacts from Ameliasburgh museum to Picton, there is no preventive process. The county already owns everything.

On the ministerial level, Mr. Whitney also states, the provincial government also has stated intentions about "imposing" further regional governments.

Therefore, while a one-tier Prince Edward government would be "a political feather" in the cap of John Irvine — provincial government spokesman who presented the proposal — there "is no urgent reason for a quick decision."

The all-county proposal was debated by township council last week. At that time, the council decided the issue must go before taxpayers for scrutiny and set a meeting in the township hall in Ameliasburgh next Friday.

Residents' Vote on One-tier

Hillier Meeting 21-3 in Favor

HILLIER — Hillier township residents attending a public meeting, have voted 21 to 3 in favor of the proposed one-tier system of county government for Prince Edward.

Hillier was the first of Prince Edward's municipalities to hold a meeting to discuss local government restructuring. Under the concept of county government there would be representation by population for each municipality. A position paper on recommendations for local government reform has been forwarded to Prince Edward County by the Ontario ministry of treasury, economics and intergovernmental affairs.

Reeve Lewis Wight of Hillier said that "by and large" residents of his township have accepted the proposal for a one-tier system but with certain reservations.

The town of Picton will hold a meeting to discuss the one-tier proposal on Wednesday, May 15.

Get More Men, Says Councillor

Qualms Voiced on Fire Service

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — At least one councillor is having qualms about staff strength of Trenton's Fire Department.

Coming up soon is an independent survey of the town's fire protection service.

Councillor Ron Price, taking an advance guessing on the survey said, "before we go any further I recommend more men."

He said 15 years ago a survey taken by the same group ended up with a recommendation calling for six men on each shift or protect a town of 11,000.

"Fifteen years later we have three men in the daytime and two at night."

"Maybe we'd be better off giving the chief the three men he's asked for," said Councillor Price.

The survey, according to information at Monday's meeting has a direct bearing on fire insurance costs.

"They're going to recommend more men and it's going to put a real stir into the people of this town," said the councillor, "I can see something boiling coming out of this thing."

The chief — as in past years has included in his 1974 report a request for three more men. Each would serve a different shift, bringing average shift strength to four men.

Council turned the request down and said it would allow for one extra man providing that he be posted to night shifts only. The chief said that was "impossible," said Councillor Price.

Mayor Robert Patrick, attempting to find a work formula involving one extra man told the chief to seek counsellor aid from Loyalist College.

Councillor Price said the idea was developed when the chief returned saying it would cost a thousand dollars for programming and computer time.

In a letter to council the chief asked that money be left in his budget for the extra man. But he requested no one be hired until after council has a chance to study the survey recommendation.

"We don't tell the police chief how to run his department and we shouldn't be telling the fire chief," said Councillor Price.

The survey is being done by fire underwriters who want to see as little fire loss as possible. They're businessmen," said Councillor John Born.

"They're looking for the ideal," he added.

It was pointed out that survey recommendations are not mandatory requirements. The town is not compelled to act upon them.

"We have to balance their ideal with what we can afford," said Councillor Bonn.

Hopes Of Big Marina Revived

TRENTON — There is a chance Trenton will get the million-dollar-plus marina town council has deemed too costly.

Council learned Monday night, Trenton may be singled out as a pilot project stemming from the Rideau-Trent-Severn study and qualify for provincial and federal government financing.

Jack Wilson, Chamber of Commerce manager, said representatives of the study group wanted to meet with town officials to discuss the possibility of using Trenton in the RTS scheme, especially some study recommendations.

Mr. Wilson, asked for council's permission to attend preliminary discussions.

The scheme is an unexpected bonus for council which, earlier this year, considered the project too costly in the original form. A council resident has been working on possible staging program that neither council nor developers consultants wanted to avoid.

Mayor Robert Patrick said the pilot-scheme possibility "seems to be the route to follow."

"We certainly can't afford to fund the marina indigently at this stage in the game," he said.

Trenton is considered a prime location for a topflight marina, being situated at the mouth of the Trent River.

No time was given for the preliminary discussions with council and group representatives.

Dodcatcher Needn't Pick Up Injured Pets

TRENTON — If it's a stray, the dogcatcher takes care of it. If it's dead, the public works department takes care of it.

But — until a council decision Monday night — if it was injured it was out of luck.

Townhall staff received a call recently about an injured dog. Staff were told Trenton does not belong to the Ontario Humane Society, no policemen were available, and not in the dog catcher's contract does not specify he pick up injured animals.

The question is, who is going to pay for the medical expenses," said Mayor Robert Patrick.

"Someone acting the line there must be a method to recoup account that will cover this," he said.

In future, a vet will be called to take care of the animals and the town will pick up the tab.

Church Opens Conference

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — Five hundred lay and clergy delegates heard discussion on drugs, violence, drinking, abortion and sexuality as the annual Bay of Quinte conference of the United Church of Canada began Monday.

During the four-day conference, delegates will attempt to consider resolutions asking the government to lower the voting age in Ontario to 21, to ban all advertising of alcoholic beverages on radio and television, to introduce a guaranteed annual income and to approve abortion only when the mother's life or health is in danger.

Other resolutions before the conference would urge the government to produce 250,000 homes a year at a cost of $3 billion in a national housing crusade, and to recognize the aboriginal rights of the Indian, Metis and Inuit peoples of Canada.

The resolutions were proposed by the mission division, set up by the church two years ago to recommend policy in the areas of Christian development and the church in society.

Chamber Contests Any Loss Of Town Funds for 'Service'

TRENTON — The local chamber of commerce put it on the line to council Monday night in the face of possible reduction of municipal subsidy this year.

Jack Dunn, chamber manager, contested councillors who call the annual $3,000 grant "charity" and said it should be considered "payment of services."

In recent weeks council sent back water testing Trenton groups which regularly look to the town for financial support. Mr. Dunn said were instructed to compile a complete list of grant recipients. In an attempt to pare town spending, council wanted to look at the possibilities of cutting off grants and let groups look elsewhere for funding.

"I've hear through the grapevine that we're on the chopping block," said Mr. Wilson. "I'm not here to contest but to briefly explain the benefits of the chamber to Trenton."

The chamber manager said the chamber is not solely concerned with town merchants but has developed involved group."

We're asking for a $5,000 service charge. If we're chopped, we'll go part-time. We won't close," he said.

He told council since February, the chamber has had 387 letters from new residents and potential tourists.

"If we're forced out of operation, what's going to answer all the mail?"

"You can't replace us for the money we're asking for."

Mr. Wilson said the $6,450 for his service to the chamber last year, according to a publicized budget. This year the pay drops, to $6,300 due to escalating deductions for Canada Pension and income tax, a point council questioned closely.

Council made no indication of its thinking concerning a chamber grant this year. A caucus meeting followed the council session to deal with budget items.

Pay for Plug

TRENTON — Town office contractors will attempt to find a leaking roof if the town promises to make the final instalment on the building, said Mayor Robert Patrick of Tony Lassing.

The municipal garage has been plagued with a leaking roof. Town council has declined payment of consultant and contractor bills until the building was completed to satisfaction.

Wellington Tea Party display features dolls from 1800s

Museum Is Ready for New Season

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

WELLINGTON — Wellington Historical Museum will reopen May 18, with a floral salute to yesteryear's courting couples.

In the entrance hall more than 100 slips of greenery have been tacked with their turn-of-the-century names for this special event.

Wellington museum, opened in 1967, was donated to the village by the West Lake Monthly Meeting of the Religious Society of Friends. The red brick building was constructed in 1885, and for a number of years, served as a Quaker meeting house.

Today, it has been completely renovated as a showcase of the past and emphasis gradually is being placed on Quaker exhibits.

The museum features several special displays.

Among these is The Tea Party, a Lilliputain social event-replica.

The unusual tableau includes dolls dating from 1870 to 1914. Dishes set on their miniature tables are described as "easily 1800".

A small lighted doll's house, providing a backdrop for the tea party, was crafted about 1853.

To achieve a something-old something new theme in exhibits, the museum this year features several new displays.

Among these is an outstanding glass collection loaned by Edward and June Robinson of Picton.

To show exhibits to best advantage the museum has been recently decorated. The windows, boarded over in previous years, have been opened and walls have been plastered and painted. A donation by a former Prince Edward resident, Mrs. Prudence Crawford, has made it possible for the museum board to carpet the building's ground floor.

Also, the original ceiling lights in the museum have been restored to working order.

Curator Mrs. Ruth Armstrong of Wellington says the museum is staffed in summer by village volunteers.

Conveners for volunteers are Mrs. Anna Foster, Mrs. Nora Stoute, Mrs. Dale Cleave, Mrs. Lavina Hamilton and Mrs. Esther Yott.

The museum is headed by a five member board, Chairman is Donald Armstrong and other member are Mrs. Rachel Burrows, Mrs. Pettingill, Louise Pettingill and Richard Middleton.

This year, museum hours have been changed to accommodate morning visitors.

The museum opens on May 18 and from May 18 to July 1 will remain open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on weekends only.

Throughout July and August it will welcome visitors from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. daily, including weekends. Labor Day weekend marks the closing date of the 1974 season.

Bank Moves

FRANKFORD — The Bank of Montreal's Frankford branch moved across the road Monday. It is now located at 2 Mill St. opposite its former premises.

Reeve William F. Rose officiated at a ribbon-cutting ceremony at 2 p.m. Monday. In the evening, manager Doug Helm and his staff were hosts to an open house.

The bank, originally a branch of Molson's Bank, was established in Frankford 71 years ago after 42 citizens petitioned for local banking services. In 1914, Molson's Bank bought the lot on the corner of Trent and Mill Streets and constructed the building that housed the branch for 70 years.

Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

"Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids... and repair damaged tissue."

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissue.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved... actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

And most important—this improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, those tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. All this was accomplished with a healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a stated cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Satisfaction or your money refunded.

The Small Community

For a time recently it looked as if the village of Brighton was a dead end as far as the young people were concerned.

Other than its pleasant aspect near the lake, and the expansive beauty of Presquile, it seemed a lonely environment, a place with little for the mind.

A community that echoed the message legend says Spanish explorers sent back to the homeland long ago. Falling in their quest for gold in the St. Lawrence they were supposed to have reported back: "Aca Nada," or "Here, in this place, there is nothing." The legend goes further, that from this phrase derives the name Canada. Not forgetting of course that it is also thought to be Indian in origin.

Brighton is no different in this respect from countless other small communities in Canada and the United States. The young in Brighton have had their troubles in recent times, occasionally leading to tragedy; but if these have something of the "nothing-to-do" syndrome, it also goes beyond that to the trials of growing up in general. Amid the relative emptiness of the small community environment, and in the absence of a positive program to give life meaning, both in and out of school, and embracing the home situation as well, growing up can be a more than usually explosive period.

Nor have things changed much over the years in small-town Canada. To read Kingston columnist and author Dennis T. Patrick Sears is to discover, poignantly and nostalgically, the same problems of youth in his day (at 49 Sears himself is still a young-ish man), compounded of aimlessness, despair and tragedy, but also of happier elements too. It is fortunate for the race that most of us do survive our youth and find ultimately in adulthood, some modicum of understanding of this life, and of satisfaction and maturity.

As for Brighton, it now has a weekly coffee house — the initiative of East Northumberland secondary school students Mike Zuber and Vince Callahan, and involving also students of Brighton public school. Attracting upwards of 70 young people every week, it has been described as a sort of salvation for the kids. If some see it as a hangout, there is this response from a girl: "This is the only thing we have left to do."

Is it? Brighton should be offering more than this. A coffee shop alone, even one that is supervised by adults and police as this one is, is not enough. There should be a great deal more, for the mind as well as in the way of sport and recreation. The young people, parents and community authorities should be working on such initiatives right now. Just as similar groups should be doing in communities across the land.

Having said that, we would have to question whether Brighton is all that bereft of interest, or things to do, when it has fine groups such as the Legion pipe band. They were in Picton recently, for a wreath laying ceremony by the Oddfellows and the smart bearing of the young men and women in the band impressed all who saw them.

When all is said and done c ommunity is what you make it — and this, which incidentally was echoed by a bright young Smithfield lass at the Quinte Mall the other day. A student at ENSS in Brighton, she and a companion were selling tickets on a color TV, the proceeds of which will help defray the cost of a student trip to China commencing at the end of this month.

It just isn't so.

Nothing to do in Brighton these days? Things are not all that bad.

Landmark Goes

A historic part of old Belfast has gone with the fire-bombing of the embattled city's Smithfield market. In Smithfield you could buy anything from the proverbial needle to an anchor, from books to records and cerios. Or browse to your heart's content. How frightfield is no more; at least it would appear that way from pictures and anything remaining would not be worth preserving anyway. No doubt something else will go up in its place, an office-block, highrise or such thing less vulnerable to fire at least. Whether there will be another Smithfield though in Belfast is another matter. Some things in life are irreplaceable, and Belfast has had its share of this kind of tragedy.

Committee Watchdogs Outgunned

Does Ottawa Fiddle with the Books On $ Spending?

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Ever been to a meeting of a Commons Committee?

If you can't make it in person, then you should ask your MP to mail you — postage free — a report of a session of almost any one of the 20 or more committees that in theory are supposed to be keeping a running check on government operations.

Read it, and you will quickly discover why, as Conservative Leader Stanfield and other Opposition spokesmen have charged, both government spending and the public service are out of control.

Both are at a new high, spending now topping $23 billion, and going higher, and the public service staff approaching 500,000 — by far the country's biggest — and daily getting bigger.

Main reason for the lack of control has been that the theory of parliamentary committees monitoring the increasingly enormous spending by the government has remained only a theory.

If it ever worked — and the Opposition questions it — the historic government situation has mookey-wrenched it.

The committee system was invented six years ago by the Liberals in the name of efficiency.

The plan looked good on paper — 20 or so special committees, instead of the whole House of Commons, would examine spending programs.

But what sounded efficiently workable in theory has proved inefficiently unworkable in practice.

And for three basic reasons:

— There is never enough time or information for even the Opposition MPs to ask really revealing questions.

— The government's minority position has forced Liberal MPs into the questionable role of defence attorneys for whichever members of the cabinet are being grilled about their department's always bigger spending.

— The powerful public service can fiddle or fix departmental spending so that there is no real accounting made of it.

Former Auditor General Maxwell Henderson first blew the whistle on the public service mandarins for "fiddling" government spending by carrying over money from one year to another and spending it on programs without Parliament's knowledge. The House of Commons will read in the government's "Blue Book" of spending estimates that x dollars are to be spent on this program and never discover that x+ dollars have been kept out of the kitty to be spent later on something entirely different.

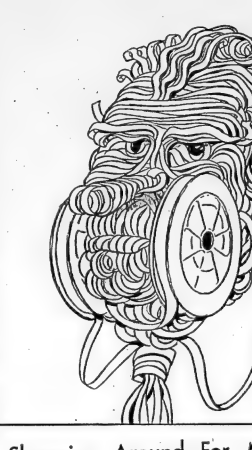
And how do the Liberals run interference for their cabinet committees to protect the government?

Like in an Estimates Committee recently when Transport Minister Jean Marchand chairwoman Beryl Plumptre was being grilled by the Opposition over that two-cents-a-loaf increase she okayed for bread.

The Opposition had the pressure on her for nearly 20 harsh questioning minutes when Quebec Liberal MP Marcel Roy came to her rescue.

He asked her to list the food stores — province by province — which her price investigators had examined in the last half year.

Just a short, quick, question, but it took Beryl Plumptre off the Opposition hook and nearly a full hour to catalogue the stores.



It broke the line of Opposition questioning.

It took the heat off Beryl Plumptre — and so off her cabinet boss, Consumer Affairs Minister Gray — and consequently off the cabinet and the government.

Even some of the Liberal parliamentarians, such as Jacques Trudel, chairman of the Finance Committee, and Marcel Prud'homme, Parliamentary Secretary to Regional Economic Expansion Minister Jamieson, are on the record with admissions that too many MPs are often interested in defending government extravagance than investigating its reckless spending.

And why haven't Opposition MPs enough time or information? Because year by year the government contrives to hide more and more of the dollar details of its spending in the ever-more-complicated Estimates "Blue Book."

And because each cabinet minister comes before the Committee supported by 20 or more mandarins, far outmanning and outgunning a handful of Opposition MPs backed up by painfully inadequate research facilities.

Shopping Around For Mortgages

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

As interest rates go up, the mortgage jungle grows thicker and thicker.

On first mortgages, you can almost see interest rates rising and fall as sure still as one.

Second mortgages? The trouble is that you can hardly see them at all, whether you want them or not. Legitimate secondary lenders are quoting 13.5 to 14 per cent interest, but rates can vary widely—depending upon anything from your equity in the house to the rapacity of some lenders.

Anyone contemplating a loan of any kind is well advised to shop around and compare interest rates. But nowhere is that advice more important, nor more often overlooked, than in the field of second mortgages.

(A second mortgage, as the name suggests, is a loan secured by real property, but ranking behind the first mortgage in priority of claim on that security. Such loans are available from loan companies, credit unions and individuals, as well as through middlemen called mortgage brokers.

Old wives' tales abound in this area—probably because most of us are so poor at the complicated arithmetic involved.

One such myth is that a second mortgage is a great way to consolidate the family's debts. It first glance that may appear to be true in certain cases, where a lower monthly pay-out or lower interest rate is indicated. But if there's a long repayment period, or a large final payment (the so-called balloon), it could be an unwise financial step.

The same applies to the suggestion that a second mortgage be used to pay for a vacation, perhaps in anticipation of a bonus next year to be used to repay the mortgage. That vacation, which goes so quickly, is not worth the risk of losing the home.

If you have a current first mortgage at a relatively low interest rate, it should be a last second mortgage at a typically higher rate, be wary of suggestions to combine them into a new first mortgage at a rate somewhere in between. You could well end up with a higher interest burden.

For the time being, there's little likelihood of any easing in mortgage rates. Canada's bank rate is at its highest level in history, and it sets the pattern for interest rates throughout the economy.

In addition the chartered banks, in meeting the heavy demand for general loans, have strained their liquidity almost to the limit. The "security ratio" of credit is at a low.

(Interest rates in Canada are high because the country is attracting more and more U.S. investors, thus pushing up the value of the Canadian dollar in relation to the U.S.)

The end of cheap mortgage loan today, you at least have plenty of company. The mortgage market is a thousands of small businesses and commercial borrowers that must rely on bank credit.

But before you commit your self to a long-term obligation of many thousands of dollars, get the lowest rate available, understand clearly what brokerage fees, etc., you must pay, be sure the burden is not more than you can reasonably bear, and consult your own lawyer — not the lender's.

Dismay Over That Land Tax

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — The real estate industry and any sections of the public with a direct interest are in a state of perplexity over the government's land speculation tax.

So also, one suspects, is the government.

Apparently the decision to impose the tax, and then the subsequent legislation, were rushed through in such a hurry that there is quite a shambles.

The situation is not as bad as it was with last year's energy tax, which eventually had to be withdrawn.

But even the government admits that the speculation tax needs a lot of repair work before it can possibly function.

And the NDP, at least, doubts that even with repairs it will do what it is intended to do.

In the second reading debate on principle, opposition party critics, and even a few from the government side, uncovered numerous weaknesses in the bill.

It is not one example that legislation would provide for a 50-per-cent tax on speculative profits.

On top of this there would be the regular income taxes which would bring the total to more than 80 per cent.

But it could rise even higher. This would happen if the federal government didn't allow the original 50 per cent as a deductible business expense. It is didn't the take could mount to 110 per cent. And at the time of the introduction of the legislation no one had discussed this with Ottawa.

Most pertinent of all, however, is that the tax could be self-defeating.

The purpose of introducing it was to try to force more serviced home building lots on the market.

There are three broad segments in the housing industry: speculators, developers and builders.

The key is the development segment.

Developers buy big parcels of land from speculators, or sometimes on their own, and put in sewers, roads and other services, and then sell off serviced lots to builders, while also usually doing some building themselves.

The forecast by the critics, and they appear to be right, is that if the developers have to pay the speculation tax on sales to builders, they will just sit on their land (except for lots they build on themselves).

The result would be an even greater shortage of serviced lots, catastrophe for the many small builders in the province and an even stronger upward pressure on housing prices.

Canada And The ICC in S-E Asia:
Pullout From Laos But Memories Remain of Complicity with The U.S.

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

In the midst of hustle and bustle of other events, last winter's energy crisis, a Middle East war, domestic inflation, the remaining Canadian presence in the International Control Commission in Southeast Asia has been forgotten.

And now the department of external affairs is about to terminate the Canadian presence on that rump portion of the ICC for Vietnam which still lingers in Laos.

We have a so-called "rump representation" in Vientiane, the Laotian capital, headed up of an acting commissioner an external affairs diplomat) and two army personnel.

The ICC for Cambodia has not met for several years. Of course, the ICC for Vietnam was dissolved to be replaced by the present International Commission for Control and Supervision which is based and left during 1973.

We will remain in theory a member of the ICC for Laos along with India (the chairman) and Poland, the latter two being triparite members of the original ICC.

Canada has been squabbling with the Indians and the Poles whether the commission should be maintained. And if there is a future need for it along the lines of its original concept in the now far-off 1962 Geneva agreement, then Canada's first ambassador to the Laotian kingdom will probably be the man to negotiate it.

The ICC in Vietnam, of which Canada was an original member, was part of the famous 1954 Geneva conference which ended French colonial rule in Indochina and allowed for the creation of the present two Vietnams, Communist in the north, pro-Communist in the south.

That function paraded as a further element in Pearsonian middle-of-the-road diplomacy was shown at several points to be less than this. The famous, or infamous use of Blair Seaborn to allegedly carry messages to the North Vietnamese leadership on behalf of President Johnson will remain a most interesting example of secret Canadian diplomacy.

How could the present external affairs officer, one of the most capable ever assigned to the ICC, function in this participatory way on behalf of one of the warring parties in Vietnam?

In spite of documentary proof, Ottawa and then External Affairs Minister Paul Martin have always denied the Canadians were compelled by Washington and an insistent President Johnson to carry out this messenger-boy role to the late North Vietnamese president Ho Chi Minh.

Not that whatever Seaborn took with him to Hanoi or said there ultimately did the desired results any good. There were constant stories by returning service officers attached to the Canadian ICC delegation and disgusted personally with the war there, that some of their fellows volunteered military information about North Vietnam from their open visits to Hanoi and Haiphong as ICC members.

And to the journalistic attacks against the Pearson government and former External Affairs Minister Paul Martin that our major defence production sharing arrangements with the U.S. really should have compelled us to withdraw forthwith from the so-called neutral ICC.

Canada made aircraft, weapons and fighting gear being used and worn by U.S. troops fighting in Vietnam.

The controversy of Canada and the ICC will always be one of public commitments of neutrality — and some private, or secret ones if you wish, of complicity with a belligerent there.

Kurdish Guerrillas Menace Iraq

By KEVIN DOYLE
Canadian Press

In a remote corner of the Middle East a civil war is raging through the snow-capped peaks of northern Iraq but hardly getting the attention of world statesmen as it moves towards a deadly climax.

Nearly 100,000 Kurdish guerrilla irregulars are battling daily to overthrow the central government in Baghdad, win autonomy for themselves and establish greater democracy throughout the Iraqi republic.

But to accomplish this effectively and quickly, they believe, they must get massive assistance from outside. So far they have directed most of their efforts for aid at the United States which resolutely refuses even to send a message to examine their claims and needs.

The Kurds, however, have begun looking to both Britain and France for help, as well as West Germany, and their bargaining tactics are expected to get tougher.

They have already established fairly effective control over 10 per cent of the Iraq—about 20 per cent of the country—and are slowly moving into a position where they can effectively threaten the oil installations owned by western companies on the fringes of their territory.

The western governments approached by the Kurds are in a dilemma. Most of them feel bound to protect the property of the oil companies. But if they were to back the Kurds in a holy war fight, the Russians would be in grave danger of retaliatory action by supporting the Baghdad government.

On the other hand, the Kurds are threatening to blow up the oil installations unless outside help is promptly given.

The Kurds, who have been in a state of revolt off and on since 1961, are now a diffuse group spread over sections of Iran, Syria, Turkey and a small part of the Soviet Union as well as Iraq.

Their fight for autonomy has been directed mainly against the Iraqi government which is the strongest they faced and their main source of weapons and financial backing has traditionally been Iran, where the shah is anxious to establish influence in the Gulf area at the expense of Iraq.

The Iraqi army, is reluctant to give full-scale support to the guerrillas in case they should become powerful enough to widen their demands for autonomy to the state of independence.

The Kurds have about 45,000 highly-trained regular troops backed up by roughly 60,000 lightly armed and less-disciplined militia but they lack heavy artillery in any quantity and they have no airpower whatever.

With or without outside help, many believe, the war is nearing a bloody climax which may yet force the big powers to take sides.

Government, Farming, and Economics

Brockville Recorder and Times

There are farmers who feel that the government should get out of the farming business. That subsidies would not be needed if farmers had access to more credit at the bank. Talk of a bill that would enable government guaranteed loans of up to $50,000 was frowned upon as being socialistic. Whether or not the farmer and small businessman should be given interest guarantees is not granted others, is open to question. It would help but it may also create unfair advantages.

The Liberals were joined by the Conservatives in defeating the amendment, a bill that set out the farming business. That subsidies would not be needed if farmers had access to more credit at the bank. Talk of a bill that would enable government guaranteed loans was not out of line with other bills. Whether or not the farmer and small businessman should be given interest guarantees is not granted others, is open to question. It would help but it may also create unfair advantages.

The purpose of the loans is to enlarge the opportunities of efficient farmers and efficient business should be able to pay its own way. It should be able to do so out of increased production and increased profits, which are also aims of the new loan ceilings.

It is surprising that, in defeating the NDP amendment, the Liberals and the Conservatives didn't discuss the need for a lower limit. Surely, what they must that today, even a house can cost more than $50,000.

Thousand Lose UIC Payments

TORONTO (CP) — The Unemployment Insurance Commission (UIC) said Monday that 1,900 Toronto residents have lost their unemployment benefits and another 1,000 still are under investigation after they did not pick up benefit cheques during a recent mail strike.

Of the 29,000 Toronto residents who did not collect their cheques during the strikes, 9,000 were called into UIC offices last week to explain why. Six thousand appeared with explanations and 3,000 who did now show have been given a few more days to do so.

Among the 6,000, 2,500 people had unsatisfactory explanations and were referred to the benefit controllers for investigation. Five hundred of those were cleared and their benefits renewed. One thousand lost their benefits and another 1,000 are under investigation.

A UIC spokesman said that some persons were unaware of the emergency distribution system for the cheques, including those with language difficulties who did not or could not read newspapers or listen to the radio.

Some who visited the UIC offices did not pick up their cheques because they were working.

"Most people in this group said 'I've just found a job,' but we are looking further into their situation."

Others reported to the wrong armory, were sick, or did not expect a cheque because they did not think their claims had been processed yet.

Some said they were in school, out of town, or could not get a baby-sitter. Only 23 said they "didn't bother" to visit the armories to get their cheques.

"We expect some more claimants will be coming in; because of the mail delays, we don't want to over-react," said the spokesman.

Handleman Draws Guffaws

TORONTO (CP) — Housing Minister Sidney Handleman drew loud guffaws from the opposition Monday when he suggested that as mortgage interest rates rise they actually become cheaper for the consumer.

"There is no question whatsoever that interest rates. As they rise, become cheaper as they go almost in terms of rising income," said Mr. Handleman.

"If you buy money today at 12 per cent and your income increases at the rate of nine or 10 per cent over the next five years, the money is cheaper five years from now than it is today," he said.

"Now there's profundity," said New Democratic Party Leader Stephen Lewis.

The appointment—taking effect when Dr. Ramsey, retires next November at the age of 70—was made by the Queen, as head of the Church of England, on the advice of the prime minister.

Dr. Coggan now is Archbishop of York.

As Archbishop of Canterbury, Dr. Coggan will be the titular leader of the worldwide Anglican community.

Wells Wants Bigger Voice For Teachers

TORONTO (CP) — Thomas Wells, Ontario minister of education, told 400 school trustees Monday to give teachers a greater voice in making educational policy.

"One of the biggest jobs which school trustees face in the next few years is to improve communications with their teachers," he told a three-day conference sponsored by the Ontario Institute for Studies in Education and the Ontario School Trustees Council.

"Teachers want a say in education policy making," he said. "That doesn't mean they should make all of the decisions, but they want to feel that their views are at least heard and considered."

"They want a wide-open channel of input and there is nothing at all wrong with that."

Boston Policemen Streak in Night Club

PORTSMOUTH, R.I. (AP) — A Portsmouth motel owner says a group of Boston policemen ran naked through this Ramada Inn night club and took part in a disturbance that resulted in about $1,000 damage.

Peter Stilphen said about two dozen of the 100 Boston policemen staying at the motel Friday night, took part in the alleged incidents. The policemen came here to march in a police parade Saturday.

Jean Lawler, motel manager, said she called local police twice and state police once, but no arrests were made.

Mrs. Lawler said at least a half-dozen policemen stripped at the side of the motel's swimming pool within sight of the night club audience and jumped in. Other police ran naked through the night club, with some climbing onto the stage and others jumping on tables.

Plumptre Says Farmers' Income Up 89 Per Cent

TORONTO (CP) — Beryl Plumptre, chairman of the food prices review board, said Monday that last year net income of Canadian farmers increased 89 per cent over 1972, but that not all farmers shared the increase to the same extent.

Dairy farmers in all regions have been squeezed by increasing costs, she told Food Study '74, a conference organized by the Grocery Product Manufacturers of Canada.

"Because of the importance of milk and dairy products in our diets, the unsatisfactory state of the industry, both of production and marketing levels, is of concern to the board as to many Canadians."

She also said that national egg marketing policy has brought disorder to the marketing of eggs.

The Canadian egg marketing agency has a "policy which leads to dividing the country into isolated markets, which restricts production in efficient producing areas and which develops surpluses in others."

One result is that consumers in Newfoundland, whose average incomes are lower than those in other provinces, continue to pay Canada's highest prices for eggs, Mrs. Plumptre said.

She said surpluses are reported being sold for powdered eggs to be used in overseas aid programs while "we penalize consumers in needy provinces and at the same time restrict imports."

Mrs. Plumptre outlined the programs of the board and said it has initiated a series of food price reviews for consumers.

These consist of "short statements explaining the reasons for increases in the prices of commodities which are of most concern to consumers contacting us—such as sugar, potatoes, margarine, shortening and vegetable oils."

The first cross-country check-up of retail merchandising practices was conducted by the board last September and the results "uncovered a number of illegal operations on which a number of retailers have since been charged in courts," Mrs. Plumptre said.

Another study led the government to make illegal the practice of "double-ticketing" goods on store shelves, she said.

Loblaws Head Says Controls Boost Prices

TORONTO (CP) — William Sherman, president of Loblaws Ltd., said Monday wage and price controls would have a detrimental effect on the price and availability of food.

He told the Retail Council of Canada's annual convention and trade show food prices can be expected to rise at the rate of eight to 10 per cent this year.

"We all know from the American experience that wage and price controls tend to restrict production and discourage growers and producers from increasing their yields," Mr. Sherman said.

The federal Progressive Conservatives have been urging wage and price controls as a method of dealing with inflation.

Mr. Sherman said he can see no end to general inflationary trends, but added that supermarkets are moving towards some innovations that may cut costs.

TORONTO (CP) — Stephen Lewis, leader of the New Democratic Party, introduced legislation Monday that would give the Ontario energy board the power to roll back gasoline and oil prices.

Premier William Davis has rejected previous NDP suggestions that the energy board be given such power and the private member's bill likely will die on the order paper.

CANADA SAVINGS BONDS NOW MORE VALUABLE THAN EVER

40 Years in Potato Business Enough to Make Man Wary

WOODSTOCK, N.B. (CP) — Forty years in the erratic potato business have left Alvin Keenan a wary man.

Not that things have gone all that poorly for the 59-year-old founder of an operation that spans 3,500 acres of potato land, a fleet of trucks, $500,000 worth of farm machinery and an airplane to seed cover crops on fields retiring between biennial plantings of potatoes.

Mr. Keenan admits cautiously from his farm headquarters in the Saint John River Valley here, "we wouldn't be in business if we didn't see a future."

Staying in business, though, is another matter, requiring a certain law-of-the-jungle business attitude.

"Farming's like anything else. It's survival of the fittest."

The Keenan approach to survival is one of steady expansion and a continuing effort in control as much of the growing and selling it goes as possible.

For others in this cornerstone Maritime farm industry, the approach is one of awaiting disaster through farmer-controlled marketing boards and government protection.

Behind both is an attitude that even in the best of times there are portents of the worst.

Consider the present: Potato prices have never been as high. Wholesale prices for 100 pounds currently are hovering around $12, up roughly 740 per cent from the average $1.45 between 1966 and 1970. Demand in an increasingly food-scarce world shows no sign of slackening.

Yet potato production this year in New Brunswick, the largest producing province, is expected to rise only marginally, by one per cent to 51,500 acres. In Prince Edward Island, production is expected to remain at last year's level: 41,000 acres.

Why? Rising costs are part of it.

Jack Brooks, a 250-acre potato farmer and National Farmers' Union organizer at nearby Andover, notes that a history of potato farming is enough to make any grower fatalistic.

"Prices go up and down—they're high now—but costs just keep going up."

Allison Ellis, who grows 100 acres in Prince Edward Island near West Cape, agrees. He estimates that it will cost him $600 to grow each acre of potatoes he plants, up from about $230 last year.

Fertilizer costs have risen 30 per cent from last year's price of $80 a ton and each acre needs a ton of fertilizer to grow a worthwhile crop. Seed prices, machinery costs and weed and insect spray have jumped correspondingly.

Still, based on an average yield of 18,000 pounds an acre, a farmer can comfortably cover costs and profit at today's prices. At current costs of $600 an acre, he can break even on an average yield if he can sell at $3.80 a hundredweight, and prices are more than double that now.

"Farmers are cautious people," says Mr. Brooks. "They are interested in security and the risk factor is just getting too high now."

He, like many other farmers, intends to hold the line on production, mainly glocause he'll have to spend $150,000 to grow his 250 acres of potatoes before he gets a penny in return.

Mr. Keenan, on the other hand, is attempting to undercut the cost spiral with bigger, more efficient machines in order to limit the number of workers he has need to integrating his operations.

"You've got to keep expanding some."

But he too is worried about costs and the constant threat of bad weather. One poor harvest can slash many small and medium-sized farmers who grow only potatoes. And it can badly damage large operations.

Mr. Keenan and his five sons have hedged their bets somewhat with a packing and shipping plant.

Together, they grow as many potatoes as possible on a 500-acre farm here and another 3,000-acre farm near Aroostook, Me., in an average year, that much land yields 180,000 hundredweight.

But food store and processor customers built up over the years now require nearly twice the sizable supply that can be harvested on Keenan land. To meet this demand, the Keenans buy potatoes from neighbor local farmers and ship in many more from United States farms, mainly Alabama.

Mr. Keenan considers himself fortunate that all his sons decided to stay on the farm, hinting that the late-model cars parked among the potato trailers had much to do with their decisions.

"They have everything they want."

His eldest son Terry, 30, runs the marketing side of the operation. David, 28, deploys trucks and fills orders. Ray, 23, runs the Prince Edward Island farm. Alvin, 19, and Kenny, 18, drive trucks and pitch in where needed.

A man's family is interested in making a business work, Mr. Keenan says.

"And they don't quit at 5 p.m."

While other, smaller farmers look to governments and farm organizations for help and protection, the senior Keenan regards government in particular as his biggest competitor.

Unemployment insurance and welfare programs have made people less interested in working on farms, he argues, illustrating his point by showing a reporter a pair of gloves stamped with the label "hand protection."

"If they still called them work gloves, nobody would buy them."

Then too, farmers can't compete with steadily rising minimum wages and those being paid by other industries.

Mr. Ellis regards operations like the Keenans' and such major processors as McCain's Ltd., as larger threats than government.

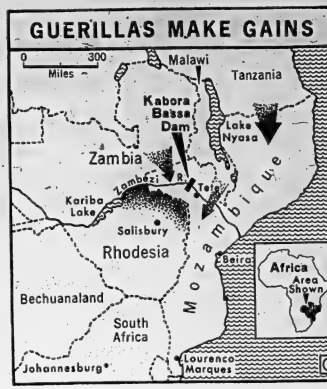
The National Farmers' Union wants processing companies in particular to have farm land holdings limited to 50 acres, just enough to grow test crops.

If not, such large concerns would eventually squeeze out small family farmers who cannot compete for land and have little effect, individually, on price.

Mr. Brooks puts it this way: "Farmers may organize to the point that they can continue to feed the country and make a profit.

"But if they don't and the economics change for the worse, we're going to need controls by government."

Without either, Mr. Brooks says, the outlook for potato farming is a dim one.



"Mother Nature will see to that."

African Rebels Active

Guerilla movements in southeastern Africa have made substantial territorial gains in the last year, directly affecting the economic future of at least one country, Rhodesia, where more whites are leaving than entering.

Though guerilla warfare is not new in the region, the movements have greater support from the African population than ever before.

Typical hit-and-run tactics are still employed but attacks now are stronger, more concentrated and better armed.

The map shows where guerilla activity is taking place, including northeastern Rhodesia, a few hours' drive from the capital Salisbury. This is farming country mostly occupied by whites. They have been instructed in how to fortify their farms against guerillas of Zimbabwe African National Union, but whites are losing ground and their population is growing smaller.

In neighbouring Mazambique, a Portugese colony, the Mozambique Liberation Front (FRELIMO) has been operating in areas near he Kabora Bassa Dam. Some FRELIMO threats have been mounted from bases in Zambia and Malawi, using Soviet and Chinese weaponry. The port of Beira has been attacked repeatedly. (CP Newsmap)

Maritime Poetry Is Not Regional

By JACK TRACY
The Canadian Press

To label Maritime poetry as regional is "stupid," say two University of New Brunswick professors of English in a new collection of poetry.

The volume, Ninety Seasons, is a collection of the works of 21 Maritime poets, edited by New York-born Robert Cockburn and Robert Gibbs, a native of Saint John, N.B.

Their selections range from verses by Kenneth Leslie, who at 82 is editing a magazine and setting poems to music in Halifax, to poems by Brian Bartlett, a 21-year-old UNB student.

Maritime poetry tends to be conservative and draws much of its inspiration from the past, say the editors in the introduction.

"Also, inevitably, our emotions and imaginations have been stimulated by the sea.

"One could perhaps go so far as to say that, judging by our poetry, we have come to farms with our place and our past more freely than Canadians elsewhere. . . .

"This, by the way, is not to imply that Maritimes poets are only 'regional' poets in the pejorative sense of that word. The charge of 'regionalism' is a stupid one. . . .

"What should be apparent from this collection is that Nova Scotians, Prince Edward Islanders, and New Brunswickers, no matter what their subject, have written and are writing poetry which is clearly in the mainstream of contemporary technique and sensibility."

All the poets included in the anthology still are living except Charles Bruce, who died in 1971 when the work was in its initial stages. More than half are under 40.

The anthology takes its title from Orchard in the Woods, included in Bruce's collection, The Mulgrave Road, which won the Governor-General's Award in 1951.

"We like Bruce's metaphor of the tough and weathered apple tree for our Maritime poetic tradition," say the editors. "We like it, for its suggestion of a climate of the mind and imagination as variable as our weather."

Ninety Seasons: Modern Poems from the Maritimes, edited by Robert Cockburn and Robert Gibbs; $4.95, 160 pages; McClelland and Stewart.

Early settlers to the United States brought with them a folk craft both practical and ornamental—quilt making.

The Pieced Quilt, a handsome 190-page book with 96 color plates and 59 black and white illustrations, is a colorful survey of the craft from the 1780s to the present day.

The author, Jonathan Holstein, and his associate, Gail van der Hoof, are the foremost authorities in the U.S. on quilts. They organized the first major museum exhibition of American quilts to be shown in major American and European museums.

While the book covers the whole subject of making pieced or patchwork quilts, the emphasis is on design. Visually exciting in line and color, these bedcovers from earliest days have been put together in abstract designs known as masterful modern.

In the light of today's revival of interest in hand crafts, this book recounts the fascinating history of 200 years of quilt making.

Lewis Says Housing Programs Of Help Only to Well-to-do

TORONTO (CP) — Stephen Lewis, leader of the Ontario New Democratic Party, said Monday that government hous- the well-to-do to own a home. "It's called housing action for the rich," he told the annual NDP meeting for Peel South constituency.

He noted that both Housing Minister Sidney Handleman and Laurice Park, president of Toronto Real Estate Board, had predicted that Metropolitan Toronto house prices soon would jump by five per cent.

If this is so, he said, the price of the average house in Toronto would decrease to $31,300 from $54,000.

"The monthly carrying costs on a $50,000 home work out currently to between $300 and $350, meaning that only families with annual incomes of $18,000 or more will be able to afford one of Mr. Handleman's bargains."

He said families whose income total $18,000 or more comprise less than 20 per cent of the population.

"Using the minister's own figures this means that at least 80 per cent of Metro families will not be able to afford their own home."

Mr. Lewis said families now that out of home ownership should be offered mortgages at rates they could afford. He called on the province to acquire land adjacent to major urban centres and lease the land to home buyers.

Text of Mr. Lewis's speech was released before delivery.

Seven Tons of Rock Fall

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (AP) — An estimated seven tons of rock and earth fell into the Niagara River gorge on Monday at Prospect Point near the American Falls. Nobody was hurt.

The rocks and dirt tumbled into the gorge on the United States side of the river near a walkway and dock used by Maid of the Mist sightseeing boats.

Minor earth slides, such as the one Monday, are common in spring along the gorge.

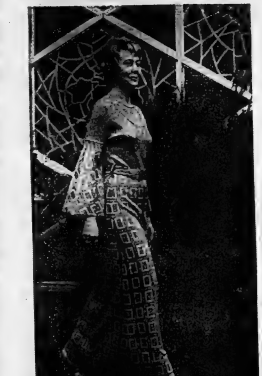
Hadassah Show Features Israeli Fashions

The "Israeli Originals" Fashion Show, sponsored by the Belleville chapter of Hadassah, is being prepared this week for its opening Wednesday, May 15, at Sons of Jacob Synagogue.

Co-covened by Carol Albert and Sadie Rose, the show features a wide circle of styles by Israeli designers.

Modelling the original creations flown, specially from Israel for the show, are local models Vera Morphy, Joan Horne, Marilyn Rollins, Jo Gist, Norma Fainbloom, Vivian White, Joy Woonacott and Alice Miller.



"Co-ordinating a show of this calibre is an exciting experience for everyone involved," says Becky Shulman, president of the Belleville chapter.

"It's a pleasure to participate in Belleville's cultural activity with this type of creative show", she said, "which also helps to support a number of charitable institutions in Israel, concerned with education, research, and rehabilitation of both Arabs and Jews."

Setting off the display of haute couture fashions will be a stage and runway decorated with rattan furniture, courtesy of Smith-Dominion Hardware.

Three performances are scheduled: a matinee at 1.30 p.m. and an evening show at 8.15 p.m. on Wednesday, May 15, and a final evening show at 8.15 on Thursday, May 16. Tickets are available at the door or by calling 968-5385.

MR. AND MRS. THOMAS SILLS

Sills — Reid

Holloway Street United Church was the setting for the April 13 wedding of Helen Stella Reid, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Reid of RR 2, Belleville, and Thomas Edward Sills, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Sills.

Rev. J.C. Kellogg performed the double ring ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a delustred crepe gown trimmed with Swiss lace. The scoop neckline was accented by a centre panel of crepe edged with Alencon lace. The lace sides and sleeves were hemmed with a scalloped overlay of matching lace, and the chapel train fell from the back waistline which had a large bow. The bride wore a finger-tip veil and carried a cascade of pink roses and white baby mums.

Mary Ann Sills, the groom's sister, was maid of honor, and the bride's sister Margaret Reid was bridesmaid. Both attendants wore pink gowns trimmed with lace collar and cuffs, and gathered bodices in a tie-back style. They wore wide-brimmed hats matching their gowns and carried white baby mums.

Flower girls were Christine and Bonnie Lynn Reid, the bride's sisters, wearing pink gowns trimmed with pink and white daisies. The bride's brother Kenny Reid was ring bearer.

The best man was Bill Fyke. The ushers were Douglas Reid, the bride's brother and Robert Sill's the groom's brother.

A reception and dance was held at the Hillcrest Community Centre. Since their return from their wedding trip to Niagara Falls, Mr. and Mrs. Sills have taken up residence at 38B Dundas Street.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hanna of Corbyville, and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Cross of Roslin.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an empire-waisted gown of chiffon with velvet embossed flowers over taffeta with a round neck, stand-up collar, long pointed sleeves. A long train fell from the back of the waist and a juliette cap held an elbow-length double veil. She carried a bouquet of red roses.

Cheryl Phillips was matron of honor in a mauve chiffon over taffeta gown with a high round neckline and stand-up collar and puffed sleeves. She carried a parasol of matching fabric trimmed with contrasting flowers and ribbons.

Gail McGiven, the bride's cousin was bridesmaid in a pastel green gown in the same style as the matron of honor's. Suzanne Hanna, the bride's sister was dressed similarly in pink. Both attendants also carried matching parasols.

He's Now a She

Journey From One Sex to Another

LONDON (CP) — The distinguished travel writer James Morris, at 47, the author of a dozen fine books and father of four, has made the world's most extraordinary journey—from man to woman.

Until recently a closely-guarded secret, Morris's sex change—completed physically on a surgeon's table in Morocco in 1972—now is the subject of a remarkable Autobiography written as Jan Morris.

In this book, Conundrum (published by Faber) Morris chronicles a lifelong conviction, despite a career as cavalry officer and foreign correspondent and despite an apparently idyllic marriage, that he was born into the wrong sex.

"Please God, make me a girl," he used to pray as a child, and adulthood only made him feel he was a woman in disguise.

No one, Jan says, has yet solved the conundrum of why some unlucky souls should feel this way.

But in Jan's case, so urgent was the drive in womanhood that if the choice came again and no surgical help were available, "I would take a knife and do it myself, without fear, without qualms, without a second thought."

The account of Jan's 40-odd years of quiet desperation, sometimes approaching thoughts of suicide, is the more extraordinary because the outward life of James Morris was the envy of his friends. It, had, as one recalled, "an aura of glamorous and successful masculinity."

Morris was the foreign correspondent who covered wars and revolutions for The Times and The Guardian, who scooped the world on Coronation morning in 1953 with his dispatch from Mount Everest on Sir Edmund Hillary's victorious climb.

Later, apparently secure in a devoted family life, he turned to writing travel books, notably an outstanding one on Venice, and embarked on a three-part history of the British Empire, not yet completed. All were hailed as stylish, brilliant evocations of place and atmosphere.

At fellow-journalist David Holden recalled, describing how Morris unveiled his secret by unbuttoning his jacket and showing hormone-induced breasts: "It was not exactly like hearing that the Queen was really Mao Tse-tung in disguise, but the effect was pretty shattering."

Jan herself, who has been at pains to find out precisely change in her writing except for a clearer focus on people rather than places, now has to make a conscious effort to remember what it was like to be "a man among men."

But she admits aspects of her earlier life like their attractions. Describing the male body in its prime as "a marvellous thing to inhabit," she writes: "I look back to those moments of supreme male fitness as one remembers champagne or a morning swim."

Then there was the clubby brotherhood of the 9th Queen's Royal Lancers—where James felt like "a spy in a courteous enemy camp"—and, not least, marriage to Elizabeth Tuckniss, daughter of a Ceylon tea-planter.

The marriage, Jan says, "had no right to work, yet it worked like a dream." Elizabeth knew of her partner's sexual doubts from the start and eventually helped him make the decision to shed his male identity. They were divorced and live in different parts of the country but are still, in Jan's words, "passionate friends."

Despite the fact that he fathered five children—one of the two girls she/Morris says physical sex was always subordinate to other sensual pleasures. He was baffled by the importance other men placed on it.

Not that he leaned toward homosexuality. The clumsy experiments of his schooldays look in the eye, and a wink for luck."

Recovery was painful and lonely in that foreign clinic but Jan felt elated, clean, and "by my own lights, normal." On her return to England, where she had two more operations to finish the job, Elizabeth greeted her "as if nothing is particular had happened."

Her first encounters "frankly and publicly sexchanged" were with the kindly Welsh villagers of Carmarvonshire, who had long known her as a man but now mostly "pretended not to notice."

Since then, she has lived in a Bath apartment, adapting easily to female gestures and movements, "absurdly elated" when a deliveryman pays her a compliment. Disturbingly, many woman readers will think, Jan immediately perceived the subtly inferior role the world says expects a woman to play... yet slipped almost complacently into acting—and sometimes becoming—a less capable person.

Dear Abby

Dad's Dinner Table Bickering Might Give Kids Ulcers

Dear Ann Landers: Are we a typical family, or is there something wrong at our house? For the last three weeks, dinner time has been a nightmare. (The ones before that weren't anything to brag about either.)

The problem is continual bickering between my husband and the children. He picks at them until everyone is in a surly mood and there is no geniality whatever. Its "get your elbows off the table; sit up straight; go wash your hands again, and get them clean this time! I realize manners are important, but he's so critical I could scream.

We will be having a pleasant conversation and suddenly my husband finds fault with one of the kids. Before long, it's a four-dimensional fight with banging of fists, yelling and people leaving the table angry.

I have read that mealtime is supposed to be a pleasant event, the one time in the 24-hour period when the entire family gets together to enjoy one another's company. But not at our house. How do other people handle it?—The Boxing Glove Brigade

Dear Glove: Rest assured he yours is not the only family that fights at the dinner table. But it certainly should not be a nightly event.

I suggest that you and your husband get some counseling. Children should be corrected, but obviously your husband needs instruction on how to go about it. When the dining area becomes a battle zone, it sets up patterns for indigestion and other stomach disorders that can plague children for the rest of their lives.

Check with the school principal or your family doctor about a competent counsellor. If you can't get your husband to go, go alone. Somebody in your family needs to understand the damaging effects of nightly dinner table fights.

Dear Ann Landers: I know you have a lot of men readers and this is one letter they won't be interested in, but please print it anyway—for the millions of women who will secretly bless you.

I need to know what to do about recipe instructions that James did it with a gun. Brassy dames do it with flattery and pressure. I am a nice guy. Most of my recipes are the result of experimentation and dogged striving for perfection.

What can be done about guests who literally demand a recipe right on the spot, as well as those who telephone for it, sowing day, with pencil and paper in hand, to "take it all down?"

Usually I give in, after extracting a promise that it will never be given to anyone. Later I learn my recipe has been passed around town to five city ers. Imagine my surprise when I found two of my original creations in the church auxiliary cook book.

Am I selfish to feel that my culinary achievements are mine and mine alone and no one should beat them? Signed, Pestered la Pasaie

Dear Pestered: Why blame your friends when the fault lies with you? "Sorry, no! are two perfectly respectable words, and if you don't wish to give a recipe, you should say so.

I've asked for recipes myself and found that most women are flattered to share them. I've also been told, "Sorry, no," and I accept that answer and think none the less of the woman who would prefer to keep her recipe to herself.

F. H.

Dear Mrs. F. H.: The philosophy of your poem sounds good, but our search has failed. We've tried to light. Who can send us a copy? (And, dear, how you are at it, reader, here are two more Christmas ones we have been asked for: "Sing Ye Bells from Oak Street Steeple", and "Oh, The Moon Shines Tonight on Dear Old Santa".)

Dear Doris: I was born in Canada of Scottish parents, and so were my sisters and brothers.

In the event that any one of us moved to China or Russia and had a child there, would that make the baby or Chinese or Russian? — Canadian, But?

Dear Canadian, But?: That is what dual citizenship is all about. If a baby of yours were born in another country he would be a citizen of that other country by birth, and yet a Canadian by reason of parentage.

What that baby has to do is make up his mind which citizenship he prefers, and he has to do this before his 21st birthday. If he doesn't, in some cases, he may find himself compelled to adopt a particular citizenship or deprived of the other. But this is a question for the Consular Division, Department of External Affairs, Ottawa, Canada.

Successful Living
Comment on Aging

Dear Doris: I want to comment on a column you had a while ago about old people. I believe they are such a wasted resource.

I believe we try to turn them into vegetables because they cause less trouble that way and I am terrified of that fate awaiting me.

At present I am going and attempting to get my 70 in the face of a reluctant husband and four kids still under 18 (one just four years old!)

I have applied for an award which would help a little but there are very few awards or scholarships available for 40-year-old part-time students. So I will either explode with joy or weep for a month if I win the $1,000. But I have to do something with my mind or I would really go crazy. — Gerry.

Dear Gerry: I agree about that "vegetable" moniker. It is an unfortunate description of a human physical body at a point where it seems to have lost all its mental powers.

Dear Doris: I have been trying to obtain a poem which was called something like The Room, or Wee Room, mentions the warp and woof and compares the weaving to our life experiences, all woven into a pattern. If anyone knows it I would be grateful to receive a copy. — Mrs.

Lougheed Threat Seen Major Issue

SARNIA (CP) — Ontario Treasurer John White said Monday that an implied threat by Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed not to sell Petrosar Ltd. here 170,000 barrels of crude oil a day might turn into a major regional issue in the July 8 federal election.

"But who it will help or hurt, I don't know," added Mr. White, who is also provincial minister of intergovernmental affairs.

In Sarnia to meet with area Progressive Conservatives and address a service club, Mr. White said the Petrosar issue—a proposal to ship Alberta oil via pipeline to Sarnia for processing by the petrochemical industry—"certainly might become a regional issue."

He said there is no easy answer to the Petrosar issue and added that he could understand Mr. Lougheed's desire to see more industrial expansion and development in Alberta.

Developing the petrochemical industry in Alberta "would be good for all of Canada and would take some of the strain off existing centres," he said.

"But existing facilities like those here have to be supported as Canadian industries."

Mr. White said that if the Petrosar issue becomes serious, "I suppose the federal government would have to arbitrate."

On another matter, Mr. White said the Ontario government would not force regional government on the area.

"If a country and its separated municipalities decide they want to restructure, we'll give financial aid and the benefit of our experience," he said. "But we won't force it on anyone."

Interest Increase Said Out of Date

BRANTFORD, Ont. (CP) — David Lewis dusted off some slightly-used New Democratic Party economic policies Monday, as he continued a three-centre preview of his election campaign.

He told the audience that the government's efforts to control inflation by raising the prime interest rate of the Bank of Canada are "out of date."

The most recent increase, raising the rate to 8¼ per cent—the highest level in history—was nonsense.

Mr. Lewis said the increase in the prime rate is inflationary in itself and will only serve to increase the woes of the average consumer by making credit more expensive than ever.

He said an NDP government would lower interest rates.

Dr. Lewis said the interest rate increase will work to the benefit of large corporations.

He said corporations, with billions of dollars in earnings, will make money with higher interest rates on their deposits. They usually raised their own credit internally and won't be hurt by the higher commercial interest rates.

He also criticized corporate profits, singling out steel companies, which recently announced a price increase, with particular attention.

He asked why the companies were increasing their prices, quoting figures to show that profits of the Steel Company of Canada Ltd. (Stelco), rose by 31 per cent in 1972, Dominion Foundries and Steel Company Ltd. (Dofasco) and Algoma Steel Ltd. also showed steep increases in profits last year, he said.

Mr. Lewis called for a two price system for basic commodities such as steel.

He said that a two-price system, similar to that which allows Canadians to purchase domestic petroleum prices at levels below world prices, would reduce the effects of inflation.

Companies should take what ever prices the world market will bear, but "Canadians don't have to bear high world price levels," he said.

Mr. Lewis also renewed the NDP's oft-repeated demand for a national prices review board to monitor prices and, if necessary, halt or roll back unwarranted price jumps.

He said these policies, combined with a cut in personal income taxes, an excess profits tax and lower interest rates will help buffer the impact of inflation on Canadians.

He also repeated his condemnations of the economic policies of the Liberals and Conservatives.

He said Prime Minister Trudeau's insistence that inflation is worldwide and can't be controlled domestically is only partly true. Government can help alleviate some inflation.

Mr. Lewis attacked the Conservative policy of wage and price controls, calling it "horrendous."

The idea of a freeze was unfair and unjust and would hit the wrong people.

Munro to Face Hostile Crowd

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Canadian Labor Congress invitation to have federal Labor Minister John Munro address the congress biennial convention ran into stormy opposition Monday but delegates decided after debate not to prevent the minister from speaking to their meeting.

The Congress had asked Mr. Munro to speak before the recent call for a federal election, but in view of the electoral campaign, many union members did not want to listen to a Liberal minister.

The labor movement has traditionally supported the NDP.

Many union delegates said they would give the labor minister a rough ride when he speaks today.

Harold Thayer, a machinist and member of the federal NDP council, said the congress had invited Mr. Munro as the federal labor minister and not as a Liberal.

Lewis Plans 10-day Tour

OTTAWA (CP) — New Democrat Leader David Lewis will make a 10-day tour of 10 cities starting next Sunday as he begins intensive campaigning for the July 8 general election.

A statement from his office Monday said the NDP leader will spend one day each in Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina, Vancouver, Edmonton, Saskatoon, Sudbury, Montreal, Halifax and Ottawa between May 19 and May 28.

It is expected he will attend nomination meetings in many of those centres, but details of his planned activities were not available.

Mr. Lewis will travel by commercial aircraft "in the early part of his campaign but later will charter a turboprop plane.

Stanfield Meets Organizers

TORONTO (CP) — Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield held a meeting Monday with his federal election campaign organizers.

Among those attending at a downtown hotel were Dalton Camp, former national president of the Progressive Conservatives, and party director John Laschinger.

Trudeau Puzzled

OTTAWA (CP) — "Puzzled, confused and bewildered" was the reaction of Prime Minister Trudeau's office Monday when told he owed back taxes on property he allegedly owns in southwestern Alberta.

A spokesman for Mr. Trudeau said there was no trace of a letter about the property and that if anyone could shed some light on it, "we'd be delighted."

"The prime minister pays his debts . . . if he owes anybody."

The property—a 50-by-328-foot lot in the hamlet of Patricia, about 100 miles southwest of Calgary—apparently was given to Mr. Trudeau as a joke in 1972.

But county authorities said Monday the joke is becoming a little stale because the prime minister hasn't paid any taxes on the land. He allegedly owes at least $3, possibly $6.

"All the guys come in and ask if Trudeau's paid up yet and I have to tell them 'no,'" said Council Reeve Tom Musgrove.

"So they want to know why the hell they aren't paying. His taxes would be about $3 a year and we think he likely owes for 1972, but we're not sure. But he is behind for 1973, the tax notice went out last fall."

Title to the lot was transferred by farmer Albert Ketchmark "just to show him, after the 19 Conservative members were elected from Alberta that, that he still had one friend in Alberta." Legal transfer was completed in January, 1973.

Mr. Ketchmark, who describes the land as virtually worthless, is well known as a Conservative in Patricia and the whole thing was meant as a joke.

But the spokesman for the prime minister said his "pretty complete correspondence files" contain no deed transfer, no tax bill and no letter from Mr. Ketchmark.

Collister Wants to Run

TORONTO (CP) — Ron Collister, CBC-TV's parliamentary reporter, said Monday he will seek the Progressive Conservative nomination in the Toronto federal riding of York-Scarborough now held by Revenue Minister Robert Stanbury.

If he wins the nomination at a meeting scheduled May 21, he will be required to resign from the CBC, he said a corporation spokesman.

A train with 40 engines and 1,860 freight cars.

A freight car is useless if it isn't going somewhere.

People like locomotive engineer Al Fuller.

Thinking that has given us an almost 40% improvement in on-time performance on certain key trains.

We improved this service through better planning and utilization of equipment.

We added 1,860 new pieces of rolling stock last year, and re-designed and modified another 4,900.

Then we bought 40 new freight locomotives at approximately $450,000 each.

And spent $11,300,000 on ties.

This kind of commitment is part of the spirit at CP Rail.

We believe good freight service is really a question of good people.

Whether they're forecasting trends, buying new equipment, or ensuring another on-time arrival.

At CP Rail we believe freight is people—like Al Fuller.

And we want to keep the spirit that has made us the world's largest investor-owned transportation system.

We're committed.

Elijah Performance Highlight of Musical Year

By EUGENE LANG

In the realm of liturgical music, two oratorios have held sway over all others ever since their premieres: performances are eagerly awaited with their listeners and inspiration of thought that has gone into their makeup by their creators.

Handel's 18th century masterpiece Messiah ranks foremost in this respect, but close behind it is the acknowledged chef-d'oeuvre of Felix Mendelssohn in his religious output: Elijah. Written on invitation from the managment of the Birmingham Festival, it was composed in the space of 10 months, although the composer had nurtured the idea of setting this biblical text to music for the past six years.

At the first performance on August 26, 1846, it was immensely successful, so much so that no fewer than eight of its numbers were encored at that time, and the composer was lionized by the public at large for this sacred composition so abundant in "the pure tones of sympathetic feeling and legitimate harmony".

From that day to the present, Elijah is one of the most enjoyed and rewarding tests in bel canto for the musical executants and their hearers. Thus it was no surprise to find the spacious interior of Bridge Street United Church filled to capacity last evening for the first of two performances that the Bridge Street United Church Choir (augmented) presented of this dramatic sacred opus under the direction of Robert H. Reid.

Four exceptional vocal soloists in the persons of Hazelanne Reid, soprano; Catherine Robbin, contralto; Larry Marshall, tenor and James Bechtel were on hand to sing the various arias, duets, trios, etc. that the composer incorporated into his large ecclesiastical canvas. Added to these vocal forces was an accompanying orchestra of 24 instrumentalists, along with the venerable S. Alec Gordon at the bread console, which made a total of no less than 101 persons giving of their musical finest in the grandiose rendition that Mr. Reid derived from them. In the three hours it required to produce this masterwork. Under the directorial tutelage of Mr. Reid, the resulting singing and playing was one of inspired confidence infused into every voice and instrument.

To fully comprehend the magnificence of the entire performance was to be present and succumb to the state of elation that transfixed the packed congregation in attendance. Then, the sentences that follow are a feble attempt to convey in words what transpired last evening through the medium of song. It would be easy to fill one whole page with our indelible stamps of appreciation, but this instead glean some of the salient moments that have remained in memory.

First to soprano Hazelanne Reid. Resilience in both volume and tempo capped her rendition of What Have I To Do with Thee? answered by bass in more measured treed. In Hear Ye, Israel, her vibrant voice sparkled with crystalline clarity of freshly spun Venetian glass. All of her solo work emphasized deep devodeness to every measure entrusted to her. Delightful was her singing at all times, and delighted were her listeners.

Contralto Catherine Robbin demonstrated a consummate command of a warm resonant hued voice in the lovely Woe Unto Them, while a most memorable characterization of O Rest in the Lord was delivered in meditative calm of suffused serenity.

The ringing tones from tenor Larry Marshall's tenor voice enveloped the church in his interpretation of Then Shall the Righteous Shine Forth. Voiced with touching sustenation was the placid If with All Your Hearts.

The title role of Elijah was the commitment of basso James Bechtel, who although suffering from an indisposition (a cold no doubt) gave of his best. His declamatory recitatives were brought forth with dramatic impact; even though at times a straining of upper notes was noticeable. A tranquil and subdued feeling in a sotto voice treatment was given to Lord God of Abraham, with orchestra overbalancing the soloist.—Gravity was the tone set in his conveyance of the dejected. It is Enough, set off by a full richness in quicker pulse in the middle section. Celerity of pace was reached in Is Not His Word Like a Fire? But clarity of enunciation was not to the fore — that cursed cold! We hope our basso will be fully regained in voice tonight.

In the solo quartet Cast Thy Burden upon the Lord, a very delicate shading of voice was attained over low brass and high strings in the orchestra. Resting on Arm Colebourne added he? vocal endowments to the other female soloists in an ethereal euphony in the angelic trio Lift Thine Eyes. The three voices wafted celestially with no enthusiasm of accompaniment.

Now to those stalwarts who make up the 100-voice Bridge Street Church Choir, and those who have spent untold dozens upon dozens of hours gratuitous service to Mendelssohn and Robert Reid. What can we say of your efforts? You shone forth in stellar appeal in every concerted number, from your opening granitic strength of Help, Lord! (backed by piercing trumpets and throb of drums) on to your grandiose regaling of Yet Doth the Lord See It Not, with controlled dynamics ranging from fortissimos to pianissomos, thence to your thrilling boisterous to and fro in Baal, We Cry to Thee, likewise in The Fire Descends from Heaven, ending in sombre grandeur, and bringing Part One to a climactic revelation in vocal torrents of sound in Thanks Be to God. with pulsing orchestra backing your voices aloft while S. Alec Gordon underscored all with full thunder from the organ. Shall we go on?

In Part Two, Be Not Afraid exhibited a fullness of vocalizing that pinpointed every singer, singly and collectively. Exultation spewed from your voices in your demonaic recreation of Woe Unto Him. Subdued was the contralton, tenor and basses as they upheld the hoovyed voices of sopranos against murmuring undulations in the orchestra, this in He, Watching Over Israel. The responses in the echo chorus Behold! God the Lord Passed By! were sung with tempestuous fervor, dwindling off into soulful solicitude. Entrances were always honed in with precision, an example in Then Did Elijah, the tenors and basses showing their mettle, albeit the entire choir bursting with vigor and vitality. And the final chorus And then Shall Your Light Break Forth — here all forces, vocal and instrumental were gathered together in a rendition of profound spontaneity and splendor that ricocheted from wall to wall and even to the elevations of the high vaulted ceiling.

The orchestral accompaniments of the 24-piece instrumental force were of great enhancement throughout, although there were many times when they were drowned out by the choir (20 and 30). Alec Gordon, as always displayed tact, finesse and subtlety in his accompaniments, such a magnificent culmination in last evening's performance by all and sundry can only be added to the many laurels that you have received in the past in other presentations. Your hours upon hours of indefatigable work and labors can give you and yours that your reward was a production, that was reservating in performance and revitalizing in faith.

Opening remarks of greeting were given by Rev. George Ward, minister of Bridge Street United Church.

A full house last evening and surely another packed congregation tonight.

One afterthought. This is not meant as a sacrilegious supplication, but when these great oratorios were given in the past, and I refer to this one in particular, applause was always allowed at the end of the performance. Mendelssohn was in fact nearly mobbed after the premiere by the elated hearers. Would it not be allowable for the participants to be justly rewarded for their vocal and instrumental expenditures over all these months to see as well as hear the adulation which they so rightly deserve? They have made great efforts for us, let us make one small effort in return and show them our appreciation, and if we did, I surmise that the decibel count will rise as high as the soprano can sing.

What's all this about no-fault car insurance?

There's a lot of confusion about no-fault car insurance. Even the term "no-fault" means different things to different people.

The Consumers Association of Canada* feels many people don't really understand what's involved. Professor Allen Linden†, Osgoode Hall Law School, York University, agrees. In response to this growing concern about no-fault, CIAG INSURANCE is offering you some information and a chance to voice your opinion.

What does "fault" mean in auto insurance?

The "fault" principle goes back beyond Biblical times. The idea of an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth, was adapted by English common law to mean the guilty must pay. In auto insurance it means if someone damages your car or injures you by negligent driving he must pay for your loss. Most motorists carry third party liability insurance to pay for losses they cause.

Over-the years insurance programs have developed which ignore fault. Workmen's Compensation, for example, pays for loss regardless of who's at fault. In traffic accidents, however, many people still feel the guilty should compensate the innocent.

The fault system theory is that careless drivers must pay for the accidents they cause and its purpose is to encourage drivers to be careful. Insurance premiums are calculated to cover the cost of claims for which drivers in different rating groups are responsible. According to a recent study the average liability claims cost for married males over 24 was less than half that for married males under 20. The liability coverage premiums for each group reflect this difference.

How about no-fault?

No-fault automobile insurance describes the insurance plan that exists when fault law does not apply to auto accidents. Motorists no longer rely on getting payment from another motorist for vehicle damage or injury but must provide their own protection. Each company pays its own policyholder regardless of blame.

Pure no-fault automobile insurance does not exist in North America. The so-called no-fault plans in some states and provinces are only partial no-fault programs.

By the way - don't confuse no-fault insurance with government insurance. Although limited no-fault coverage is part of government automobile insurance plans in western Canada, no-fault benefits have been offered by automobile insurance companies in Ontario for some years. CIAG was first to do so through additional coverage introduced in 1959.

What do we have now?

Motorists insured in Ontario have no-fault benefits broader than those offered in most other provinces and states and also have the right to sue a guilty party for loss.

No-fault death and disability coverage is part of all liability insurance policies issued in Ontario. It provides:

Total disability benefits for:

—an employed person (or unemployed person age 21 to 65 who has worked six of the previous 12 months) - 80 percent of wages up to $70 weekly, for up to 104 weeks, or for life if disability is permanent

—a principal unpaid housekeeper - $35 a week, for up to 12 weeks

Death benefits for:

—head of household - $5,000 (plus $1,000 for each living dependent after the first)

—a spouse - $2,500

—any dependent child - $1,000

Medical and rehabilitation benefits:

—up to $5,000 a person (four-year time limit) and up to $500 funeral expenses

If an injured person receives accident benefits from his insurance company and recovers from the responsible party, recovery is reduced by the benefits received. But future weekly payments are not affected.

What's wrong with our present system?

• The fault principle served well in the early years of the automobile. Now, with masses of vehicles, complex roads and higher speeds, even a split second counts and it's sometimes difficult to decide who's to blame and to what degree.

You might think it's easy: bad drivers cause accidents. Yes, they do. But good drivers cause accidents too. And bad weather and poorly designed roads and unsafe cars cause accidents. When we try to find the cause of an accident, we can't look only at the driver.

• Who is paid? Only the "innocent" can recover the full amount of their losses. Where responsibility is divided, others may recover part of their loss. Where a driver is judged responsible for the accident, he and often his passengers recover nothing from the other party. But they may suffer loss of wages, vehicle damage, serious injury requiring rehabilitation or a change in lifestyle - all from a momentary lapse of judgment. Their recovery is limited to accident benefits provided by their own policy.

• A committee appointed by the Ontario Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations in 1970 to inquire into claims adjusting practices concluded:

"The public simply does not understand the nature of insurance coverage (and auto insurance particularly) nor do they understand the manner in which claims are settled .... Most of the complaints which we received had to do with automobile damage claims and we think that much of the problem and public resentment which may exist against insurers results from the adversary system of resolving such disputes."

Ninety percent of accidents involve vehicle damage only and account for 70 percent of total claim payments.

• Consumerism, the law, and competition among insurance companies have not created satisfactory claims service because of a crucial gap in the system. When you are involved in an accident you deal with the other person's company - not the one you chose yourself.

• Many people feel automobile insurance costs too much. But how does it relate to other costs? In major metropolitan areas it can cost twice as much to park a car ($2-$3 per day) as to insure it; 15 hours and repair time at current rates of $10-$15 costs as much as the average annual insurance premium. People may be more concerned about paying automobile premiums because they feel they have nothing to show for it until they have an accident.

Why are people talking about no-fault?

• The Ontario government has announced its intention to extend the no-fault benefits now in existence.

• People hope that no-fault will reduce or control the rising cost of automobile insurance.

• Publicity in the United States about no-fault plans as the solution to insurance problems has spilled over into Canada and caused confusion. American problems are not quite-the same as ours. The U.S. legal system is different. Ontario automobile insurance costs are substantially lower.

1972 average annual premiums

Toronto	$192	Hamilton	$194	Kitchener	$170
Chicago	470	Buffalo	286	Akron	258
Brooklyn	576	Minneapolis	263	Sacramento	261

• Some people believe the government can solve all our automobile insurance problems with a no-fault monopoly.

• Times are changing rapidly - and so are social conditions. To keep pace, institutions are examined and modified more often.

• The Insurance Bureau of Canada has proposed a no-fault plan to pay for vehicle damage and a substantial portion of wage loss and out-of-pocket expenses for personal injury. The plan would maintain the right to sue for additional expenses and for pain and suffering only in cases of severe injury. The proposed coverage would pay medical and rehabilitation expenses up to $20,000 per person, lost earnings up to $250 a week for up to three years, and a death benefit of $1,000 for dependents under 18.

• The Ontario Law Reform Commission has recommended compulsory, no-fault automobile insurance and the abolition of court action to determine blame for traffic accidents. The Commission recommends that all traffic victims be compensated for medical expenses, lost wages and property damage, but not for pain and suffering.

Is no-fault the answer?

• The question of service: Will a change in the law improve insurer attitudes towards claimants? Taking the emphasis off the adversary fault system and having drivers deal entirely with their own insurers could help.

• The question of rights: The fault system permits compensation of the innocent victim not only for actual out-of-pocket expenses, but also for pain and suffering. It denies compensation to the person at fault in the accident. No-fault seeks to rehabilitate all victims regardless of fault and the extra funds are provided by eliminating the right to sue in whole or in part.

While some rights may be lost, no-fault would bring new rights more important than money compensation, like the right to rehabilitation and help in adjusting to the new situation created by an accident. Rather than focusing on the allocation of guilt and innocence, no-fault emphasizes solving the victim's problems.

• The question of responsibility: Advocates of the fault system suggest that when careless drivers must pay for the accidents they cause, they are more careful. No-fault supporters argue that a careless driver does not pay, but his insurance company does. They say because 95% of motorists are insured, merely making them theoretically responsible does not reduce accidents. Nor does an extra premium charge change the attitude of a person who has caused an accident.

• The question of cost: The cost of automobile insurance reflects the amount paid out for claims. No-fault will not reduce the number of accidents or the amount of damage - it's only a change in law.

Only entirely "innocent" traffic victims receive full payment for their injuries under the fault system. Under no-fault, more people will be compensated. If the guilty are also paid, the cost of insurance will rise. The Insurance Bureau of Canada and the Ontario Law Reform Commission recommend reducing or eliminating payment for pain and suffering and other "general damages" to provide funds for out-of-pocket losses of all injured motorists.

Under no-fault proposals, the young, single driver will pay relatively less in premiums and the middle-aged husband and father may pay slightly more. The reasons: the younger, unmarried person usually drives a lower-value car and has lower income. The older driver heals more slowly and because of generally higher income, must receive more and higher benefits. No-fault insurance rates for each rating group are based on the amount of benefits expected to be paid to each group.

Is there a single best answer?

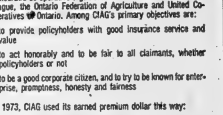
Please consider the following questions, then complete and return the coupon to indicate your views. CIAG will report the response to the Ontario Ministry of Consumer and Commercial Relations.

• Are you in favor of scrapping entirely the fault approach to vehicle damage claims? In other words, you and another driver would collect for vehicle repairs from your own insurers regardless of who caused the accident. This could avoid the delays that concern most claimants.

Premiums would reflect the benefits paid rather than who was at fault. If you're not satisfied with the service from your company you can change to another.

• Would you favor removing the right to sue for pain and suffering in the case of some or all injuries? Each injured person would be paid out-of-pocket expenses, and trained for other employment if disability prevented his resuming a previous occupation.

CIAG INSURANCE



CIAG, Ontario's leading automobile insurer, insures more than 320,000 Ontario vehicles. It is owned and controlled by democratic co-operative organizations - the Ontario Credit Union League, the Ontario Federation of Agriculture and United Co-operatives of Ontario. Among CIAG's primary objectives are:

—to provide policyholders with good insurance service and value

—to act honorably and to be fair to all claimants, whether policyholders or not —to be a good corporate citizen, and to try to be known for enterprise, promptness, honesty and fairness

In 1973, CIAG used its earned premium dollar this way:

I would prefer (for little change in premium):

- ☐ to keep the present insurance system in Ontario
- ☐ to have a broader no-fault plan (to be paid for vehicle damage and expenses of most injuries by my own insurer while keeping the right to sue for severe injuries)
- ☐ to have as complete a no-fault plan as possible (with my out-of-pocket loss paid by my insurance company regardless of who's at fault and giving up all right to sue)

My major concerns about automobile insurance are:

Hastings to Be Host For Education Week

Learning, co-operative community enterprise, is the theme proposed for education week 1975, when Hastings county will be host for the provincial opening ceremonies.

The theme was chosen by the steering committee as the one most representative of the kind of learning that goes on in this county.

The proposed theme must be presented to, and accepted by, the Ontario committee.

The date of Education Week has not yet been set, but it is expected to be April 20-26.

The 1974 Education Week committee wound up its business Monday afternoon at the separate school board office and chose officers for the 1975 host year.

Chairman will be Walter Cochrane and the 1974 chairman, Walter Rankowski will remain with the committee as co-chairman. Public school superintendent Waller Beever will be advisory Chairman.

Organization's in the community that offer alternate learning experiences, such as cadet corps, 4-H clubs, cubs and Scout will be drawn into Education Week. Presentations are planned to illustrate how schools use the community resources and how the community uses the schools.

For the first time, a student telecommuter will be formed, to obtain students' ideas, especially in the program area.

Keith Martin from the public relations department at Loyalist will head the subcommittee in charge of the opening ceremonies when the minister of education and other provincial dignitaries will be present.

Other subcommittees and their chairmen are: Hastings publication, Carly Vance; Hastings publicity committee, Jim Duncan; awards committee, Bill English; media committee, Bob Wylie; community events committee, David Smith; out-of school learning, Wayne Brooks; treasurer, Pat March and Ontario secretary-treasurer, Nancy LaFleur.

Education Week 1974 was operated on a budget of $3,078 with a surplus of about $300. The money was contributed by educational institutions, with the Hastings county board of education giving $1,200, the Hastings-Prince Edward separate school board giving $255 Loyalist College $175 and the Ontario School for the Deaf and Ontario Business College each giving $25. The amount was calculated on a per-pupil basis. The remaining money was the proceeds from the price of the breakfasts in Bancroft and Belleville.

Spring Construction

Now that the warm weather is finally here, construction in Belleville is evident throughout the city. At the Wallbridge-Loyalist-Highway 401 cloverleaf, work is nearing completion on the new Belleville Truck Centre and Loyalist Leasing.

This is the former Truck and Farm Supply Ltd., now located at Church and Dundas Streets. Here a crane positions one of the 75-foot steel beams that form the framework of the 16,000 square foot building.

Truck Garage Near Completion

Belleville Truck Centre and Loyalist Leasing, the former Truck and Farm Supply Ltd., now located at Church and Dundas streets will shortly move to a new location at the 401— Wall-bridge-Loyalist cloverleaf.

The new building will feature a larger parts department, added office space and a 12-bay drive-through garage.

This expansion will accomodate the growing demand for larger and heavier highway diesel truck and increasing demands of the truck leasing customer.

Morden-Guthrie Ltd., a local firm of engineers and contractors, will design and construct the building.

Construction has begun and the building will be ready for occupancy by July. All subtrades are from the Belleville area.

The all-concrete, fireproof building is 16,000 square feet in area and has no internal span. prestressed concrete roof slabs spanning 76 feet supported by concrete beams and columns. The walls are masonry and precast concrete ribbed panels.

Pay for Delay City Request

City Alderman Stu Meeks wants the provincial government to help pay municipal borrowing costs resulting from delay by the government in approving grants.

The request is contained in a motion presented to council two weeks ago and approved by council Monday after a minor amendment from Alderman Joe Cox.

The amendment called for interest on borrowing to be paid by the government until the grants were received.

The resolution on will be presented for approval at the annual conference of the Association of Municipalities of Ontario.

Whistle Bylaw Still Stalled

Belleville's long in the making train whistling bylaw which would rule out whistling at protected crossings, came up for discussion at city council Monday.

During the question period, Alderman Jack Ireland asked what was holding up passage of the bylaw which he said had been on the books for at least a couple of years.

All CN crossings in the city were now protected and the pedestrian underpass at Frank Street was now also completed.

"What's holding up the bylaw?" he asked.

City Solicitor John C. Miller said the draft bylaw was now with railway officials.

When passed by council, the bylaw would eliminate 90 per cent of the CN train noise (whistling and bells) except for emergencies.

Alderman Opposes Buying Parkland

Belleville city council will be asked to reassess its decision to participate in the proposed purchase of the 130-acre Potter farm west of the city which is proposed as a green belt and trailer park.

Alderman George Zegouras at Monday's council meeting introduced a notice of motion asking the city to withdraw approval of the purchase.

Instead of spending the money on the Potter property, the notice of motion asks that the first $50,000 of the city's money be used for municipal projects in the Hillcrest area or other parts of the city.

The notice of motion will be discussed at the next meeting of council.

Belleville and the township of Sidney have agreed to contribute toward the property purchase but Thurlow last week voted not to participate.

Store's Garbage Brings Complaint

A Church Street property owner, William C. Belch, is complaining about the way which the Loblaws Store on Bridge Street handles its garbage and wants the city to do something about the matter.

Mr. Belch complained to the Loblaws Toronto office in January and when there was no improvement wrote again in April.

Mr. Belch said there had been two fires in Loblaws garbage containers and that trucks picking up the containers had broken his fence.

A copy of Mr. Belch's letter was forwarded to Mayor Robin Jeffrey with a request for action.

Mayor Jeffrey said she had asked the litterug on the Loblaws parking lot. Council directed that a copy of the city's anti-littering bylaw be forwarded to the store with a request for action.

Operation Of Arena Expensive

Operation of the Belleville Memorial Arena is costing the average city family $5 a year whether or not they make use of the facility.

Alderman Joe Cox at council Monday noted that the 1973 deficit for the arena was $72,000 which worked out at about $5 per home owner.

The statement was made following the tabling of a report from city recreation director Lorne Williams who said the cost of arena operation for the eight-month ice season worked out at $27.64 an hour while the cost over the full 12-month period would bee $36.47.

And Alderman Ben Corke, city council's financial watchdog, noted that the actual deficit was even greater as no capital costs, no taxes and no city hall administration costs are included.

But he said similar situations existed across the country and were representative of municipal costs for facilities provided for a small percentage of the population.

Council Approves BUC Debentures

City council Monday gave approval to the Public Utilities Commission for issuance of $150,000 in debentures for expansion of the commission's electrical distribution and street lighting system but it feels the estimated interest rate is a bit optimistic.

The interest rate estimated by the commission in passing its April 9 resolution was 8¾ per cent.

"Where do you get money at 8¾ per cent today?" queried Treasurer Roger Forbes.

City Treasurer Frank Morrell agreed that the commission's estimate was an optimistic one, while Alderman Jack Ireland suggested that in view of present day soaring interest rates, if money could be found at 8¾ por cent, to let council know.

When Weather Right Fair Crowds Good

Rain drowned out the first spring Quinte Exhibition.

Directors were forced to throw the gates wide open Sunday as pelting rain turned the fairgrounds into a quagmire.

"Response to the fair was tremendous and we could have doubled normal attendance if we'd got a break from the weather," said manager Everett Gowsell.

Attendance on Friday, the first day of the fair, was 9,060. Only Saturday was a rain-free day and attendance peaked to 18,000, a higher than usual daily average.

Rain forced the cancellation of the Carlsberg eight-hitch wagon Sunday night and the demolition derby. The queen of the Fair competition was moved indoors. Miss Kywell Jones from Bermuda, a student at Ontario Business College, was proclaimed queen and the runner-up was Miss Heather Lowry, RR 2, Frankford, a student at Bayside Secondary School.

The grand champion of the dog show was a whippet owned by James M. Carpenter and Alan Chambers of RR 2 Trenton, members of the Belleville and District Kennel Club.

Grand champion doe in the goat show was owned by S. McLean and the grand champion kid was owned by D. Johnston.

Vandals Smash Store Windows

Belleville police are investigating a series of incidents of malicious damage in which windows were smashed in four seperate downtown business locations during the night yesterday.

Police Chief Douglas Crosbie reports that officers on regular foot patrol discovered broken windows at the offices of the Canadian Cancer Society, on Bridge Street East, at the Bank of Montreal on Front Street, at the Public Sewing Machine Shop on Front Street, and at the Commercial Credit offices on Pinnacle Street.

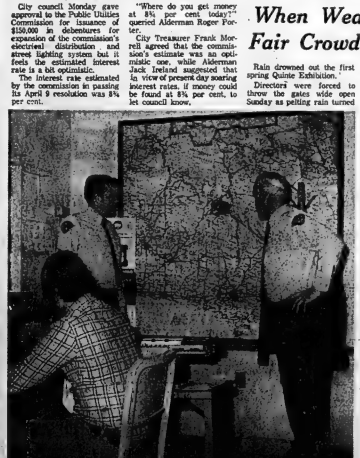
Several youths were seen in the vicinity of the buildings when the broken windows were discovered between 10.47 p.m. and 3.10 a.m., but police have not yet laid any charges.

The windows were valued at more than $300 the police chief said.

Queen's Students Continue Service

Queen's University law students are again providing free legal services to the Belleville community through the United Community Services building at 246 William St.

Five students, operating under an Opportunities for Youth grant will run the office Mondays through Thursday, and Monday and Thursday evenings.



Their purpose is to provide legal aid service to people who can't afford a lawyer or who can't get a legal aid certificate.

The students plan to act as assistant duty counsel in some courts, will take certain cases that fall under their jurisdiction to court and will be available at the office to answer queries of a legal nature.

Past experience, they say, proves that the majority of queries concern landlord and tenant relationships. The cases they most frequently take to court are minor traffic violations. They also receive frequent queries on family law.

The Queen's legal service had operated in Belleville for two years. In the winter months the students were available at the UCS office two nights a week. One of the terms of the OFY grant is the students' undertaking to continue the service on a night-time basis throughout the next school year.

The five students working in Belleville this summer are Brian Law, Larry Goldapple, Rein Kao, Charles Balme and Jim Smith.

Police Week Tours

Police Week got under way throughout Canada yesterday and officers at the Belleville detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police, like many of their counterparts elsewhere, prepared to conduct visitors on tours of their North Front Street headquarters. Cpl. Jim Healey and Cpl. Doug Rutledge spent part of their day yesterday showing the first visitors of the week around the Belleville detachment. One of the highlights of the tour was an introduction to the radio control room and civilian radio operators, Bill Paterson and Brent Daniels. Officers at the OPP detachment will be glad to show visitors around the detachment anytime during the day all this week.

The amount of the Lightfoot bid was for $242,705 and was the lowest of three tenders received.

In addition to reconstruction of the street, the contract also covers installation of sanitary sewers and private drain connections between John and Ann Streets.

Ottawa Here We Come

Approximately 20 employees of the London Life Insurance Company left the Quinte Mall by bus yesterday afternoon to go to the company's 100th Birthday party in Ottawa. The party goers all sported buttons that claimed "We don't feel 100" and unfurled a banner that shouted the same message before they boarded the bus.

Ashbee Plays Waiting Game

PHILADELPHIA (CP) — Defenceman Barry Ashbee of Philadelphia Flyers said Monday all he can do is wait to see if the vision in his injured right eye will return to near-normal and permit him to play in the National Hockey League again.

Ashbee watched his team-mates from the stands as they defeated Boston Bruins 4-1 Sunday to take a 3-1 lead in their best-of-seven Stanley Cup final.

He was struck in the right eye by a puck during an April 28 semifinal game with New York Rangers.

Doctors allowed him to attend Sunday's game on the condition that he be protected from being bumped or jostled by the crowd. He watched the game from the private box of Ed Snider, the Flyers' board chairman.

"I can see out of both of the sides, but I can't see directly in front of me," said the 30-year-old defenceman. "It's just a waiting game now."

"For two days it really bothered me," Ashbee said about his injury. "I didn't let anybody know, but I lay there all day so I couldn't help but think about it.

"The most important thing now is getting sight back in the eye. I've kind of gotten over not playing."

His playing future will be determined by how the eye heals. He says the eye throbs and doctors are worried about pressure behind it causing glaucoma.

"They've told me I won't get back full vision in the eye, but they'll try to get it back to reading level," Ashbee said, noting that reading sight would be sufficient to play hockey again.

"If I'm OK, sure I'm going to play again. I'd be crazy to quit. I felt better this year than I have the last three or four years because things like the all-star team happened to me this year that never happened before."

Bears Square Series Showdown Tonight

OTTAWA (CP) — "It all boils down to who wants it most," said Smiths Falls coach Glen McKenney after his team defeated Selkirk, Man., Steelers 5-4 in overtime Monday night to tie the best-of-seven Centennial Cup junior hockey final 3-3.

The seventh game will be played tonight.

"We've got a little more than they've got. They're going to have to cancel another airplane flight," said McKenney after the wild finish.

The Steelers led the series 3-1 at one stage and Selkirk coach George Dorman had stated that it was only a matter of time before his club wore down the Bears.

"We're going to try to tighten up a bit in the final game and play like we did in the first game," Dorman said Monday. "It will be basically a feeling out game with both teams playing cautiously."

Defenceman Garry Nichol won the game for the Bears at 5:43 of overtime after Steelers star Gord Kalumiak scored with only 23 seconds remaining in regulation time to tie it 4-4. It was Kalumiak's second goal of the game.

Nichol's blueline drive beat goalie Andy Stoesz on the right-hand side after Brian Johnson won the faceoff in the Steelers' zone. Smiths Falls had four shots in the 10-minute overtime period compared with two for Selkirk.

The Bears outshot the Steelers 36-22 during the 70 minutes of play.

Cooch Guidolin Is Troubled But Not Ready to Concede

PHILADELPHIA (CP) — Coach Bep Guidolin of Boston Bruins says he is troubled by the attitudes of some of his players toward their Stanley Cup final against Philadelphia Flyers, but Guidolin isn't ready to concede the cup to the West Division National Hockey League champions.

The Flyers hold a 2-1 lead going into tonight's fourth game of the best of seven series—a game that will be televised nationally in Canada by the CBC beginning at 8:05 p.m. EDT.

"If we win the hockey game here, we'll win the cup," Guidolin said Monday. "They won't beat us again in Boston."

A Boston victory here would reduce the series to a best-of-three affair, with the fifth and seventh games—if a seventh is necessary—on the Bruins home ice.

But while he was expressing his theories on what a victory in the fourth game would do for his club, Guidolin was visibly upset by a couple of other factors.

One was the fact that none of his regulars showed up for an "optional" practice Monday after losing 4-1 to the determined Flyers here Sunday afternoon. Only 11 players showed, and only two of them—centre Andre Dupont and defenceman Darryl Edestrand—had played Sunday.

"The only guys I didn't want to see there were (Bobby) Orr and (Gilles) Gilbert," Guidolin said.

Guidolin said that during the semi-final series against Chicago Black Hawks and with the Bruins trailing 2-1 at times, he had called a similar workout after the second Boston defeat and all his pals had shown.

Guidolin also said he was upset by the current slump of all-star centre Phil Esposito against the Flyers. While he has eight goals in 13 playoff games, Esposito has scored only one of those against Philadelphia.

Asked if he could explain his sudden lapse, Esposito has returned all queries with a brusque "no comment."

Guidolin was asked if the big centre was hurt.

"Hurt? Only his feelings," the coach replied.

The Boston coach said the Flyers went all out to stop Orr in Sunday's game and Philadelphia coach Fred Shero said the Philadelphia club had accomplished the task by leaning on the all-star defenceman.

"If certain players don't do their job properly everything goes on one player—Bobby," Guidolin said. "But if the big line is going, there is no way they are going to be on Orr."

Boston's big line is centred by Esposito with Ken Hodge and Wayne Cashman on the wings.

Guidolin said the Bruins must respect the opposition because Philadelphia players were and a "system going."

"Here's a guy (Shero) who coached in the minors and was a success and his players believe in him. It shows you don't need an abundance of talent, just a bunch of guys ready to work hard."

In sharp contrast to the Bruins, the Flyers held a four-long workout Monday. All were absent, while the Flyers attended. Both coaches said a few words to the gathering.

"It's nice to see the Philadelphia Flyers here today," was Guidolin's wry comment. "And my players at the race track."

Shero professes surprise when anyone finds its hard to believe a so-called expansion team can be leading the series against the powerful Bruins.

"I don't consider this team (the Flyers) an expansion team," the coach said. "I told the players at the start of the season I didn't want to hear the word mentioned again."

Guidolin refused to use the Flyers' home ice as an excuse for Sunday's defeat.

"It doesn't matter where you play," he said. "It's not like baseball where the home team gets the last inning. There is no last inning in this series. We just got to get a better second and third effort, hustle our butts off."

PADRES SHUFFLED

SAN DIEGO (AP) — San Diego Padres of baseball's National League called up pitcher Dave Tomlin and outfielder Rod Gaspar from their Hawaii farm club in the Pacific Coast League Monday and returned second baseman Glenn Beckert to the active list. To make room for the trio, they sent infielder Dave Hilton, outfielder Bernie Williams and pitcher Gary Ross to Hawaii.

Injured Cougar Predicts a Win

CHICAGO (CP) — Lost in the unexpected drive of Chicago Cougars into the World Hockey Association championship round has been the fate of Brian Joseph Glenwright.

The 24-year-old left winger from Windsor, Ont., sits on the sidelines, never missing a Cougar practice or game as the team in the best-of-seven final with the World trophy and the $30,000 that goes with it.

The Cougars dropped the opening game 3-2 Sunday night to Houston Aeros, but the loss hasn't dampened their spirits for Wednesday night's second game in the best-of-seven final.

"We showed in that third period that we can play with them," Glenwright said Monday after skating with the Cougars. "Their power play was what beat us in the first period.

"We're not worried. I don't think they can skate with us for 60 minutes if we keep at it and, besides, it seems like club can't all the way.

"I had this fantastic start, but then my back started getting me down. I was looking forward to a really good year, but injuries forced me to miss a week right after the season started and then two weeks again before Christmas."

"I had two discs that were ruptured and apparently had been for about three years. Ever since time I started they were putting more pressure on the nerve and that was causing the pain."

Chicago playing-coach Pat Stapleton decided it was time the 6-foot-3, 210-pound former Kitchener junior Ranger had his back examined.

"They got it just in time," the doctor said that if I had taken either solid hit on the back I have ended up paralyzed."

Glenwright, signed as a free agent by the Cougars, had an operation and now sits watching for his team-mates.

He is confident they can go

Mets' Relief Pitcher Turns Starter

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Bob Apodaca came out of the bullpen Monday night to give New York Mets some much-needed relief . . . as a starting pitcher.

If he has his way, he'll be heading back, as soon as possible, to the bullpen.

The 26-year-old rookie right-hander, whose seven previous major league appearances were all in relief, worked five innings to pick up his first victory as best Reds downed San Francisco 4-1 and Atlanta defeated St. Louis Cardinals 5-3. He allowed six hits and two runs and left when he developed a blister on his pitching hand.

"I felt strong, but I wouldn't like to be a regular starter," said Apodaca. "I really prefer relieving because you can get in there maybe three or four times a week."

Elsewhere in the National League, Los Angeles Dodgers beat Houston Astros 8-4, Cincinnati Reds downed San Francisco Giants 4-1 and Atlanta Braves shaded San Diego Padres 7-5.

Chicago, Montreal, Philadelphia and Pittsburgh were not scheduled.

Apodaca's pairing with St. Louis ace Bob Gibson was supposed to be a mismatch. But Cleon Jones and Jerry Grote lagged Gibson for two-run homers and Harry Parker pitched four strong innings in relief.

Apodaca's control was sharp all night. He walked only one batter and struck out six batters, walked six and, said Rangers' manager Billy Martin, "threw the greatest ball. He gave to his batter and never goes to the resin bag."

Larry Hisle doubled in two runs and Glenn Borgmann singled for two to carry Minnesota past the White Sox.

Hisle's fifth-inning shot scored Jerry Terrell and Rod Carew, both of whom beat out infield hits, then the Twins struck for three runs in the seventh on two walks, an error and Borgmann's single, and two more in the ninth on Jerry Terrell's triple. Ken Henderson hit a two-run homer for Chicago in the eighth.

Vida Blue checked Kansas City on six hits—one of them Hal McRae's homer—while his Oakland team-mates battered the Royals with 19 hits, including a two-run single by Ray Fosse in a four-run sixth inning and a two-run double by Ted Kubiak in a three-run eighth.

The A's' fifth victory in a row moved them into first place in the American Division, one-half game ahead of the White Sox.

Jimmy Wynn's two-run single was the highlight of a five-run fifth inning and he drove in another run with a sacrifice fly for the Dodgers.

Sebastien Angel Messersmith scattered eight hits and picked up his fourth victory as the Dodgers widened their National League West division lead to 3½ games over the Astros. Houston's runs came on homers by Cesar Cedeno, Doug Rader and Ollie Brown.

Johnny Bench drilled his sixth home run of the season and Don Gullett and Pedro Borbon teamed up to pitch a six-hitter as the Reds whipped the Giants.

Tony Perez followed Bench's homer with a triple and scored on a Merv Rettenmund's grounder. Gullett surrendered a homer to Gary Matthews in the fifth but the Reds added two runs off Jim Willoughby in the seventh when Cesar Geronimo singled, Pete Rose doubled him home and Joe Morgan singled Rose across.

Despite their fourth victory in the last five games, the Reds remained in fourth place, 6½ games behind the Dodgers.

Dusty Baker drove in four runs with three singles and a homer for the Braves, offsetting San Diego homers by Willie McCovey and Dave Roberts. It was the Padres' sixth consecutive loss.

San Diego shortstop Enzo Hernandes made two errors, his first in 23 games, leading to a pair of runs for Atlanta and Rich Morales, who replaced him in the seventh inning, made an error preceding Baker's third RBI single.

One Bad Pitch And It's Gone

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

"It was a bad pitch," John Ellis said happily.

"It was a bad pitch," Luis Tiant said sadly.

It was a pitch that ended up in the left field seats, a three-run homer by Ellis in the first inning, a booming shot off Tiant that sent Cleveland Indians on their way to a 4-1 victory over Boston Red Sox Monday night.

In the rest of the American League, Milwaukee Brewers edged into first place in the tight East Division by beating Baltimore Orioles 9-4, California Angels belted Texas Rangers 8-4, Minnesota Twins turned back Chicago White Sox 7-5 and Oakland As shellacked Kansas City Royals 11-2.

John Lowenstein opened for the Indians with a single and Buddy Bell reached base on an error by Boston second baseman Dick McAuliffe before Ellis slammed his second homer of the year, handing Tiant his fifth loss in seven decisions.

"It was a bad pitch," Tiant said. "But you can't win without getting runs. We haven't been getting any runs recently."

McAuliffe's sacrifice fly gave Boston a run in the second inning, but the Indians got it back in the seventh on Dave Duncan's sacrifice fly.

Manager Ed Crandall, whose Brewers moved into first with a .519 percentage, just .002 ahead of Baltimore, .003 in front of Cleveland and .005 ahead of the idle New York Yankees, said several clubs will be involved in the East race all season.

Nine Milwaukee players drove in the nine Milwaukee runs, with Dave May, Bobby Mitchell and Johnny Briggs slugging homers to support Ed Sprague who pitched six innings in his first start in nearly two years to get his first victory as a Brewer.

"Sprague will get a lot of pitching," Crandall commented. "He'll be our fifth starter. We had need of another starter and it looks like he's it."

Light-hitting Charlie Sands and Paul Schaal drilled homers for the Angels in handing Texas its eighth loss in nine games. Sands hit his three-bagger in the second inning and Schaal belted a two-run shot that highlighted a four-run fourth against Jim Bibby.

Bill Singer scattered six hits, struck out six batters, walked six and, said Rangers' manager Billy Martin, "threw the greatest ball. He gave to his batter and never goes to the resin bag."

Larry Hisle doubled in two runs and Glenn Borgmann singled for two to carry Minnesota past the White Sox.

Hisle's fifth-inning shot scored Jerry Terrell and Rod Carew, both of whom beat out infield hits, then the Twins struck for three runs in the seventh on two walks, an error and Borgmann's single, and two more in the ninth on Jerry Terrell's triple. Ken Henderson hit a two-run homer for Chicago in the eighth.

Vida Blue checked Kansas City on six hits—one of them Hal McRae's homer—while his Oakland team-mates battered the Royals with 19 hits, including a two-run single by Ray Fosse in a four-run sixth inning and a two-run double by Ted Kubiak in a three-run eighth.

The A's' fifth victory in a row moved them into first place in the American Division, one-half game ahead of the White Sox.

Warns of 'Dear Price'

Stapleton Cautions WHA

CHICAGO (CP) — The World Hockey Association is on a "dear price" against the Soviet Union in gain credibility, says Pat Stapleton, Chicago Cougars' player-coach.

And the league may have to pay the price without the services of Stapleton, a first-team all-star in the WHA this season.

Stapleton, busy preparing his Cougars for Wednesday's series and game in the best-of-seven WHA final against Houston Aeros, says he's not too interested in playing against the Russians in September.

The WHA is to play an eight-game series against Soviet Union and won the Canada Cup last season.

The league, whose aim is to develop Canadian too Lall talent, made one concession to the Lords, it will allow quarterback Tony Passender, an American, to play for the club.

The league, which will start play the first week in August, also has North Bay Tiger-Cats, Sudbury Spartans and Sault Ste. Marie Steelers.

says his "allegiance is to the Chicago Cougars."

"I get paid to coach this club and it would not be fair to have me away at that time of the year," he said in the Cougars' dressing room. "It wouldn't be fair to the owners or the guys in this room."

Stapleton is in a different situation than he was with the National Hockey League team in 1972, being the Cougars' coach.

"It's not that I wouldn't enjoy meeting the Russians again, but it's a case of what's good for the league may not be good for this team."

The Sarnia, Ont., native concedes, however, that if the Cougars' management "decides it might be better for me to play, well, that's their decision."

Stapleton says the WHA may be making the same mistake the NHL did by playing the series in September.

"When they drop that puck it'll be like the seventh game of the NHL," he said. "The Russians were beaten once. They'll be ready this time."

He suggests the WHA has enough good players to produce a solid opponent for the Russians, but adds that they should serve enough training.

"The team would be much better off if they could play enough games beforehand. They should be allowed to play a few games against the Swedes and the Czechs before dropping the puck against the Russians."

London Lords Join NFC

NORTH BAY, Ont. (CP) — London Lords have been accepted as members of the Northern Football Conference for the 1974 season, the league announced during the weekend.

The NFC is the only remaining senior amateur league in Ontario and London is the second club from the now-defunct Ontario Rugby Football Union to be admitted to the league.

Bramalea Satellites played in the NFC—and won everything—last season.

Didn't Anyone Notice Solid Effort by Barber?

If he got the credit he deserved, we didn't see it in the printed word. There was no mention of his name in the post-game wrapup on television.

But from our vantage point, the member of the Philadelphia Flyers who impressed with his diligent effort in that 4-1 Sunday win over Boston Bruins, was winger Bill Barber.

It probably won't make much difference to Barber that he rates raves from this corner. Unless he gets his fists and chips wrapped on a copy of today's Isteil, sometime in the future, and happens to glance at this page while he's munching on lunch, he'll never known in what lengths his fame has spread.

The 6-foot, 190 pounder from Callander, Ont., completing only his second season in the big top, has been a solid plus for Philly. And he won't be 22 until July 11.

Flyers are noted for their hustle and with so many of them giving it the big shot in this series, it's hard to overlook a body or two when he praise flows.

However, we find it hard to look back on the Sunday match without remembering the guy wearing sweater No. 7. No, not Boston's 7, we'll get to him later.

Barber didn't score a goal in the weekend tilt but he did draw an assist on Flyers' third goal which was accounted for by Orest Kindrachuk.

What Barber did contribute to the cause was a tenacious display of forechecking. Sure he had plenty of company. What we're saying, is that the guy was a step ahead of them all and somehow managed to do it without even an honorable mention from the blokes who hand out the plaudits.

So here's a small but hearty "Well done Bill Barber!"

Who's No. 7 for Boston?

Come on, now. He's the guy who wears such a pained expression whenever anyone has the audacity to check him. Yes, Phil Esposito.

And while we're on the subject of hurt feelings, or whatever, that may just be the reason Bobby Orr's appearance on Maple Leaf Gardens' ice is usually greeted with a rousing chorus of boos. He's another superstar who gives this observer the impression no one is supposed to even entertain thoughts of knocking him down, never mind attempt to carry out the plan.

Excellent hockey players they are but it would appear they have the idea opposing players should bow first, and then get about the business of playing the game.

Flyers have demonstrated they aren't about to pay homage to Boston's self proclaimed royalty.

All the more power to Fred Shero's troops.

Call it a revolt of the peasants if you like. Flyers look quite capable of unseating Bruins, without first asking permission.

SLICES — Clayton and Mooty Drouillard may not sponsor at the all-star hockey level but it's a cinch the youngsters who were members of the Clayton's TV squad in the BMHA's minor atom division, felt they were something special recently.

"The kids didn't do all that well on the season but the sponsor really made them feel No. 1 by treating them to a meal at China Village," explained a parent.

Trenton Minor Hockey Association has its annual meeting and election of officers scheduled for Wednesday. The session is to start at 8.30 p.m. in the Community Gardens' auditorium.

Toronto Globals who will be here Saturday for an exhibition doubleheader with Rollins Construction of the Quinte Fastball League, dropped a pair of Ontario Fastball League pre-season matches to Oshawa Tony's on the weekend.

Tony's trimmed Globals 11-0 in the first game but the Toronto team came back in the second half of the twin bill with lefty Pete Landers and he was within one inning of blanking the Oshawa club.

Oshawa got to Landers for all its runs as the final frame while slipping past the visitors 3-2.

Wayne Maki Dead at 29

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — Wayne Maki, who took part in one of the more vicious stick-swinging duels in National Hockey League history died in hospital, Sunday.

Maki, 29, was forced to retire from Vancouver Canucks in 1972 because of a brain tumor. He had been working as an apprentice electrician since that time.

Maki, at the time trying to make the NHL with St. Louis Blues, and Ted Green, then a defenceman with Boston Bruins, became involved in the ugly incident in an exhibition game in Ottawa, September 20, 1969.

The result was, Green suffered a fractured skull that almost ended his career; both players were handed stiff sentences by the NHL and both faced criminal charges. Maki was acquitted of common assault and Green of assault causing bodily harm.

Although Maki went on to play two seasons for the Vancouver Canucks, 1970-71 and 1971-72 and part of the next season before going into hospital because of the illness that later killed him, it was that incident which most fans remember.

Crediting his success to hard work, Maki lived in Vancouver with his wife and two small children.

"I think the key to success in the NHL is to keep in top shape 12 months of the year," he once said.

"That's why I like living in Vancouver so much. There are plenty of facilities available to a guy in pro sports."

At the start of the 1972-73 season, Maki had trouble scoring goals. Late in November, he began complaining of headaches and discarded the helmet he had worn since joining Canucks.

He was sent home from a road trip, entered hospital and was operated on for a brain tumor. He never played another NHL game.

His brother, Chico, is a regular with Chicago Black Hawks.

Rollins Aiming for Repeat

By ALAN TEEWORTH
Sports Staff
FIRST OF A SIX PART SERIES

Although the name of the league has changed, Rollins Construction should still be the team to beat in this year's softball circles in the Quinte area.

The league has been renamed the Quinte Fastball League from its former title of the Commercial Softball League, but Rollins have not changed their pennant winning and playoff champion combination much from last season.

They have lost some from the 1973 roster due to work commitments and summer schools, but have added a few top rate players to more than compensate.

They possess one of the most effective infield staffs in Ontario, a move then adequate outfield, and a battery that spells trouble for hitters.

The infield, with the exception of first base, has been together since their junior days. Ralph Plane is the exception on first base. The rangy Plane can handle the job very well, having been converted from the outfield.

At second base is Dale Duvall. Possessing a strong arm and a heavy bat, Duvall will play the right side of the infield with not trouble at all.

Shortstop and third base are the real strong points on the team, with possibly the most sought after players in the league both in Rollins' lineup in the persons of Paul Goodfellow and Wayne McTaggart.

The pair — former baseball pitchers — have strong throwing arms and are also among the top batters, season after season. Both hit for the average as well as cranking the long ball quite regularly.

In the outfield, Rollins' have five available for duty should the need arise. Glenn Carleton, Carl Boomhower, Ralph Boomhower, Dave Lott and Doug Adams are all ready to take to flagging down the longer balls served up by the opposing batsmen.

The receiving end of the battery is one area of difference from last season. Marv Stacey has moved over from Deseilin Motors to the Construction men, and will provide not only top notch defensive skills, but also a threat at the plate for the Red Sox as well as the consistent average. Work in Toronto has forced Dave Akey to step out of the position.

Pitching also leaves little to be desired, with Ken Demille and Ted Wale back for another season on the mound.

The duo combined for over 250 strikeouts in their contests last season, with each picking up a no-hitter. Wale led the list with three of the sparkling games, two in tournament action, while Demille had one in regular league play.

Rain has hampered the team's workouts, as it has all clubs in the league, but, word has it Demille, along with Duvall, are in the best shape they have been in, in several seasons.

With the players in shape so, and the talent on the Rollins squad, the team should have no trouble in repeating as the QFL champions for yet another year.

Bob Boyle, probably more known for his hockey talents in the area was agreed in coach the team and should help in the discipline of the club.

The team manager is Mal Eckford, who will get help in organization from Plaza.

Rollins open their 15-game schedule against Trenton Legion Men's Wear in the second game of the doubleheader on the first night of the season, next Monday. The first game at the Aberdeen commences at 7 p.m., with the Ellis Juniors taking on Howard and Robert Printing, while the Rollins-Auger game starts at about 8:45.

Globals To Meet Rollins

The Globals are coming.

The Toronto Globals, of the Ontario Fastball League, that is.

They will play Rollins' Construction of the Quinte Fastball League in an exhibition doubleheader, with the first game scheduled to begin at 1 p.m.

Two of the more familiar names in the lineup will be Pete Landers and Bo Burke.

Burke will be known to local softball fans from the many games he has played in Belleville in tournament action from the Oshawa Falcon TV team.

HUDDLESTON, William — In loving memory of a dear husband who passed away May 9, 1972.
Sadly missed and time is not healing,
And I am sitting all alone,
In my heart there comes a longing,
If you could only come home for a while.
I miss you more than anyone knows,
As the time passes so the loneliness grows.
The years I shed can be wiped away,
But the ache in my heart will always stay.
Wishing today as I wished before,
That God took me instead of you.
—Loved and missed by wife Betty.

CHISHOLM — In fond and loving memory of our sister Helen Mae who passed away May 14, 1973.
You suffered much in silence,

He knew your time was through,
He took you gently home,
To be only parts the best.
—Loved and remembered by sister Elsie, Clifford and Margaret and family.

A WORD TO THE WISE!

Mortgage funds have virtually dried up! What little is available is at extremely high rates! This is going to reduce building to a trickle and what is being built will not only have a high mortgage but a higher price. There are a few homes now under construction both in the city and in the country. These have 10% mortgages already arranged. If you want a house this year, a call to our office will get the smartest move you will make this year.

JUST LOOK AT THE CHANGES COMING

NOW —
Price $36,000.00 Approx.
Mortgage $29,000.00
Down $7,000.00
Interest 10%
Payments $310.00

VERY SOON —
Mortgage $31,000.00
Down $11,000.00
Interest 11¼%
Monthly $298.00

What this means in dollars to you is, unless you purchase an existing new house now. You will pay about $5,000.00 more in the basic price plus $2,640.00 more payments over the 5 years of the mortgage for a total of $7,640.00. Few, if any can afford this unnecessary expenditure. Don't let it happen to you! — buy now!

Youth, 16, Studying For Mayor

TORONTO (CP) — A 16-year-old Toronto youth wants to be chairman of Metropolitan Toronto in 1982 and is already involved in city politics, even though he can't vote.

Paul Fabish spends four evenings a week at Metropolitan Toronto and borough council meetings, rarely misses a Toronto Transit Commission meeting and has worked in political campaigns for five years.

Metropolitan Toronto Chairman Paul Godfrey thinks the Grade 11 student has "all the makings of a politician."

"He's a scrappy little kid and he has more clout than a lot of long-standing homeowners," said Mr. Godfrey.

The "scrappy little kid" is co-founder and vice-president of the Clanton Park Community Association, one of North York's most influential ratepayer groups.

Pressure from the association resulted in the Toronto Transit Commission's agreement to move the site of a $7.5-million bus garage to a location outside the community.

"I always thought I'd like to work in municipal government, but there's plenty of time," said Paul. "But I don't think as a citizen, I could be any more involved than I am right now."

He would like to get degrees in urban planning and law before tackling a municipal election, eventually, the post of Metro chairman, Toronto's top job.

Paul finds his age is sometimes a problem. "I thought I had overcome the hassles with my age but it's been hard with North York council," he said.

"Council doesn't seem to like objective criticism from outsiders—especially when the outsider is a 16-year-old."

But there's one advantage to his age. "If I can't get something now, I can wait till the next election. I figure it stands to reason I'll be around here longer than they will."

Notices Served

TORONTO (CP) — Another 151 eviction notices, effective June 15, have been served on tenants of Rochdale College by Clarkson Co. Ltd., court-appointed receivers for the building.

But Michael Randall, vice-president of the non-degree granting residence, said Sunday that the notices were served by sticking them to doors of apartments and that apparently some were removed before tenants saw them.

"Who knows who was legally served in a situation like this? he said.

Conflict in Ocean Falls

Conflict is endangering the pulp mill town of Ocean Falls B.C. 315 miles north of Vancouver. The town of 4,000 people is reported to have lost $850,000 since the NDP government of B.C. took over the mill operations in the company town from Crown Zellerbach March 18, 1973. Workers are disillusioned with working and living conditions and if the giant newsprint industries were to stop the town would come to an end. (CP Photo)

Britain Takes Another Look At Its Shale

LONDON (CP) — Rising energy costs have prompted Britain to take another look at its oil shale deposits.

Eric Varley, secretary of state for energy, recently announced that A. F. Macleod-Matthews, a former British Petroleum expert, has been appointed to conduct a study for the Institute of Geological Sciences on the feasibility of extracting oil from the shale deposits.

Mr. Matthews was in charge of an oil shale operation in Scotland which British Petroleum abandoned in 1963. Other deposits are known to exist in England, stretching from Yorkshire in the northeast to Dorset in the south and some sites have been worked in the past.

The new study will cover technological developments as well as the economics of oil shale production.

GUARDED THEIR HOUSE

Curling is believed to have been introduced to Canada on the ice of the St. Lawrence River in 1759 by British troops besieged at Quebec City.

Kadar Prepared To Stay 5 Years

BUDAPEST (Reuter) — After 17 years in power, Hungarian Communist leader Janos Kadar has signalled readiness to stay at the top until 1979.

The quiet, self-effacing Kadar, 62, has been No. 1 man in Hungary since he took over a crippled party machine in 1956, in the aftermath of a national rebellion that was crushed by Soviet tanks.

Since then, he has turned Hungary into an economic and cultural showcase, possibly the most liberal country in the Soviet bloc. Kadar came out of a Communist prison 20 years ago and his subsequent political career has been a remarkable success story.

Rumors about his retirement were dispelled when he agreed to head a committee which is drawing up a party program for a national Communist congress due to take place in March, 1975.

The naming of Kadar as chief program writer indicates he will present the program to the congress and is virtually certain to be elected for another four-year term as the party's first secretary.

Participation in the party congress will enable Kadar to play a key role in the shaping of a new five-year plan that will take Hungary into the 1980s.

Next to Bulgaria's President Todor Zhikov, Kadar is the longest-serving party leader in the Soviet bloc.

A slightly-built, unemotional man, he was thought at one time anxious to retire because of his health.

He still has lingering pain from the torture to which he was subjected as a prisoner for three years in a Stalinist jail, accused of espionage, treason and Titoism.

When he took over party and government control in 1956, he was reviled by many Hungarians as a man who capitulated to the Russians. He gained gradual confidence by pushing for a program of national unity rather than recrimination and by relaxing the rigid pressures which existed under previous Communist regimes.

Although he stays in the background, he is widely respected for policies which permit economic innovation and cultural relaxation without causing undue irritation to the Russians. But his foreign policy is loyally identical to that of the Soviet Union.

His pragmatic domestic policies and his keen tactical sense have gained admiration elsewhere in Eastern Europe.

Blood Bought

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. Morton Shulman (NDP—Toronto High Park) told the legislature Monday a company in Ontario is purchasing pints of blood at "$8.00 a shot and taking the red cells out."

The company, he said, then pumps the red blood cells into customers who buy the service.

Health Minister Frank Miller said he hadn't heard of the practice but would check into it.

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Wednesday, May 15

Aries (March 21-April 19) You're especially vulnerable where misplaced generosity is concerned. Be sure those to whom you give aren't taking advantage.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) Involvements with certain friends today lead to unexpected complications. You'll find yourself in the middle of a sticky situation.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) Whatever you do, be able to back up statements you make. Others are going to hold you to the letter of what you claim.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) You have more self-doubts than you should regarding your capacity to handle certain responsibilities. Don't put yourself down.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) A situation you now are involved in with friends isn't as rosy as it appears to the face. Watch your step.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) In big decision you'll be making you think you see both sides of the issue clearly. In reality, you're only seeing what you want to see.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) It will take considerable discipline on your part to make this a productive day. Your work is apt to suffer due to indifference.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You would be wise to steer clear of anything that smacks of speculation or gambling today. Lady luck is busy elsewhere.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) This is not a good time to make last-minute changes in something that is already on a specific course. Stand pat!

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Yesterday your outlook was firm and certain. Today you're easily swayed by the opinions of others. Confusion and chaos will result.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Any commercial or business dealings today must be managed with extreme caution. You could get a fast shuffle.

Pisces (Feb. 20 - March 20) You're apt to be rather vague and doubtful about your goals. This lessens chances of achieving anything you are aiming for now.

Crying Baby Needs Attention

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My sister has a new baby two months old and she lets her cry 30 to 45 minutes at a time. She says that's what the book says.

I have had six, and believe me, I never let one of mine cry that much. A little seems to be enough.

Also she uses those synthetic diapers and the little thing is all broken out. Could these diapers cause a rash?—A.M.

I wonder what book she is referring to. I haven't seen one that recommends any such thing. Current thinking is that a baby need not be picked up and cuddled at the first whimper, but that if you continue for more than 15 minutes, some checking is in order.

Personally I would start checking somewhat sooner than that. A mother should be guided by the tone of the baby's cry—whether it sounded vaguely fretful or whether it was a real signal that something needed attention.

A healthy baby can do a little squalling over some trivial feeling of annoyance and then forget about it. But when a baby keeps on squalling for any way it can by (crying) for 10 or 20 minutes, there's some reason for it. It may be from hunger, from the discomfort of soiled diapers, irritation from a rash, or some other discomfort.

As to this baby's rash, I would doubt that the type of diaper is the cause. More likely the skin has been irritated by letting the diapers stay soiled. Perhaps the skin hasn't been adequately cleaned, too.

Thorough cleaning and rinsing of the skin is important, not merely applying a fresh diaper of whatever kind. Also thorough drying of the skin is necessary. Some baby powder, or plain (not medicated) petroleum jelly applied to the area of the rash often helps clear up the rash.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My husband has developed gout. We have a neighbor who says there are several kinds of gout and it can even kill you.—Mrs. H.P.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have a dozen bottles of distilled water which I purchased shortly after our last earthquake about three years ago. Shall I keep some on hand or dispose of them and replace with others?—Mrs. R.S.

Water won't spoil, so why not keep?

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have a diverticulum in the throat. It is causing moderately uncomfortable because of food occasionally lodging there, my doctor recommends surgery. Is surgery usually necessary in such cases?—L.G.

A diverticulum (or several of them) in the colon is a very common problem. A similar diverticulum or pouch in the esophagus is vastly less common. Both can cause problems. (Technical term for it is Zenker's diverticulum).

While surgery doesn't cause you much trouble now, it may in the future. Not only does it tend gradually to become larger but ulceration and bleeding are possible.

That's why your doctor recommends surgery which, for this type of diverticulum, is the only effective treatment.

OTTAWA (CP) — At a meeting attended by about 40 people, city council approved a bylaw to restrict smoking in retail shops with 25 or more workers. Councillors, many puffing on pipes or cigarettes, passed the motion without flinching.

Expertitis is one of the most virulent diseases a bridge player can contract. It consists of trying to play like an expert would play without knowing or everything an expert would know about the hand being bid-ded.

There was nothing wrong with South's four-spade bid, except the final result of down one.

The defence started with three rounds of diamonds. South ruffed and third and knocked out East's ace of trumps. A trump came back. South cashed a club, then played the ace and king of hearts; noted that West had shown out and conceded to run off the rest of the trumps to leave dummy with ace-queen of clubs and himself with a club and a heart.

East was down to one club and the known queen of hearts. His last discard had been the jack of clubs and South announced triumphantly, "It looks like a squeeze," and played a club to dummy's ace. Down one, when a simple finesse would have succeeded.

A real expert would have taken the finesse. East had thrown up with four hearts to the queen-10; two aces and the jack of clubs. If he had also held the club king he would surely have opened the bidding.

CP News Roundup

Province Abandons Parkway

TORONTO (CP) — The government has decided not to proceed with two provincial roads because the cost would be prohibitive, Leo Bernier, minister of natural resources, said Monday.

The parkways—the Lake Huron Parkway, from Lake St. Clair to Southampton, and the Col. Thomas Talbot Parkway along the shores of Lake Erie—were planned as scenic routes.

Mr. Bernier said estimated costs for the developments, including land acquisition, shoreline and recreation sites, were "beyond the financial capabilities of the ministry in relation to other major programs at this time."

He said the ministry will continue its assessment recreational needs throughout southern Ontario with a view toward increased expansion of public recreation facilities.

Signs Damaged

OTTAWA (CP) — It will cost an estimated $3,000 to restore 19 signs in Gatineau Park, vandalized during the weekend, the National Capital Commission said Monday.

The English wording on the bilingual wooden signs giving road, hiking, ski trail and picnic ground directions was obliterated with paint.

Ship Seized

TORONTO (CP) — A Brazilian freighter, the Nonoai, seized at the Toronto waterfront Sunday by a York County sheriff, is being held on a $34,033 claim.

Maple Leaf Mills claims that 460 metric tons of Brazilian No. 1 castor oil delivered here Nov. 15, 1972, by the Nonoai was not in "good order and condition."

Mistake

COOS BAY, Ore. (AP) — Darius Oaks's plan was to streak through the police station clad only in boots, then dash outside to his friend's waiting car and speed off, leaving the desk sergeant immobilized with disbelief.

It didn't work that way. Unfamiliar with the layout of the station, Oaks took a wrong turn Sunday into the chief's office, where the sergeant trapped him, handcuffed him and invited him to spend the night.

Monday morning, the judge didn't see the humor either. He convicted Oaks, 23, of indecent exposure, fined him $53 and sentenced him to 10 days in jail.

May Lose Jobs

WOODSTOCK, Ont. (CP) — Some employees of the ministry of education may have to worry about their jobs because of inflation, budget restrictions, Robert Bornhold, regional director of the ministry of education's Waterloo office, said Monday.

At an Oxford County school board meeting, he said that restrictions imposed on his operating budget are far more severe than any of the trustees have had to worry about.

Talks Resume

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The union involved in a three-month strike against Union Gas Ltd. will return to the bargaining table "in accordance with the request of the department of labor," Tom Rogers, International representative of the International Chemical Workers (ICW), said Monday.

Robbed

MONTREAL (CP) — A messenger carrying more than $100,000 in cheques and cash was robbed by two booded bandits Monday while he was on his way to the bank. The employee of Bentley's Cycle and Sports Ltd. was getting into his car behind the store when he was attacked, police said.

Mayor Dies

OTTAWA (CP) — Robert M. (Bob) Simpson, mayor of Arnprior, Ont., for 16 years, died Sunday in hospital. He was 83.

Before becoming mayor in 1951, he served two years on town council and one term as reeve.

Taxes Cut

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors' first-quarter profits slump has made a larger dent in United States' income tax coffers than it has in stockholders' earnings.

The Internal Revenue Service collected just $84 million in income taxes from the company for the first quarter, compared with $816 million last year, a drop of some 90 per cent.

During the period, GM's profits dropped 85 per cent, from $917 million during January-March 1973, to $130 million for the 1974 period.

GM Raises U.S. Prices Studies Prices Here

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors announced Monday it is raising United States prices of its 1974-model cars and trucks an average $105 each, bringing to $394 the average increased cost of a GM vehicle in this model year.

In Oshawa, Ont., a spokesman for GM of Canada said the company is reviewing Canadian prices. A decision on any changes might not be reached until next week.

GM, the largest American auto-maker, said the U.S. increase amounts to 1.9 per cent, a $19-per-vehicle increase in destination costs. The company blamed cost pressures for the increase, which takes effect with vehicles shipped Wednesday.

GM said this will be its last general price increase on 1974 models, but warned of substantial increases for the 1975 models, which will be out in September.

The auto-maker said its increases fall within the bounds of an agreement that GM, Ford and American Motors made with the Cost of Living Council, and the council agreed. A council spokesman said: "We are pleased that they're showing restraint."

Volkswagen to Build Its Cars in U.S.

WOLFSBURG (Reuter) — West Germany's Volkswagen automobile combine, faced with losses for the first time in its history, today announced plans to start producing vehicles in the United States at a cost of more than $1 billion.

Volkswagen Chairman Rudolf Leiding told the company's annual news conference here that VW had suffered worldwide net losses of about $34 million in the first three months of this year.

Leiding cited figures showing that there were 247 working days in the United States compared with 197 in West Germany, and absenteeism in the United States was lower.

Chartered Banks Unlikely To Up Interest Rate Again

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Chartered banks have taken no immediate steps to follow the Bank of Canada's move to increase its prime lending rate.

Paul Wilson, an information officer with the Royal Bank's head office in Montreal, said in an interview he does not think there will be a corresponding change in the rate of chartered banks.

The weekend increase in the Bank of Canada rate to a record 8.75 per cent from 8.25 was the seventh since April 9, 1973, when the rate was increased to 5.25 per cent from 4.75 per cent.

Mr. Wilson said the Royal Bank believes the Bank of Canada in its raising is reacting to action of the chartered banks, not vice-versa.

Arnold Agnew, vice-president in charge of public relations for the Toronto Dominion Bank, said the Bank of Canada's action is under review by his bank and a statement will be made later.

The Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce said it hopes a rise will result in its interest rate for loans and mortgages will not become necessary, but that will depend on whether the demand for bank loans increases or decreases.

No Canadian chartered bank has posted a minimum lending rate higher than 11 per cent, but at least one major United States bank has posted an 11.6-per-cent prime rate.

C.W. Peter Cole, senior vice-president of the investment firm of Cochran Murray Ltd. of Toronto, said:

"Any further movement in prime rates would be detrimental to continuing demand for credit. If the demand does not moderate, we will be looking at 11.5 per cent or 42 per cent."

Man Whose Identity Was Stolen Finds UIC, at Least, on His Side

TORONTO (CP) — Ronald Walton's name is "definitely an imposter," Walton, who lives in Colchester South, near Windsor, said his troubles began early last year when he received a letter from the summons to appear at Dryden's northwestern Ontario to face charges of speeding and of failing to notify authorities of a change of address for his driver's licence.

He said he ignored the summons because he had never been in Dryden, about 1,300 miles north of here.

However, in March, it was finally enforced and Mr. Walton spent eight days in jail in Windsor.

After being released, he had to apply to claim an income tax refund of $485 and unemployment insurance benefits, he said.

Tax officials said a refund for 1351 had been sent to Winnipeg, apparently to someone there using his name and social insurance number.

Ophthalmologist Opposes Optometrist Using Drugs

TORONTO (CP) — A bill that would allow optometrists to use local anesthetics in treating patients was criticized Monday by the chief of ophthalmology at the Toronto Hospital for Sick Children.

Dr. John Crawford, also a professor of ophthalmology at the University of Toronto, said in a brief read to members of the legislative committee on the clal development that two commonly-used drugs are dangerous and should be used only by qualified doctors.

The committee is studying the proposed health disciplines act, which has already received second reading in the house.

The brief said the drugs Tetracaine and Proparacaine may cause a sudden heart attack, respiratory collapse and death.

Fire Destroys Potato Plant

NEWMARKET, Ont. (CP) — Thousands of tons of potatoes were lost Monday when fire destroyed the Big B Farm potato processing plant near this community, 30 miles north of, Toronto.

More Tapes Sought

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House of Representatives judiciary committee is expected to send another subpoena to the White House, this time demanding tapes of 11 presidential conversations for its impeachment investigation.

The committee today was scheduled to interrupt its hearing of evidence on the Watergate cover-up to discuss sending for an open hearing to vote on the subpoena.

The impeachment staff, headed by counsel John Doar, was expected to recommend a subpoena demanding tapes of presidential conversations that took place April 4, June 20 and June 23, 1972.

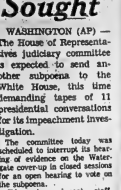
After the subpoena vote, the committee will go back into taping the evidence gathered by its impeachment staff.

At Tuesday's session, Chairman Peter Rodino (Dem. N.J.) ruled that a legal memorandum opposing issuance of a subpoena for the tape of an April 4, 1972, conversation violated committee rules of confidentiality and could not be accepted by the committee.

The memorandum, submitted by James St. Clair, the president's chief Watergate lawyer, argued that "all of the evidence available to the committee makes it clear the president did not have prior knowledge of the plan to break into the DNC (Democratic National Committee) and that no subpoena for the April 4, 1972, conversation is warranted."

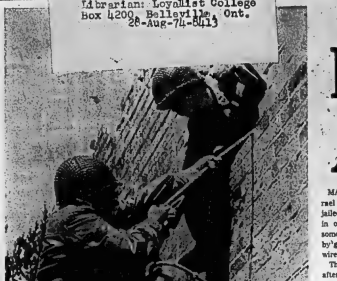
Rodino ordered all copies of the St. Clair memo recalled from committee members, but The Associated Press obtained access to a copy.

In his memo, St. Clair referred to staff suggestions and recommendations made at a May 9 closed session. It was these references that caused Rodino to rule that the memo had violated rules of confidentiality and could not be discussed at an open hearing.



The committee is aiming for completion of its work by late June or July. If it finds grounds for impeachment exist, the committee will report an impeachment resolution to the House. If the House adopted the resolution by a majority vote, the Senate would conduct an impeachment trial with a two-thirds vote required for removal of the president from office.

Meanwhile, in other Watergate developments:



—Senate Watergate committee chairman Sam Ervin was reported by committee sources as prepared to urge delay in the committee's final report for up to a month and to eliminate all findings of individual guilt or innocence.

—Key Senate Republicans turned down a White House suggestion to organize an effort to oppose Nixon's resignation. Democratic leaders in Congress said they oppose calls by individual Republicans for Nixon's resignation, and said they want his fate to be decided by the constitutional process of impeachment.

Free Trade Is Opposed

VANCOUVER (CP) — An economic policy statement adopted by the Canadian Labor Congress Tuesday strongly opposes any joint Canada-United States approach to economic problems and rejects any move toward a bilateral free trade arrangement with the U.S.

"We are strongly opposed to a continentalist approach to our economic problems, because we believe firmly that the ultimate result would be the erosion, if not the abandonment, of this nation's political and economic sovereignty," the statement says.

The congress opposes protectionism in world trade and supports reduction of trade barriers. But it does not want special arrangements with the U.S. that would set up barriers against the rest of the world.

Stelco Raises Prices Despite Gillespie's Plea

TORONTO (CP) — The Steel Co. of Canada Ltd. (Stelco) raised its prices on several products today, despite appeals by the federal government to delay the increases.

President Peter Gordon said in an interview Tuesday night he saw "no reason" for the delay and that increases of more than 11 per cent in reinforcing bar and plate prices are "fully justified."

He said his company's prices are still lower than the price of steel delivered from the United States, Europe or Japan.

After a meeting with Mr. Gordon Monday, federal Industry Minister Alastair Gillespie said he could not accept the increases until he received the results of a government investigation.

90 Teenagers Hostages

Israel Will Free Arab Guerrilla

MAALOT, Israel (CP) — Israel said today it would fly 20 jailed Arab terrorists to Syria in order to save the lives of some 90 Israeli teen-agers held by guerrillas in a Maalot school wired to explode.

The statement came 10 hours after three terrorists stormed into the school, explosives strapped to their belts and automatics in their hands, and captured the vacationing youngsters living in sleeping bags on the floor.

The guerrillas said they would blow up the building and kill the children unless the Israeli government met the demand by 6 p.m. (noon EDT.) The communique came four hours before the deadline.

The gunmen, shooting wildly from the school windows and using hostages as human shields, yelled through a megaphone that Israel must free the 20 imprisoned guerrillas and fly them to Damascus to save the youngsters' lives.

Releasing the guerrilla prisoners in exchange for the youngsters would be the first time Israel had ever succumbed to a terrorist life-or-death demand.

"In order to secure the release of the pupils at Maalot, the cabinet has decided to release the terrorists as demanded," the communique said. "Notification thereof has also been communicated to the French ambassador."

French Ambassador Jean Herley, carrying a French flag, was inside the school negotiating for the hostages' lives.

The gunmen had asked for Herly to negotiate with them, and the diplomat flew by helicopter 90 miles from Tel Aviv to Maalot, five miles south of the Lebanese border.

In Damascus, the guerrilla command which claimed responsibility for the attack said: The entire building is wired and mined. If Zionist forces open fire they will be risking the destruction of the entire place."

Reuter news agency said the raid had transformed the township of Maalot in the western hills of Galilee into an armed camp.

Defence Minister Moshe Dayan took personal charge of the operation, as troops and armored cars surrounded the building, while the guerrillas, peering from windows, sniped at any soldiers they could see.

The guerrillas later allowed two children, a boy and a girl, to leave the building with a message in English to the Israeli authorities, probably containing their demands.

The girl handed the note to Gen. Dayan while the boy fainted when he reached the security forces.

One guerrilla came out of the school into the courtyard at 11 a.m. wearing an Israeli army uniform.

The girl who was released by the guerrillas, 16-year-old Rachel Lagziel, told reporters that all the children, aged between 14 and 16, were concentrated in one place and were ordered to either sit or lie down.

She said the children believed that one of the guerrillas, who speaks Hebrew, was an Israeli Arab who works in Safed, the northern Israeli town from which the hostages come.

She said the children's morale was low, some of them sobbing and in shock, but one girl was trying to improve the atmosphere by telling jokes.

She said the treatment of the children by the guerrillas has improved.

Two of the guerrillas were very nervous while the third, who spoke Hebrew, was fairly calm, she said.

In a 20-minute exchange through loudspeakers at midday the guerrillas said the children were unharmed and had enough food.

They called on the Israeli troops to hail the children through loudspeakers to calm them.

The attack was similar to the terrorist raid a month ago on the border town of Qiryat Shmonah, in which 18 Israelis died. The three terrorists who led the raid also were killed.

Terrorism Erupts

MAALOT, Israel (AP) — Arab guerrillas held at least 90 Israeli teen-agers hostage in a school near the Lebanese border today.

In a sudden burst of terrorism that threatened United States Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's peacemaking mission, three members of a family living near the school were murdered, an Arab woman was killed in an ambush near the Lebanese border, an oil pipeline to the Haifa refinery was blown up, and rockets were planted in Jerusalem.

Gasoline Price Boosts Will Be About 9 Cents

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Petroleum products, including gasoline and heating oil, jump in price at the wholesale level today by up to 8.2 cents a gallon west of the Ottawa Valley and by as much as 2.7 cents in the rest of the country.

But retail increases will be less in some cases and vary from province to province because of differing provincial tax rates and programs to hold down consumer petroleum costs.

Nova Scotia, following up on a March promise by Premier Gerald Regan, announced a subsidy program Monday to wipe out much of the retail effect of today's wholesale increases.

Details of the plan were not given but acting-premier Peter Nicholson said it would apply to gasoline and diesel oil at least.

Saskatchewan consumers also are scheduled to get relief when a seven-cents-a-gallon cut in gasoline taxes takes effect today, sharply cutting the retail impact that would otherwise result from the wholesale increases. The reduction was promised by Premier Allan Blakeney in March.

He also announced a five-cents-a-gallon cut in diesel fuel taxes and said that the province would start a farm cost reduction program, allowing farmers to apply for compensation up to seven cents a gallon on diesel fuel and on so-called marked or purple gasoline.

British Columbia also has announced plans to start a subsidy program for consumers but no details have been released.

New Brunswick Premier Richard Hatfield told his legislature the province was considering protection of the consumers from the effects of higher petroleum prices, but gave no details of what was being considered.

Manitoba announced earlier that it would study a subsidy program along the lines of that announced by Saskatchewan. But no decision has been announced.

Ontario has ruled out a provincial subsidy plan, arguing that it would make far more sense for Ottawa to take action federally.

Premier William Davis told the legislature earlier he has no plans to reduce provincial petroleum taxes or interfere in any other way with retail prices.

Terrorist Action Delays Peace Talks

JERUSALEM (AP) — The Arab terrorist seizure of about 90 teen-agers in a northern Israeli school and its repercussions here caused United States State Secretary Henry Kissinger to cancel a scheduled flight to Damascus today.

Kissinger said he will wait another day to give the Israeli cabinet time to consider its latest stand on the disengagement of troops on the Golan Heights front.

"Everything has been pushed back by this," he said. The main concern now is the safety of the children, he added.

Kissinger returned from Damascus Tuesday reporting no agreement yet for the withdrawal of Israeli forces on the Golan. "I snatched defeat from the jaws of victory," he said.

Banks Say Interest Won't Decline As Long as Inflation Rate Climbs

TORONTO (CP) — Chartered bank spokesmen agree interest rates won't go down as long as the inflation rate is going up.

They are also encouraging their biggest and best corporate customers to limit demands for bank loans and instead borrow long-term in the bond market.

Richard M. Thomson, president of Toronto Dominion Bank, said in an interview:

"As long as the inflation rate continues in the double figures, we'll see higher interest rates. I see another rise coming in Canadian bank lending rates, but not this week."

The bank officials were reacting to Sunday's increase in the Bank of Canada's bank rate to a record 8.75 per cent from 8.25.

Last week, the 10 chartered banks all moved their prime lending rates up one-half of one per cent to 11 per cent.

Credit required by companies for their normal course of business is being granted by the banks, spokesmen said, but where it appears that a company is able to raise money elsewhere, it is being asked to do so.

"Corporate demand for bank credit has been going up desperately," said Earle McLaughlin, chairman and president of the Royal Bank of Canada.

Another banker added: "I don't expect to see any turnaround in interest rates until the expectation of inflation moderates."

Stabbing Admitted

A Marmora woman, convicted on a charge of assault causing bodily harm, was sentenced to 18 months indeterminate in a provincial reformatory Tuesday after she pleaded guilty in County Court here to a charge of stabbing her common-law husband in the back with a kitchen knife last Nov. 26.

Mrs. Ruby Della Ellis, 51, of the Old Norwood Road, pleaded guilty to the charge when she appeared before County Court Judge W. S. Lane.

Court was told that Mrs. Ellis had been drinking beer with her husband Robert Merrely Parsons, in the kitchen of their Marmora home on the afternoon of Nov. 26, when her husband went to the bedroom and lay down to sleep.

Approximately one hour after Mr. Parsons had been sleeping Mrs. Ellis entered the bedroom with a kitchen knife and stabbed Mr. Parsons in the back.

Mr. Parsons got off the bed, removed the knife from his back, bent the blade and threw it into a garbage can before he left the house to drive to his aunt's nearby home.

Relatives drove Parsons to the Campbellford Hospital, where he received emergency treatment and was transferred to the Peterborough Civic Hospital.

In Peterborough, Mr. Parsons was treated for a stab wound and a partially collapsed right lung.

At the time of the stabbing incident, there had been no argument between Mr. Parsons and Mrs. Ellis, Crown Attorney Gary Scott said.

Dr. George Scott, a Kingston psychiatrist, told the court he found that Mrs. Ellis suffered from no form of mental illness but that she had had a long history of physical illness, was a chronic alcoholic and "suffered from the effects of long standing emotional deprivation".

Mrs. Ellis had experienced "a difficult and tortuous type of existence for 51 years" before he saw her, Dr. Scott told the court. As a result of those years, Mrs. Ellis "had a great deal of anger in her that was due to events not related to the charge before the court," Dr. Scott told Judge Lane.

Judge Lane noted that he was faced with a difficult problem in finding a sentence tailored to fit the situation.

The stabbing was a serious incident that could have "very well have been a charge of murder", the judge said, and in view of the violence since it had not been done in the heat of passion.

However, the judge added, in the light of Dr. Scott's testimony, there was definitely a need for treatment and rehabilitation under controlled conditions and the 18-month reformatory sentence would enable Mrs. Ellis to receive it.

Stand-in Saves Day For Elijah

By EUGENE LANG

The second performance of Mendelsohn's Elijah in Bridge Street United Church last evening saw nearly a complete duplication of Monday night's production in regard to size of congregation and their response to same. We must mention that the leading part of Elijah, which was sung on Monday night by James Bechtel, was handled most efficiently in the second performance by baritone William Perry of Midland.

Mr. Bechtel's indisposition was of such a nature that it was impossible for him to reappear last evening in this demanding role, he was ill more than a day's notice. Mr. Perry graciously consented to take this leading vocal part in the oratorio.

Only yesterday morning Robert Reid contacted Mr. Perry, told him his unusual predicament and Mr. Perry forthwith cancelled his day's appointments at his teaching, arriving here in mid-afternoon.

Having no previous rehearsal with chorus or orchestra, it is to the very courageous act of devotion on the part of Mr. Perry to tackle this difficult vocal part that is sprinkled throughout the 296 page musical score. Be it secular, or sacred, that old saying that the show must go on was never more true than in this instance — Mr. Perry saved the day.

Smiles wreathed the face of Mr. Reid, his singers and orchestra personnel as applause greeted the conclusion of each part of the Oratorio, and a standing ovation was his reward at the conclusion. You all deserved it, and now that we have instituted this, may you continue to merit it in the future presentations that we look forward to hearing from the Bridge Street United Church (Augmented) Choir.

Centennial Celebration Future Councils' Decision

Any decision to spend money on a centennial project for Belleville will be the responsibility of future town councils.

This was the assurance given Monday night by Mayor Robin Jeffrey as she answered recent criticism of the city's centennial project steering committee.

Mayor Jeffrey said the centennial steering committee was simply a planning organization set up last year to formulate plans for the city's centennial year celebration in 1978.

The Chamber of Commerce was making its office available for meetings and suggestions for projects were being received and formulated by the chamber manager.

Membership on the committee was representative of all walks of life in the city, the mayor assurred.

Although a figure of $100,000 for the next three years is proposed for the city's capital works budget, Mayor Jeffrey said the committee has not spent "one penny" this year.

All advertising asking for possible suggestions were being paid for by the Chamber of Commerce, she said.

"Any decision to spend any money will be the responsibility of future councils."

But she said planning now was necessary if the city was to have a happy birthday party in its centennial year.

Shannonville Man Injured

A Shannonville man was admitted to the Belleville General Hospital with head injuries last night following a spectacular single-car crash on County Rd 18 (Byron St.) just beyond the city limits.

Kevin Wayne Schwager, 19, of RR 2 Shannonville, was rushed to hospital by ambulance after the car he was driving went out of control and slack a hydro pole that carried high tension wires along the north side of County Rd. 18 around 6:07 p.m.

PC Donald McDermott, of the Belleville detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police said that the Schwager car travelled approximately 150 feet along the north side ditch before it struck the hydro pole.

On striking the pole, the car's engine was snapped loose from its mounts and was hurled 90 feet across the roadway before it came to rest in the south side ditch.

The car, a 1966 model, was a complete writeoff. It finally came to rest on its side across the roadway.

Schwager is reported to be in satisfactory condition in hospital.

Building Start On Mall This Fall

TRENTON — The proposed $2.5 million shopping mall for Trenton's east end seems to have a green light and organizers are hopeful construction will begin this fall.

Development ran into snags some months ago when Western Realty Development were forced to acquire building permits from both Trenton and Sidney Township.

The situation was further complicated when it was determined the plan overlapped property owned by the Department of National Defence.

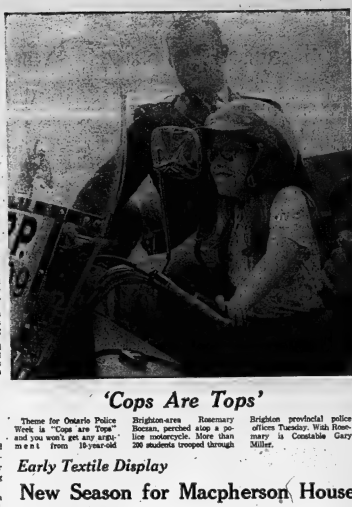
Defence minister James Richardson has recommended approval for the land deal says a developer's agent and local realtor Frank Follwell says "we're almost 100 per cent sure of the project."

Federal approval is still hinged on a cabinet order-in-council.

Meantime, building permits have been acquired from both involved municipalities and developers have surveyed Trenton's downtown business community for prospective clients.

Mr. Follwell says there "has been a strong response from local businessmen and as many as a dozen have committed themselves."

He did not name downtown merchants claimed interested in moving into the mall. He said final papers have not yet been signed.



He said it was Western's policy to give local merchants first opportunity at renting store spaces.

All paperwork is expected to be complete by June and Mr. Follwell says developers are hopeful construction on the mall can begin this year.

POINT PETRE — The Provincial police at Picton have reported discovery of a body Tuesday at Point Petre, on Lake Ontario, 15 miles south of Picton.

A police spokesman said that the unidentified body was found by persons who were not named and has been sent to the centre of forensic science in Toronto for identification.

Soapbox Derby Nears

TRENTON — Everything is in "tip top shape" for the May 26 soapbox derby, according to organizers.

Fire Truck Purchase Speeds Up

TRENTON — Council convened its committee-of-the-whole session into a public meeting Monday night to deal with the purchase of a fire truck.

Though Mayor Robert Patrick described the scene as an "emergency" situation," Councillor Ed Todd did not let the issue pass quietly.

Councillor Todd several weeks ago successfully placed a motion on the floor banning the practice of turning a closed session into a public one, "unless under emergency requirements".

He told council he did not consider this issue an emergency and cast the single dissenting ballot against the bylaw to purchase the vehicle.

"It was a matter of principle to vote against the by law," he said.

The majority of council consented to the measure which allows the mayor and clerk to sign necessary papers.

Arden Royce, town deputy clerk, said signing of the papers will ensure early delivery of the $14,000 hose truck. He told council early action would prevent a possible two-year delay in delivery.

Local Winner In Language

Students from the Quinte district were among 50 competing at Trent University in Peterborough for prizes in the Ontario High School German Contest sponsored by the Ontario Modern Language Teachers' Association. Among those who returned home with awards was Robin Ormsby of Trenton High School, who won a typewriter.

'Serious Irregularities' Charged

Trent Island Scheme Under Attack

TORONTO (CP) — Liberal environment critic Edward Good called Tuesday for a delay in approval of subdivision plans for Nappan Island on the Trent River.

Mr. Good, Liberal member for Waterloo North, said in a prepared statement that there were serious irregularities in the plan to put 250 cottages on the river in Seymour Township.

Campbellford is the main community in Seymour.

He said that a 1972 provincial study indicated that boats and cottages in the area already had reached maximum limits.

The Liberal MPP said the Lower Trent Conservation Authority was against the proposal because it would cause ecological damage and harm a nearby game sanctuary.

A developer already has been given permission to build, he said, despite the fact that the developer was not required to carry out an environmental impact study.

New Season for Macpherson House

The historian Allan Macpherson House in Napanee will open for the summer season May 18 with a display of early Ontario textiles.

Details of the origin and use will accompany many of the exhibits of early materials woven more than a century ago.

The opening will also feature a sale of old-fashioned plants from the gardens of Macpherson House. The Herb Society of Canada provided many of the early herbs planted in the garden. Seedlings of these and lupin, forget-me-nots and honeysuckle, with some modern plants, will be sold.

Armed Forces' June Ballot

OTTAWA (CP) — About 25,000 Canadians will be entitled to vote outside the country in the July 8 federal election. Nose will be tourists.

The Election Act provides that public servants abroad, such as staffs of embassies and members of the armed forces, may cast ballots on special voting dates.

But tourists or persons working for non-Crown agencies, do not have that privilege.

As one electoral official said at a news briefing Tuesday, only "dyed in the wool" public servants and the military get to cast the special write-in ballot between Monday, June 24 and Saturday, June 29.

If your vacation will take you out of the country July 8, the only way you can vote is via the advance poll Saturday, June 29 and Monday, July 1. Seamen get a special break—they can vote by proxy.

The special June 24-29 voting is for all armed forces members, about 83,000 persons, in or out of the country.

Saying Their Piece

We have expressed the thought on occasions that democracy is a tiresome process, yet necessarily so if the concept of government of the people, by the people, and for the people, is to be maintained.

City treasurer Frank Morrell expressed much the same thought in thanking the young people who participated in the Mayor of the Week program at City Hall. They had all said their piece before the sponsoring body, the Rotary Club, on other day, and one of their number, Elizabeth Zweck von Zweckenberg, had expressed their thanks to the club, to Mayor Jeffrey and the staff at City Hall, and then it was Mr. Morrell's turn to thank the young speakers.

There had been praise by the young people of what they saw as a hard-working Mayor and Council, together with the municipal staff, and Bonnie McIsaac, an 18-year-old as ingenuous and bright as her name, had marvelled at the time devoted to ensure the most careful budgeting as well as to other matters. And Mr. Morrell was saying that the presence of the young people had given City Hall staff, in the explaining of their work, time to reflect a little about just what their respective jobs involved. And in contemplating the democratic process he allowed that things "would go a lot faster if we were a dictatorship."

Possibly a lot of people have had the same notion, but have concluded that democracy does afford the best opportunity for all — and notably, the freedom that goes with it, something that is missing in the political systems of the Communist world and to some extent from others that also claim to be democracies.

If criticism were lacking from this group of Mayor of the Week participants — and others in the past have not been slow to criticize — these young people all had the same enthusiasm of their age group.

Miss McIsaac seemed to have caught the particular democracy bug more than most. "One thing about Council meetings," she said, "I found it so hard to keep my mouth shut. I would like to have expressed my opinion . . . When I was new to politics I used to be so ignorant, but now I am searching the paper for anything concerning municipal government."

Are you listening people? As Mayor Jeffrey has suggested, other municipalities should adopt this program. Certainly it makes for heightened awareness of the community; and, as Shirley Wales of Albert College pointed out, it was an excellent introduction for her, as a newcomer to the city.

Quinte Exhibition

Sunday's downpour represented a melancholy conclusion to the Quinte Exhibition's Spring presentation but Friday and Saturday attracted good crowds and there was much of interest in this May-time program.

The exhibit of school work by primary students was an interesting innovation, revealing that youngsters are all learning about the world around them and responding creatively to the classroom environment and teaching. Maps of the continents drawn by ten-year-olds indicated a lively interest and attention to detail. Art work too and the contents of scrap books made it clear that teacher and student are combining what is known of our world with concern for the contemporary scene; hopefully, the schools are also creating thinking persons who will be equal to whatever the future may bring.

Indeed when it is realized that much of the population is either unconcerned about the events of the day, let alone of the past, that the kind of tomorrow predicted by Alvin Toffler in Future Shock to them is blissfully remote, a thorough education is all the more important.

Let's hope that this widening of the Quinte Exhibition's range of interest will be afforded the opportunity of putting their work before the public.

MP's Protest

Ottawa's Weak Reaction to Strikes Arouses Public Anger

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — In these public service strikes in the Post Office and of the airport fire-fighters there appears no authority to which the overabused taxpayers may turn.

The strikes were illegal.

The cost to the taxpayer, in terms of several weeks of massive inconvenience, of untold damage to the economy, and financial loss to who-knows-how-many-thousand Canadians, and finally to the indirect treasury bills the settlements has been incalculable.

But except for one lone Conservative MP, independently outspoken John Fraser of Vancouver South, nobody in Parliament, Liberal, Tory, New Democrat or Social Credit member, said anything meaningful about the violated rights of the taxpayer.

It could have been this thundering silence that finally aroused John Fraser to demand, in shouting anger, that something be done to protect "the public interest".

Apart from John Fraser's outburst, which fell on nothing but deaf ears and dumb tongues in all the House of Commons, nothing was said of what be instead was the paramount issue at stake, this "public interest," and the right of the taxpayer to be decently served by the supposed "servants", he pays so generously and who kick him around so shamelessly.

Run through Hansard during the days of those strikes—and of the 229,000-a-year striking St. Lawrence River pilots who paralyzed the Seaway in their annual demands for more"—and you find little but words of concern for the strikers and their "bargaining rights".

Even the Conservatives in their questioning of the cabinet used phraseology that soundsignalled understanding if not outright sympathy and support for the airport firemen, illegally striking for an additional few thousand dollars to bring them up to "parity" with fire-fighters in municipal posts.

The Conservatives, and of course, even more so, the socialist New Democrats, kept bleating about the sanctity of the collective bargaining process.

This ignored altogether the fact that the firemen and postal workers, striking illegally, were negotiating and, in the long run, contributing to the destruction of collective bargaining.

For the public demands for living—in the mail the Liberals are receiving—for the outlawing of strikes by federal civil servants which shut down services essential to the functioning of the economy and to the national interest.

The Liberals are trying to duck the issue on grounds that strikes may be outlawed in legislation but never in actual fact.

For, they argue, law becalmned, the federal public servants would strike anyway, and as Transport Minister Marchand has argued, "there just aren't enough jails to hold them all."

It is so much easier for the government to "buy off" the strike.

So the St. Lawrence Pilotage Authority, a federal Crown Corporation, is blackmailed for several thousand dollars per man by pilots already making $29,000 who hold the economy to ransom by paralyzing foreign shipping in the Seaway.

And the illegally striking airport firemen are bribed for as much as $3,000 each to obey the law, refuse the offer as insufficient, leave the airport to work while their demands go to binding arbitration for even more.

And more pitiful was the government performance with the illegally striking postal workers who have made it an almost annual union rite to use pensioners and others dependent on government cheques as hostages in their demands on the treasury which have run from class postal rates up from five to eight cents in only a few years.

And now, despite Postmaster General Allan Outhit's claim that several thousand dollars per week are being lost to international market conditions or profiteering corporations, surely one of the principal causes of inflation is profligate government spending.

The time to over-spend is during a recession, when consumer demand is down and unemployment up. The 1974 economy—with rampant inflation and unemployment at a level considered by the Bank of Canada's governor to be almost irreducible—is a time for the government to curb its spending and thereby take off some of the heat.

In other words, Messrs. Trudeau and Turner would do well to follow the precepts they have laid down for other Canadians, whom they encourage to save by setting money aside (to buy a house, or to earn tax free interest in savings accounts, bonds or mortgages).

The figures presented by the finance minister forecast an increase of 28.4 per cent in tax revenues during the year begun August 1, 1974, including a 20-per-cent rise in payments by individuals and a 44.7-per-cent jump in corporate tax bills.

These, taken together with a 7.8 per-cent rise in non-tax revenues, will result in a net 26.1-per-cent increase in budgetary revenues to a total of $23.950-billion this year, Mr. Turner expects.

Granted, the increase in expenditures will be quite as great—22 per cent, bringing expenditures to $24.4 billion.

But as long as the government continues to spend substantially more than it takes in, without the justification of an economic slowdown, it will only be pouring more fuel on the flames of inflation.

The Budget—Or How Not To Make Ends Meet

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

I left my Britannica in my other suit, but it says here in Webster's that a budget is:

"A financial statement of the estimated revenues and expenditures of a country for a definite period of time.

"By extension, a plan or program for financing a government, based on such a statement, including authorization to collect the revenues and incur the expenses proposed."

Funny, but it doesn't say anything about electors, minority governments and votes of confidence.

As a plan for financing the government, the new federal budget once again fails to do what every Canadian family must do—that is, make ends meet.

Despite the fact that inflation-swollen tax revenues are flooding in faster than the government can count them, the finance minister still plans to go into debt with a further budgetary deficit of $4.9 million in the current fiscal year.

In the budgetary transactions, John Turner forecasts an increase in the deficit to $1.550 million from $675 million in the year that ended March 31, 1974.)

If there were ever a time when the government should be budgeting for a surplus in its fiscal operations, this is it.

Whatever blame may go to international market conditions or profiteering corporations, surely one of the principal causes of inflation is profligate government spending.

The time to over-spend is during a recession, when consumer demand is down and unemployment up. The 1974 economy—with rampant inflation and unemployment at a level considered by the Bank of Canada's governor to be almost irreducible—is a time for the government to curb its spending and thereby take off some of the heat.

City Swallows Community Identity

By DON O'HEARN ...
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service ...

TORONTO — One of the successes of our modern society with its mad rush towards the concrete jungle atmosphere (and also, in Ontario's case with the development of regional government) has been the loss of community identity and spirit, particularly that of so many of the former pleasant and great small communities which have been swallowed up.

Although many people in these communities have felt the loss deeply we have heard very little from governments, except the very occasional expression of sympathy, about them.

It was therefore refreshing to see Don Irvine, minister without portfolio in the ministry of the treasury, devote a major speech to the question of community identity and how it can be preserved . . . even though the government passed by the fact that he had been asked to speak on the subject by his audience—the Town and Village Section of the Association of Municipalities of Ontario.

Perhaps, also, not too much encouragement was to be taken from the minister's remarks.

He did point out that in some communities which had been long and deeply rooted, they still identified themselves with their old names and characters even though they had formally been shorbed into other communities.

He specifically mentioned that you still heard people refer to "Malton", the Toronto Region and "Streetsville" in Mississauga. Also "Forest Hill" and "Leaside" in Metro Toronto, even though it is years now since these municipalities were officially so named.

But he made two main points:

1. That encouraging community spirit is a positive act, it must be worked at.

2. That it is possible as to what can be done.

With this he made some suggestions as to how identities could be maintained.

One was that traditional town names could be chosen for new suburbs to help preserve old situations.

Another was that in sports, cultural and other competitions old identities be kept.

Such things could be a help.

But to those of us who feel that the best of old closely-knit communities could be a much bigger loss to society than most realize, the really reassuring factor would be that some people at last are giving this question some attention.

Company's 100th Birthday

London Life

On May 1, the London Life Insurance Company marked the completion of its first century.

From its modest beginnings in a second-floor office above a bank in London, Ontario, in 1874, London Life has become the largest all-Canadian life insurance company marketing exclusively in Canada. The company now provides personal life insurance benefits to Canadians than any other company.

The path of growth was not without its difficulties during the formative years. But sound practices — including an early decision to enter the industrial field of sales (involving home collection of premiums) ultimately placed the young company on a secure footing. By 1914, in its 70th year, London Life reached its first billion dollars of life insurance in force. Today the total stands at a record $15.4 billion.

London Life's investment policy has remained steadfastly Canadian during its first century. By investing most of its policyowners' funds in residential development, the company has long been one of Canada's largest providers of funds for rental apartment dwellings. This investment now totals more than $1.3 billion.

During its first 100 years the company pioneered in a number of fields. It entered the group life market in 1919, and in 1927 became the first Canadian company to offer group sickness and accident insurance. A year later it was the first to adopt use of actuarial tables based on Canadian mortality statistics.

London Life also established itself as a leader in the use and innovation of data systems. In 1965 it became the first insurance company in the world to install an IBM System-360 computer.

Today the company serves more than two million Canadians through 116 regional offices located in eight provinces. As part of its Centennial activities, meetings of the board of directors will be held in various centres, in conjunction with staff celebrations for the 4,800 employees and their spouses.

Minister Is a Youthful 27 But Not The Youngest Ever

By DON O'HEARN

TORONTO — Ever since Dennis Timbrell was appointed minister without portfolio back in February there has been a lot of talk about age around here.

Timbrell is 27 and so far as is known is the youngest man ever to be given cabinet rank.

And ever since his appointment he has been getting considerable space in the media because of this fact.

Though Timbrell is probably the youngest cabinet member (and we don't have statistics to really check these things) he is far from being the youngest member we have had.)

This distinction almost certainly belongs to Reid Scott who won Toronto-Beaches for the CCF in 1948.

Scott actually had to wait a few months before being sworn in for he was under 21 when he was elected.

Then in the present house Liberal Paul Reid of Rainy River was 24 when he was first elected in 1967.

Timbrell who apparently has been doing quite well in his official responsibility, the youth secretariat, is a most ambitious young man.

He is not shy letting you know that his eventual goal is to be prime minister of Canada.

If his chances were to be based on the record of Reid Scott they would be slight.

Scott was defeated provincially in 1951 and again in 1955. He then won federally and eventually again was defeated and now is a Toronto alderman.

Pat Reid, however, certainly would be a prominent member of the cabinet if the Liberals were in the province and even with the present Liberal Leader Bob Nixon and for a short time premier. He held Brant and its predecessor ridings from 1919 until his death in 1961, a total of 42 years.

Volunteer Recognition Week

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

The Central Volunteer Bureau wishes to publicly thank those who made Volunteer Recognition Week of special interest a success, re-validating as it did the positive contribution to the quality of life in Belleville which is made by volunteers.

We wish to thank the Four Seasons Hotel for the use of their second floor Convention Room and their staff who, as they donated for our Information Mart—Days Inns of Canada Kings County Board of Education kindly provided Ruth Barnes with a portapak for on-the spot video taping the series "Volunteers in Action", with the assistance of their media technician Bruce Hall. Thanks also for the viewings and interviews from Loyalist College TV Studio were Jean Mart—Days Inns and Cobevue (Quinte) Limited. The Coca Cola Company donated beverage for the Open House.

Public interest was evidenced by an attendance of 1,000 attending the Open House—Information Mart, and many expressed the hope that this event would be held annually to keep the public abreast of volunteer services available in the community.

It gave the thirty-four volunteer agencies represented a new form of self-expression, a new vehicle for recruiting volunteers, and a sense of belonging to a network of community resources and the public a chance to re-assess their services in the community needs and to specially recognize the individual work of volunteers who make their services possible and who in turn become involved service.

We enjoyed working with them all, and most sincerely thank them for their co-operation and enthusiasm in realizing our objective in co-ordinating a Volunteer Recognition Week in Belleville.

SELMA BOCHNER,
Volunteer Bureau Co-ordinator of Volunteer Recognition for 1974.

Submissions To Council

Editor
The Intelligencer
The City of Belleville's biggest budget beggars, the Chamber of Commerce and Rotary Club, have adopted a new strategy for this year's budget.

Usually they make personal presentations and appear before city council and then encourage the public at large may hear what is going on.

This year they elected to make written applications. They are less likely to be asked embarrassing questions.

This year's budget is very well for them but as it is for us, the taxpayers are going to foot the bill as always.

I suggest we should insist that any organization or individual making a grant must appear before them and submit their application to scrutiny and question.

The public have a right to know what is being done with their money.

None of the perennial doles have the right to get away with the taxpayers, money without having made to substantiate their case publicly.

7 Children, Five and Under, Treated After Finding LSD

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Pills that sent seven children to hospital Tuesday were definitely LSD, police said Tuesday night.

Nancy Dunstater, 5, was reported in satisfactory condition in hospital after having her stomach pumped; her cousins, Deanne, 3, and Lisa, 5, Dunstater; and Laurie Eadie, 4, were held in hospital overnight for observation. Kimberly Downes, 5, Gary Downes, 3, and Tina MacQueen, 5, were released.

The children ate some of the pills they found beside an apartment building here. Drug squad officers identified the tablets as LSD after examining the remaining pills and seeing the children's behavior.

"It could have been more serious but luckily their parents and neighbors noticed they were acting peculiar," said police inspector Lloyd Bryans. No arrests have been made.

"At first I heard Deanna hollering outside, and she was going to jump over the balcony (only about four feet)" to the downstairs apartment, said Lorna Dunstater, mother of Lisa and Deanna and aunt of Nancy.

She said she brought Deanna into the apartment and "took all her clothes off, but she just kept screaming."

"She'd look around like she was seeing something," said Alvin Dunstater, Deanna's father. "Then she'd just scream while she stared."

"Nancy just lay there and I thought she was tired. She then started vomiting," said Mrs. Dunstater.

Ambulance Driver Denied Admittance

TORONTO (CP) — An ambulance driver told a coroner's jury Tuesday he was refused admittance to an apartment building last February after he had been called there to take a patient to hospital.

James Hastings was testifying at an inquest into the death of Norman Disney, 67, who died in the apartment building after being examined by the doctor who called for the ambulance.

Evidence given at the inquest indicated the patient lived at Apartment 24 of the building but the ambulance was summoned to Apartment 4.

The doctor, who also testified, said he left the patient with the latter's wife and another elderly person after he called for the ambulance. A tape recording of the call, played at the inquest, showed he did not identify himself as a doctor but that he spelled out the patient's name.

Mr. Hastings said he and an ambulance attendant went to a rear entrance of the building within minutes of the call but a woman refused to open the door after he identified himself.

"I assumed I was talking to the person who wanted to go to the hospital but had changed their mind," he said.

Dr. Roman Fedyna, testifying under the protection of the Canada Evidence Act, said that when he was called to the home on the night of Feb. 27, Mr. Disney was lying on the floor.

He said the patient told him he got out of bed to go to the bathroom, became dizzy and fell.

Dr. Fedyna testified he examined the man and suspected he had several broken ribs and other possible injuries.

He said he called an ambulance through the Metropolitan Toronto emergency services. All such calls are taped by the service.

Dr. Fedyna testified that the patient's neighbor, Ruby Vanstoke, 85, called him at his office the next day saying that Mr. Disney had stopped breathing.

An autopsy report showed that Mr. Disney died of a crushed spinal cord.

The inquest continues today.

Matter of Taste

NEW YORK (AP) — Baby may not arrive with a silver spoon in his mouth but chances are he is equipped with his very own sweet tooth. Researchers at the University of Pennsylvania's Monell Chemical Senses centre offered two-day-old babies a variety of waters — plain, sweet, salty and even sour. The majority of infants preferred the sugar water.

Paul — Dawson

Linda Marilyn Dawson and Paul V. Paul exchanged wedding vows April 20 in a late afternoon ceremony at St. Mark's United Church, Cannifton.

The bride is the daughter of Evelyn Dawson, Corbyville, and the late Edward Dawson. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Paul, Fredericton, New Brunswick.

Rev. J.L. Morrison conducted the service.

Gale Dawson, the bride's sister, wore a yellow crepe gown with matching cape and carried a yellow rose. Jill Sullivan, who also attended the bride, wore a blue crepe gown.

Ring-bearers were Steven Sullivan and Shane Hannafin.

Carl Geen, groomsman, was assisted by Jack MacDonald, Del Williams and Larry Hannafin.

After a dinner and dance at the Four Seasons, the couple left on a wedding trip to the east coast.

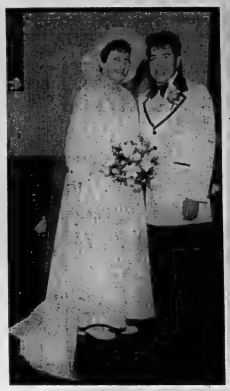
Anniversary Celebrated



"Live a day at a time" and make the most of your life together" were given as two essential ingredients for a happy marriage by Margaret Doyle, who, with her husband John, celebrated 25 years of married life on Sunday, May 12.

The day began with attendance at a mass of thanksgiving with members of their family in Sacred Heart Church, Marmora, the same church in which they were married on May 12, 1909. During the service, Rev. T. G. Scanlon extended congratulations and best wishes on behalf of the parish to Mr. and Mrs. Doyle. A Papal blessing from Pope Paul is expected to arrive this week.

A reception at the church hall Sunday afternoon was attended by many friends and relatives including Mrs. Doyle's only surviving sister, Mrs. Ida Hall of Agincourt, and Mr. Doyle's sister, Mrs. Margaret Forestell of Oshawa.

One of 12 children, John Doyle was born in 1884 and raised in Marmora township. He farmed all his life until he retired 16 years ago, and moved into Marmora village, where Mrs. Doyle, the former Margaret Anastasia Gillen, was born 81 years ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Doyle have four daughters and two sons, all of whom were with them on Sunday for the celebration. They are Miss Ida and Miss Rose Doyle, Mrs. Vincent (Margaret) Torpey and Mrs. Gordon (Teresa) Simmons, all of Peterborough, William of Marmora township and Bernard of Marmora village. In addition, 18 of their 19 grandchildren were present.

MR. AND MRS. PAUL PAUL

MR. AND MRS. ALEC SIMMONS

Given by her brother Blaine Young, the bride wore a gown of sheer over net and sharkskin with a high mandarin neckline, a front yoke of lace and seed pearls and long lace sleeves. The attached train had a flounce of Alencon lace and the lace-edged two-tier veil fell from a Juliette cap trimmed with ribbon.

The bride's sister, Beverly Young, maid of honor, wore a dress with an empire waist, mandarin neckline, long sleeves with a frill at the elbows, and a full skirt trimmed with a border of flowers at the hem.

Bridesmaids were Carol Callaghan, the bride's sister, Christine Simmons, the groom's sister, and Ann Young, the bride's sister-in-law, in gowns similar to the maid of honor's but in blue, green and yellow respectively.

Asparagus—a Taste of Spring

Ontario's peak asparagus season begins now and will continue until mid-June.

Buy firm straight stalks with tightly closed tips. Store in an unsiled polybag or perforated polybag in your refrigerator crisper. for no more than a few days.

Eat asparagus raw in salads, steamed or simmered as a vegetable or marinate parboiled stalks in wine vinegar and oil with favorite herbs for a sophisticated hors d'oeuvre.

The versatile vegetable makes a tasty luncheon dish when served on toast with cream sauce or a sharp cheddar cheese sauce. Or try adding cooked pieces to a favorite quick recipe.

Asparagus with Sour Cream

Wash 2 lbs fresh asparagus. Break off each stalk as far down as it snaps easily. Cook covered, in 1 inch boiling water in a large skillet until fork tender — 5 to 8 minutes. Drain and serve immediately with Sour Cream Sauce.

Sauce

¼ cup fresh tomatoes
½ cup sour cream
½ tsp. salt
Freshly ground pepper
⅛ tsp. dried basil
½ tsp. sugar
1 tsp. paprika

Chop and peel tomato.

Mix all ingredients together in a double boiler. Stir over simmering water until heated thoroughly.

Asparagus Casserole

8 ozs. elbow macaroni
3 cups diced, cooked ham
10 oz. can cream of chicken soup
¼ cup milk or stock
½ cup minced onion
1 tsp. salt
1 tsp. dried basil
½ tsp. poultry seasoning
¼ tsp. garlic salt
¼ tsp. ground pepper
1 lb. asparagus
3 thsp. fine bread crumbs
2 tbsp. grated Parmesan cheese
2 tbsp. butter

Cook macaroni in boiling, salted water according to package directions. Drain well. Combine with next 9 ingredients. Place half this mixture in a buttered large shallow baking dish (about 12 by 7 inches). Cut each stalk of asparagus in 3 pieces and arrange over macaroni layer. Top with remaining macaroni mixture. Top with combined crumbs and cheese. Dot with butter. Bake in a 350 oven until lightly browned and bubbling hot about 1 hour.

Asparagus with Mayonnaise

1 lb. asparagus
¼ cup mayonnaise
½ cup sour cream
½ tsp. salt
dash pepper
1 medium tomato, peeled, and diced

Cook asparagus as directed above.

Snap off and discard woody base of asparagus stalks. Cook covered in small amount of boiling salted water for eight minutes or until tender. (Avoid overcooking tips by propping them out of the water with crushed foil, or cook spears upright in a deep narrow pan, with stalks in boiling water and tips in steam) Drain and chill.

Combine mayonnaise, sour cream, salt and pepper. Stir in diced tomato. Cut a slice from top of the large tomato and scoop out the pulp. Spoon half of dressing into hollow tomato; place tomato in center of serving platter and arrange bundles of asparagus (three to four stalks in each) around it. Drizzle bundles with remaining dressing and garnish with tomato wedges. Makes 6 servings.

Successful Living

She Wants Active Life

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Koris: My Husband passed away suddenly. I am 63; I feel alone and cooped up when I am in the house, so I get out and go down town and feel better.

I would like to meet someone like my husband. He did not smoke or drink; enjoyed dancing, as I do. Maybe I am asking too much, but when one gets to be 60 years old and you don't know how many years you have left, you want to enjoy yourself.

I have a nice family, son and daughter, and they are anxious for me to keep going.

Not Dead Yet.

Dear Not Dead: Nobody can keep you from dreaming up the kind of man you would like to meet, but that is incorrect to you that many a woman has never experienced the kind of entirely happy marriage you enjoyed for many years? Now is the time for you to reach out in kindness toward others who need what you have to give.

Your son and daughter want you to keep going. They are right. Next time you go down town drop in at the Y.W.C.A. or community recreation centre. Or the volunteer bureau. Express an interest in giving a helping hand in some area of work or suport which is familiar to you.

Happiness will catch up with you some place along the line.

Dear Doris: We are putting on a Golden Wedding dinner for our Mom and Dad, in a very nice inn. Some of those who are coming are close friends who knew my parents before they were married.

I know they will be bringing gifts, even though we have made it clear that nobody is expected to bring anything. Would it be proper to open any gifts and display them, or would it be better to wait until later?

Half Century Celebration.

Dear Half Century: From the sound of your letter your affair will have the extra warmth of a loving and close family. Your Mom and Dad must treasure some golden memories.

Since gifts are not expected - nor should they be - opening any might be an embarrassment to guests who arrive empty-handed, having brought nothing but themselves and their happy congratulations. Gifts should be opened later and special notes of appreciation written to the givers.

Dear Doris: This time I want to report that the little daughter who was born with a congenital hip is now walking perfectly, a year later. She was in a cast and then a brace for seven months and I was in total despair. Then it all turned out fine and we thanked God we were lucky.

I wish I knew of someone with a little baby with the same kind of trouble she had. I'd be glad to encourage her. Perhaps people who read this will be helped. I needed it most. Medical science is wonderful and "I am grateful for you and for my doctors."

Glad.

Dear Glad: I'm glad too. It is great to have a report of success. And now that the going is easy, we all rejoice with you.

(Doris receives 10,000 letters a year, from readers. Please remember to supply the stamp for your reply, addressing your letter to her in care of this newspaper.)

Astronauts' 'Sexual Sabbatical'

Dear Ann Landers: I am curious about a certain aspect of the U.S. space program that has never been discussed publicly. Will you try to lift the veil?

Since our society has become so sex conscious, and any married man who abstains for an extended period of time is considered an oddity, what measures are taken, if any, to minimize or curb the astronauts' desires?

Their "sexual sabbatical" should serve as an incentive to wayward husbands who find it necessary to be away from their wives for extended periods of time. It might help them reassess their motives before they decide to stray.—Not In Orbit

Dear Not: Your statement that "any married man who abstains from sex for an extended period of time is an oddity" is an opinion (yours), not a fact.

It's ridiculous to suggest, as you do, that every married man who went to war, or serves in the peacetime armed forces, the merchant marine, or dozens of other occupations that separate families for long periods, plays around. If you believe that, I'd say you are the oddity.

As for the astronauts, only they can answer your question. Anyone in Houston want to respond to the lady's question?

Dear Ann Landers: I am a 13-year-old boy. I have slept in the same bed with my mother every night since dad died three years ago.—I never thought there was anything wrong with it.

Last week mom told me I would have to sleep in the room I slept in before dad died. I asked her why and she said, right. Too bad she took you into "because it isn't healthy." How her bed in the first place. Even though your mother is your mother, she is still a member of the opposite sex. Mother-son relationships under the best of conditions can become too "heavy." This can cause problems. Please don't consider yourself rejected because you're not healthy—and she is mother finally got smart.

Dear Steady: What your mother means is, if isn't economically healthy—and she is

First Women Become OPP

TORONTO (CP) — The first 19 women to become provincial policewomen received their postings in the mail today, ending a 65-year period of total male domination of the Ontario force.

Among them are a mechanic's wife, winery executive's secretary, college student, boutique manager, store detective, and factory worker.

In February, provincial police announced that beginning in May, women would be accepted into the force, treated as equals with policemen and paid the same.

They will carry service revolvers, billies and handcuffs, and be given extra physical training with emphasis on self-defence.

The first 10, plus another five to be announced shortly, will begin a police training course here May 27 and be part of a class of 45.

After that they will receive on-the-job training in police detachments then go to Aylmer, Ont., for a 12-week course at the Ontario Police College.

Diane Brock of Exeter, for 10 years a provincial police secretary, summed up the situation this way:

"I just want to do a really good job. As the first women on the force we'll be on a position of being noticed, good and bad."

Mrs. Brock is married to a mechanic. She has a four-year-old daughter and knows she must accept a posting anywhere in the province.

"I can't stand being at home and I'm interested in this kind of work. It'll be a challenge for me. I can do it."

She said her parents will help by babysitting and her husband John is "all for it, much, to my amazement."

"And he can just shout work anywhere, too. He's a good body mechanic as well as a car salesman."

Cheryl Baker of St. Catharines, executive's secretary, said her boss supports her move.

"He said it was a heck of a good challenge and he's glad for me. He knows sitting behind a desk isn't my thing. I like working with people."

Sandra Watters, 22, of Sudbury took a law and security course at Cambrian College for two years and does not worry about violence.

"You get a lot farther using your intelligence instead of your fists," she said.

The other women chosen are Mary Ann Burns, 22, a Mount Forest secretary; Ilona Rewald, 21, Dundas; Brenda Stuart, 23, boutique manager in Windsor; Wendy Joyce Wilson, Parry Sound; Kathryn Jean Macrow, London; Nancy Jane Grossmith, 21, and Joan Catherine Lotus, 26 both of Toronto.

They are the first of 45 women to be recruited this year and Chief Inspector Fred Blocher said "no limit has been set" on the number of women who will be allowed into the force.

BGH Governors Honor Volunteers

Enjoying a cup of tea at the Belleville General Hospital annual Governors' Tea for volunteers are, clockwise, Pat Boals, Jennie LeBreton, Jessie Warner, Marion Tounsley, Dorothy Dimment and Gertrude Daugherty. The women were among 300 volunteers invited to the tea Tuesday. They were received by the auxiliary president, Lillian Ashley. Bessie Marsh, representing the board of governors. Kerry Marshall, director of nursing and Raymond Krock, assistant executive director of the hospital. Charlotte Hollefelder convened the tea.

'No Justice For Women'

NEW YORK (AP) — Karen DeCrow says there is no justice for women as long as the law is made and administered by men.

"We must have women lawyers and judges, women in Congress, women police officers — the whole system has to change," she said in an interview here.

The Syracuse, N.Y., lawyer and political activist has written a book, Sexist Justice, explaining problems women have with the law.

"The whole time I was in law school I thought I should write this as a service to women. I found that many women didn't understand what was happening in law even when they read about it."

Her feminist analysis of the legal system indicates, she said, that women have fared miserably under the law even in decisions that went "for" them.

NEED GENDER-FREE LAW

Ms. DeCrow, the title she prefers, said the country needs gender-free law. "I don't believe there's a place in the law for the words man or woman. We're all persons."

Ms. DeCrow decided to go to law school when she was 31. She has been on the national board of the National Organization for Women since 1968.

"Often problems women have are quasi-legal. I thought of the law as a good profession and a very useful tool for the women's movement. So I signed up for law school at Syracuse University.

At 36, she is involved in lecturing to many groups around the country. She also teaches a community college class on women and the law.

"I try to teach a theoretical class but there's always somebody who has one of the problems we're learning about."

One area of the law which needs feminist change, she said, is family law. In many states, a man need not pay wages to his wife who works in his business. In some community property states, the property is managed and controlled solely by the husband. The law of names is also a puzzle, she added.

County Costs Climb

Inflation has struck again for Hastings county operations.

The county roads and bridges committee told councillors Tuesday that as a result of bids for brush kill chemicals, calcium chloride and other materials, road construction and road maintenance costs will be high this year.

Also, county workers are looking for higher pay and, in keeping with the trend, councillors have voted themselves a raise in pay for attending committee and council sessions.

The honoraria paid to councillors for attending council and committee meetings will be raised from $27.50 a day to $30 and will be retroactive to January 1 this year.

Also, the honorarium paid to the warden will be increased from $5,500 to $6,000.

And effective immediately, councillors attending conventions on behalf of the county will be paid $50 per diem, plus their registration fee, and transportation costs.

Mileage allowance will be increased by 15 cents a mile for the first 10,000 miles and eight cents a mile for over 10,000 miles.

Previously the mileage rate was 15 cents a mile for the first 5,000 miles and seven cents for the next 5,000 and seven cents for everything over 10,000.

The personnel committee report also noted that Mrs. Patricia Soutter, field worker for the social services department will be resigning July 12.

Dennis Heasman, senior technician with the county road department has been named county weed inspector to replace Earl Mackey who resigned last July to take a position with the provincial government.

Since the last council session a personnel, purchasing officer and deputy clerk has been hired by the county. He is Garry Williams, 28, of Frankford, former personnel officer with the CNR who also has purchasing experience with the T. Eaton Company.

Councillor Wants Help

A Belleville city councillor who aimed at cutting costs in building pleasure-boat docks for Belleville wants volunteers to help complete the final phase of his project.

The docks, which will accommodate 40 boats, now are ready for the final assembly stages and floating in the Moira River.

The project was launched last year by Ald. Meeks, who cut corners by personally seeking out bargain buys from suppliers and appealing for volunteer labor.

Work begins on the final stages at 9 a.m.

Garage Gutted

Sidney Township volunteer firefighters fought for 20 minutes to bring tinder control a blaze that eventually gutted a garage owned by A. McFarland on the Trent Road. The garage was used for storing tools and several antique buggies and it was not known if it was insured. There were no injuries in the Tuesday afternoon blaze.

Study Will Determine Thurlow Water Rate

The Belleville Utilities Commission will undertake a study to set a rate for selling water to Thurlow township once necessary servicing mains are in the ground.

The study, to be done in consultation with Gore and Storrie, Toronto consulting engineers, is expected to be complete within a month.

The move, approved by the commission Tuesday, follows receipt of provincial ministry of environment estimates of water. Thurlow expects to use within the next 20 years.

Water cost estimates are expected to go before city council soon. Recently, council received resolutions setting down conditions under which an exchange of Belleville water would be made for Thurlow land west of the city.

Monday, council put off discussion of Thurlow's conditions until the BUC report is before it.

Tied up with the proposal to service Thurlow is the construction of a 16-inch water main from Bell Blvd. across to Adam St. Water for the Carrollton area would be delivered from a network of mains hooked into the 16-inch main ending at Adam St.

Ministry estimates place Thurlow average 20 year water usage in 1984 at 280,000 gallons, with a peak of 420,000 gallons a day. In another ten years, estimates are that Thurlow's average water requirement would rise to 840,000 gallons daily, with a maximum of 1,680,000 gallons.

By comparison, in 1973, the city used 8,840,000 gallons on its peak day. No estimates are available to indicate the percentage of total city water production Thurlow would use in the future.

In speaking to commissioners Tuesday, general manager Neil Brinton said consultation with Gore and Storrie will give the BUC an idea of the effect increased water usage will have on the entire water delivery system.

He added, "I would like confirmation that the main capacity for water flow is adequate."

As to water cost, it will likely be higher than the wholesale price of water. The rate to the township should reflect the investment value that city water users have put into water treatment and carrying facilities.

Such costs are not reflected in existing water costs to city users, said Mr. Britton.

The request was for a veterinarian to be stationed in Belleville. Northern municipalities have agreed to contribute financially.

Reeve S. J. Carr of Monteagle township told council that additional veterinarian service was badly needed in the north end of the county.

Recently, he said, one farmer had four of his cows drop dead and the cause of their death still hadn't been determined.

Not Yet for Vet

Farmers in North Hastings will have to wait at least another year before they receive the services of a second veterinarian.

A second veterinarian was requested some time ago for the Madawaska Veterinarian Unit by the county ARDA committee, but correspondence from Hon. William A. Stewart, Minister of Agriculture and Food, indicates the ministry cannot provide a second man this year.

Agricultural Representative Douglas Tipper of Stirling, in a letter to council, said he would continue to pursue the request for another year.

Enumerators Get Raise This Year

Enumeration remuneration is up.

Federal election enumerators even get paid for going to school this year.

Today is the deadline set under the election Act for political parties to recommend enumerators who will do the household canvass on which the voter's list is drawn.

The act stipulates that the two parties with the highest votes propose one enumerator each per poll in urban ridings. In Belleville this means the Liberals and Conservatives.

Reg Dunham, returning officer for Hastings riding, says he will instruct all Belleville enumerators who will do the household canvass on which the voter's list is drawn.

Reg Dunham, returning officer for Hastings riding, says he will instruct all Belleville enumerators who will do the household canvass on which the voter's list is drawn.

This election, for the first time, enumerators get $10 for attending each instruction periods, says Mr. Dunham.

In all, a poll enumerator will earn about $90 in Belleville this election. Enumeration payments also include $25 flat pay, 18 cents for each name collected and $5 for delivery of name lists.

In Belleville the average poll should produce about 250 names, says Mr. Dunham.

The riding returning officer himself is responsible for appointing enumerators in rural poll.

This year there are about 20 new polls in Belleville — mostly designated by the initials A or B.

Reason for this is that the national election computer program identifies all polls in Belleville up to the total 84. Higher numerals are rural polls, so a combination of initials and numerals designate the new city polling areas.

Executive Elected

The 1974-75 executive of Park Dale Home and School Association has been elected and installed by Principal Bernard Wright.

Members are: past president, Mrs. Selma Bochenek; president, Hugh Scharf; first vice-president and council representative, John Gibson, second vice-president and program chairman Dan Willock; treasurer, Mrs. Eva Uhrynuk; recording secretary, Mrs. Sheila Smith; corresponding secretary, Miss Phyllis Beattie; public relations, Mrs. Joan Hazard; Barbara Smith; hospitality chairman, Mrs. Linda Bailey; social convener, Mrs. Myrtle Bushell; special projects chairman, Mrs. Sylvia Curry; fun fair convener, Mrs. Shirley Matthies.

Queen of the Fair

The spring Quinte Exhibition may be over and while the rain may have cut into its success this year, there's no denying that a pretty girl can brighten up any situation. Such is the case with the girl chosen Queen of the Fair, 17-year-old Kaywell Jones. Kaywell is from Bermuda but attends courses at the Ontario Business College here. This is only the second beauty competition she has entered. She represented her school at this year's Winter Carnival Queen pageant in February.

Regional Recreation Committee to Be Set Up

By AL EARAS
Staff Reporter

In the near future, a public meeting of Sidney residents will be called by township council on the initial stage in the formation of a standing recreation committee in Sidney.

This action follows a recommendation made during a joint meeting of 10 municipal officials of Sidney and Thurlow township and Frankford Tuesday. It was suggested informal talks to discuss a possible Quinte regional recreation scheme, including an area arena, be undertaken by representatives of all Quinte recreation committees.

However, it was noted Sidney lacked a standing recreation committee. At present, only an ad hoc committee exists. But its work is now complete with the recent presentation to Sidney council of a brief calling for an ice surface in the township.

To get regional recreation talks under way, Reeve Gordon Wilman told the assembly his township will call a public meeting at which nominations will be accepted for committee membership, from among those nominated, the township will appoint at most 12 persons to its standing committee.

Three Sidney committee members would subsequently be delegated to attend such regional talks. Other area municipalities would also send three people.

The push for regional talks comes as an outgrowth of concern that individual municipalities could not afford to build a needed ice surface outside of Trenton or Belleville.

Neither Sidney nor Thurlow have arenas. Sirling is in the process of getting funds, to replace its tiny arena. Only Frankford and Batawa have arenas at present.

Officials felt Tuesday that cost sharing and municipal co-operation in building an ice surface could possibly overcome high construction costs.

Thurlow councillor George Beer said cost sharing for a possible arena on the township line between Sidney and Thurlow can be built "without interrupting anyone else's program".

"It doesn't matter whose side of the fence it sits on as long as the need is filled," he said. He said his previous work in minor hockey exemplifies the "co-operation" that would be needed.

For nine years prior to the 1973 season, the Thurlow councillor coached a Belleville hockey team that practised at the Stirling arena. Ice time in Belleville was and remains limited.

It is expected Sidney council will shelve a recent recommendation to build a $350,00 arena in the township until such time as a decision is made by the committee to be formed to discuss a regional recreation - arena scheme.

Restructuring Study Turned Down by County

Hastings county council will take no immediate action in joining with Belleville and Trenton to request the Ontario Ministry of Treasury, Economics and Intergovernmental Affairs to conduct a study into how the region could conceivably lead to restructuring of municipal organization.

Belleville and Trenton already have passed resolutions requesting such a study and asked for similar action by the county.

But Tuesday, at its May session, the county body referred the matter to its municipal reform committee for recommendation.

The committee report is expected to be ready for council at the June meeting.

Discussion on the requests for restructuring met a setback for the study, took up much of the Tuesday morning council session, which ended with the referral motion from Dungannon Reeve Calvin White.

Tweed Reeve Barbara Allen, chairman of the county municipal reform committee, in her report to council, noted that preliminary discussions relating to possible restructuring of the Belleville-Trenton area had been held by representatives of Belleville, Trenton, Sidney, Thurlow, Frankford and Murray township.

But neither the county nor representatives from the county's municipal reform committee attended.

Her understanding was that any study undertaken would have to be requested by the councils of Belleville, Trenton and Hastings county. If approved, by the ministry, the cost of the study would be subsidized 50 per cent by the province to a maximum contribution of $50,000.

Warden Jack McKenzie told council that it was time "we do something."

Thurlow Reeve Horace Casey said his hope was that Belleville and Trenton sence day become part of Hastings county but as matters stood at present his municipality had to look to Belleville for sewer and water services to make development possible.

"I don't know what the county can do for us," he said, adding that the time had come for a serious look.

Sidney Reeve Gordon Wilman took much the same view stating that something should be done by the county as a whole or else it "would be done for us."

As it was, developers owning land in the township on the city's edge could not get city services nor could they get land splits.

Bancroft Reeve Jack Hattin said the municipal reform committee should determine what Sidney and Thurlow required and get their feelings on what the county should do before making any recommendation to council.

Madoc township reeve George Wood wondered if the county committee had possibly erred in leaving out Belleville and Trenton when last year it recommended amalgamation of county municipalities reducing the number to 12.

The proposal failed to get council approval but Reeve Allen said the reason Belleville and Trenton had not been included in the proposals was that they are autonomous municipalities in their own right.

"We could, not make decisions for them," she said.

The Tweed reeve said that Hastings wanted to remain as it was.

In her opinion, the county had good government and she suggested that a study undertaken by the province could very well reveal what Hastings councillors already knew.

They might recommend that only minor boundary changes were necessary.

Hungerford reeve Bill McCrea suggested that Belleville and Trenton were apparently concerned only with Sidney and Thurlow and were not so interested in the rest of the county.

Reeve Calvin White agreed, but said it was time that some over-all, long-range planning was done.

With industrial development in the south, industry would be driving from Bancroft every day to Belleville, he said.

The south (of the county) needs the north just as much as the north needs the south," he said.

His recommendation that the request for the study be referred to the municipal reform committee was carried.

Hun Fun

During one of the final dress rehearsals Tuesday, Martha Bishop gets into the swing of things with her character as the co-actor stalks the Hun played by Moira Secondary School student Bob Miller. The students are two of a cast of approximately 35 who open Molrantics at the school tonight at 8 p.m. The variety show, liberally laced with humorous skits, concludes an exploration of the theme, Past, Present, Future, with a Guy called Man, on Thursday.

Moirantics Opens Tonight

Two months of writing, one month of hard work, and several days of frenetic activity will ease Moira Secondary School tonight and Thursday at 8 p.m.

Any rough spots in the production were ironed out Tuesday and today during final dress rehearsals. Now, it's a set to go.

Based on a theme, Past, Present, Future with a Guy called Man, the variety show will place man's history in what staff advisor Steve Forrester hopes are "humorous skits."

All told, 12 of the 30 acts haphazardly trace man's disturbance of the planet through the ages. Adam and Eve, the dinosaur, Attila the Hun adds his comments, as does Sigmund Freud.

Except for a couple, all the skits were written by a core group of students over a two-month period, said show director Steve Boie Tuesday. Producing the revual school show of John Steadman.

"The biggest lesson we not, your cup of tea, then music by the senior school band should banish the classroom atmosphere. On the piano, student Lee Stratton holds up the musical end of the evening.

In looking at some two months of work, the grade 13 director, Steve Bone, said "I don't think we got as much student co-operation as we did last year."

Bone was chief of the skit writing team last year, Stu Arnott, now at Toronto's York University studying drama, was the director.

However, he said this year there was a change. In 1973, students were asked to bring in skits, whereas for this production, most of the skits were conceived by a team of writers. Auditions to fill parts were opened to the entire school.

Production staff are expecting a good response from the public. In previous years, the response has been "overwhelming," said Mr. Forrester.

Tickets for the two-night stand are available at the door — 50-cents for students, $1 for adults.

Candidates Declared

At least two candidates are in the running for nomination as Hastings NDP standard-bearer in the July 8 federal election.

They are: Bob Sanders, 52, a medical-social worker at Belleville General Hospital, and Elmer Buchanan, 57, a Tweed high school teacher.

The NDP nominating meeting for the riding will be held this Friday at 7.30 p.m. at the Belleville Kiwanis Centre.

New Trash Cans For Downtown

Alderman Roger Porter Monday asked city council permission for the Downtown Improvement Association to place 12 new garbage receptacles at agreed locations. The present containers would be turned over to the city, the alderman said.

The works department will install and maintain the garbage receptacles.

The alderman said the association has had 30 containers built by the city parks board staff.

Louis Auchincloss Lawyer and Author

NEW YORK (AP) — There are times when Louis Auchincloss sits at the desk in his Wall Street, law firm office and writes a short story or works on a novel. And there are times when he sits in the privacy of his New York home practising law.

Auchincloss is one of those rare people who has managed to combine two distinct careers successfully, although he admits the combining was a "long, tortured" procedure that took a great deal of stress and misery to bring off.

The 56-year-old Auchincloss leaned back from his desk and said: "My time is pretty much my own. If I want to write in the office and practise law at home I can. Of course, there are certain things which I have to produce for the firm (in which he is a partner handling mostly estates and trusts) and I do them. But I find that if my writing goes well my law practice seems to go well also."

Auchincloss, who has written 24 books, the latest a novel called The Partners, said: "None of my family ever wrote, but I always wanted to be a writer. I didn't get any encouragement, so I gave up the idea and went to law school.

"You see, I grew up with the idea that writing was not a man's game. The law, business, medicine were the proper fields for men in the bourgeois New York world I grew up in. But not writing."

After four years of Second World War naval service, Auchincloss practised law until 1953, when he dropped out (or try his hand at being a full-time writer.

"I didn't have much money," he said "and if my father hadn't helped me out I don't think I could have swung it from the writing alone."

He published a couple of novels during this period but decided to return to law practice in 1954 because "I found I was writing less as a full-time writer than I had been as a lawyer-writer.

"I wanted to see if I could make it as a writer and found that at the time there was no economic future in it. All of my contemporaries were making money, and I was out of step. So I went back to the law and things all worked out very fortunately."

Auchincloss, a relaxed man who speaks precisely, said many of his books each of which takes him about a year to write—"get a lot of inspiration from my work, although not all of them deal with the law."

One that does is The Partners, which deals with a New York law firm and especially with one of its senior partners, Beekman (Beeky) Ehninger. "The general theme of the book is the degeneration of the moral values of the past," said Auchincloss. "That is why I deliberately made Beeky a small man, to emphasize this degeneration."

Following completion of the book, Auchincloss wrote a television script—divided into six one-hour segments, based on Edith Wharton's novel House of Mirth.

LONDON- (CP) — Novelist Beryl Bainbridge knows the frustration of an artist whose work goes unnoticed.

Yet after 13 years of writing, Miss Bainbridge appears to be coming into her own. In 1973 her book The Dressmaker was a strong contender for Britain's top literary prize, The Booker, which carries an award of £5,000.

Her first novel, Harriet Said, was written 12 years ago but not published until 1972. Publishers had told her that her manuscripts, each of which contain a murder, were too sinister and psychological to be popular.

Of Harriet Said, one publisher told Miss Bainbridge in 1960: "No printer would touch it. The theme is so repulsive. . . ."

"The murders are not important to my novels," the 45-year-old writer says. "I think I use them as a detective story writer might. If you find a body at the beginning, then you have a framework for the rest of the novel, which is to find out why."

The Dressmaker concerns two elderly sisters who watch with dismay as a young American soldier billeted in Liverpool pays court to their niece. Naturally, he comes to an untimely end.

Miss Bainbridge's novels are characteristic in their settings; she uses the color of her home town, Liverpool, during the Second World War. The main figures in her stories are drawn from people she once knew.

"I'm obsessed by people's pasts . . . that's why I wrote about that period," Miss Bainbridge says.

"Everything's gone that reminds us of those days, perhaps the photograph album.

"Maybe it's only my generation that is so obsessed with the past because we have seen a whole way of life vanish."

The writer herself could not easily be recognized as the creator of macabre or sinister situations. A mother of three, she is a likely extrovert who laughs a lot and enjoys talking.

Miss Bainbridge says she comes from an ordinary family. As a teen-ager she studied drama and ballet at a special school. Prior to her marriage to a painter, she trained as an actress on repertory with the Liverpool Playhouse.

"I'm frightened now of embarking on my next novel," she says. "That's what a reputation does for you." But she says it will be set in a bottle factory owned by an Italian family that resides in England.

What comes after that? Miss Bainbridge says she would like to give her macabre streak a rest and write a comedy.

Ice Hampers Fishermen In Newfoundland Seas

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Newfoundland fishermen, who were hoping for an early April start in the inshore fishery this year were hampered by ice and poor weather.

While there were no heavy concentrations of arctic ice as in 1971, many areas had severe local ice conditions.

Hardest hit was the west coast where ice conditions played havoc with the herring fishery and set the lobster season back by at least two weeks.

Captains of vessels operating in the Bay of Islands and Gulf of St. Lawrence reported that ice formations were the worst ever experienced.

The ocean in this area began to freeze up last December and by early January it was almost impossible to navigate. The weather office reported the coldest January since 1870.

By early February some 80 miles of local ice was interfering with shipping and one vessel was stuck off Corner Brook for 18 days.

While ice was slowing up shipping in the west, prolonged northwesterly and westerly gales were bringing problems in the east.

In Placentia and Trinity bays fishing wharves and stores were destroyed by pounding seas.

By early January, foreign fishing ships and local freighters arriving in St. John's were completely covered by ice above the waterline.

When the Finnish paper carrier Adony arrived in the Notre Dame Bay shipping port of Botwood Feb. 2, Capt. Bengt Solderland described the Atlantic crossing as the worst in his 40 years at sea. The normal eight-day trip from Amsterdam took three weeks.

By mid-February ice in Botwood harbor was 20 inches thick and the icebreaker Sir Humphrey Gilbert was continually working in the area.

The cold and stormy winter saw a number of ships go down while others came to grief on the sea-swept shoreline.

The first casualty of the winter weather was the 45-foot longliner Hazel Wanda, which sank in Placentia Bay near the end of last year. The three-man crew was picked up by a Finnish freighter.

Three more ships went to the bottom early this year. The longliner Miss Stephenville was crushed by ice and sank off the Baie Verte Peninsula and her three-member crew was saved.

Another three men were rescued from a lifeboat by the passing CN ferry Ambrose Shea when their boat slipped under the sea between North Sydney, N.S., and Port aux Basques, Nfld.

Eight fishermen were rescued from a Portuguese trawler that went to the bottom of Placentia Bay with almost a half million pounds of fish in her holds.

Early in January a transport ministry employee clearing snow at the Stephenville airport spotted distress flares over Port Harmon, which serves as the harbor for the town. Officials discovered the 200-foot freighter Medina Refiner hard aground at the entrance to the harbor.

The 2,000-ton ship was en route to Port Harmon to load a cargo of fish for Sweden and Poland.

Small boats braved the cold and windy night, heavy seas and several hundred feet of boulder-like lumps of ice to take off the 22 crew members.

Winter seas claimed another victim March 9 when the 80-foot herring seiner Silver King went aground several hundred yards from shore, six miles from Grand Bank on the Burin Peninsula.

The four men aboard took to a lifeboat but it was swamped. Three young men who happened to be driving by on the road saw the fishermen's plight and ran into the water to help them swim to shore.

Road Signs Being Made Attractive

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — As part of its campaign to clean up the countryside, the Prince Edward Island government has introduced a three-phase program to eliminate unsightly road signs.

The first phase involved signs for three scenic drives and the second covered the installation of community name signs.

The third phase consists of a new series of signs to replace existing off-premise ones.

The new signs, which still are experimental, are both informational and directional and are divided into three sections.

The first section carries a color-coded symbol which explains the service being offered. The middle section has the name of the establishment while the third section has a directional arrow and the distance in miles to the establishment.

Each sign is seven feet long and 18 inches high and is made of aluminum with reflectorized white letters on a black background. It is mounted on double white posts with no more than five signs on any one set of posts.

Where more than 10 signs are required, an information stop will be built. It will be a highway pull-off where plaques will be grouped under a roof-like structure and lighted at night.

These plaques will be color-coded but will be shaped so that the name of the establishment appears in the top one-third.

The system will be tested first in the eastern end of the Island. Until the new signs prove themselves, all existing off-premises signs will be left where they are.

Syrup-making Goes Modern

CEDAR HILL, Ont. (CP) — For more than 10 years Len Fulton and Oliver Toop cut 45 cords of firewood each winter for Mr. Fulton's maple syrup operation.

Every spring, after a few hours of feeding the wood burners beneath the syrup pans, the men would be driven bleary-eyed from the smoke-filled shack.

When not firing the burners they were out collecting sap from more than 3,000 maple trees and hauling it to the shack on horse-drawn sleighs.

Two years ago Mr. Fulton installed oil-fired burners with regulated temperatures that boil the sap in the big evaporators. Since then he has centralized his automation of one of the largest maple sugar operations in eastern Ontario.

The new arrangement is much like a mechanized farm milking unit. More than 3,000 taps in the big maples are hooked up to 25 miles of plastic pipe and the sap is driven to the boilers by electric vacuum pumps.

When the sap reaches the sugar house it flows to the first boiling vat. As the syrup gets thicker it automatically passes through four evaporating pans.

A gauge regulates the final steps of the operation and signals the exact time the syrup is to be poured into containers for straining and packaging.

The automatic system is not without its problems. Mr. Fulton said squirrels chew through the plastic pipe and seem to know what the line contains.

The pipe, set out during the winter and readied for attaching to the trees, is checked almost daily by Mr. Fulton's 15-year-old son Ross, who patrols the 20 miles of line by snowmobile. Another reason for checking is that some trees, after they have stopped running, will absorb sap back from the conveyor line.

Prisoners Trained As Firemen

AGASSIZ, B.C. (CP) — At the Agassiz Mountain prison compound recently, it was the staff who set fires and the prisoners who extinguished them.

It was not exactly a revolt in reverse but a revolution of sorts.

For the first time in the federal prison system, prisoners as well as staff were enrolled in fire prevention instruction given by the provincial fire marshal's department.

Staff took the basic fire-fighting course first, then prisoners who volunteered, with special emphasis on "hut cleaners" in the mountain-hugging medium - security institution about 70 miles east of Vancouver in the Fraser Valley.

"We're stressing the prisoners who clean the dormitories and huts because they're inside most of the time and would be the first to report a fire and act upon it," said acting works officer Ron Tipper.

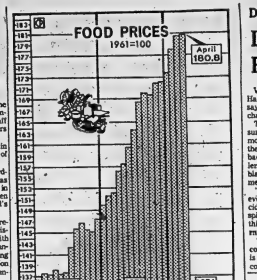
"Although all the buildings are made of metal, they have wood partitions and, with paint and everything, it wouldn't take long to get a building if a fire really got going.

"Also, there's not that much staff on duty at any given time, particularly on the evening and graveyard shifts, so if there was a big fire we would have to call on the prisoners for assistance."

The firefighting exercises are part of a larger purpose—community involvement. A prison crew might be called on to help fight brush or forest fires.

Along the same line, there are plans in train for a search-and-rescue team that would have the built-in prison advantage of instant mobilization.

"Knowing exactly where everyone is, we could provide manpower to the community within 15 or 20 minutes," said prison director Walter Mort.



Training will be carried out under an instructor who is a skilled mountaineer and a registered big-game guide.

The all-metal construction of Agassiz was no accident—Fire Prevention Week was almost invented there.

The prison was opened in 1963 to house members of the Sons of Freedom Doukhobor sect convicted of arson. Later, it was converted into a medium-security institution.

Not Beautiful

EDMONTON (CP) — Welfare is not beautiful, says an eight-page pamphlet published by the Bureau on Welfare Society. At best, it is a temporary stopover on the way up to something better and the best way to "rip off" the government is to take advantage of its upgrading and retraining services.

Food Prices Rise

The food prices index went up slightly in April to 180.8 from 180.5 in March, but increased restaurant prices were responsible. The section of the index dealing with food consumed at home — the housewife's grocery basket — actually went down 0.2, thanks to lower beef and pork prices. But the index of food consumed outside the home went up 1.8. The two sections make up the overall food prices index. The figures, based on 1961 prices equalling 100, were released by Statistics Canada Friday. (CP Newsmap).

Life Remains Same For Lottery Winner

GUELPH, Ont. (CP) — If you ever need to make contact with the Roy Brooks family, winners of $500,000 in the Olympic Canada Lottery, don't go looking in any of the world's exotic ports of call. You'll find them following their regular, unpretentious life style at their Guelph home.

Shortly after his ticket was drawn in the April lottery, Mr. Brooks, an accounting supervisor at Canadian General Electric, said he was numb from the experience. But now, things have settled down and the money has all been invested to form a safe and steady return, he said.

The only thing to do when one becomes rich: the 48-year-old father of four explains, "is try to be rational."

"You could go and blow $500,000 just like that," Mr. Brooks said, adding that his primary responsibility is to his daughters, aged nine to 11.

"The girls get a formal education during the day at school, but at night there is a certain degree of education they get called parental authority. When the kids come home at night, who's going to exhibit this parental authority when you're off chasing around the world?"

Mr. and Mrs. Brooks say that since acquiring their new-found fortune, they have been irked slightly by strangers giving eager advice on the best means of spending money, by high-pressure salesmen and persons seeking a partner in business investments.

But generally, "people haven't been overbearing."

Mrs. Brooks says the girls still earn their own money babysitting after school. "Some neighbors phoned to ask, 'are your kids still open for business?'" she said.

They definitely are, she advises such callers, adding that "we're carrying on just as before."

Consulting Residents

TORONTO (CP) — Metropolitan Toronto Council has voted to spend $900,000 in two years on a series of public meetings to discuss Metro's future growth. Public comment is invited on land use, urban and social structure, unemployment and housing.

Don't Sit Up Straight

Doctor Blames Chairs For Back Ailments

The Vancouver orthopedic surgeon, who has devoted most of his 25-year career to the study and treatment of backache and related problems, says chairs are to blame for most back ailments.

"All across the board—in every age category—the incidence of backache and spinal disorders is climbing in this country," said Dr. Fahrni.

"One of the main culprits contributing to back problems is the chair. As far as I'm concerned we should throw it out or at least cut the legs off.

"Better still we should sit on the floor, carpeted preferably, and on a cushion. Children who sit cross-legged on the floor, in front of a television set have adopted a natural healthy posture, one which places a minimum of strain on their spine."

Throughout British Columbia, physiotherapists are adopting the Fahrni program of exercises which teaches patients how to stand, sit and sleep to reduce or eliminate backache.

At Maquinna elementary school in Vancouver, conventional desks and chairs have been tossed out and children sit cross-legged on the floor, along with their teacher, during classes.

Other schools are showing interest in the Fahrni theory and are finding classroom space is doubled or tripled when the desks are removed.

In his own home, Dr. Fahrni and his family sit on cushions around a dinner table just six inches above their knees, creating a relaxed and therapeutic mealtime posture.

"If the average individual understood the structure of the spine, its curves and clac relation, he would soon realize why telling a child to sit up straight is so destructive," the doctor said.

Dr. Fahrni said that sitting up straight, with hips and shoulders against the back of a chair, accentuates the curve in the small of the back. When weight is placed from above on the slightly curved part of the spine, there is pressure on the discs between the vertebrae. If this pressure is sustained, a wearing-away effect takes place—similar to the wearing down of a heel—resulting in spinal disorder.

"By alternating our posture we can straighten the spine considerably and alleviate the pressure put on the discs."

Rather than sitting up straight in a chair, a person should slide the hips down and place the feet on a small stool which will bring the knees up and above the level of the hips, Dr. Fahrni said.

Office workers should slide their hips forward in their chairs and rest their feet on a lower or middle desk drawer.

Housewives can reduce back strain and fatigue by sitting on a chair and place their feet on its rungs or even on another chair while preparing a meal. And when a person is standing, it is relaxing to raise one foot on to a chair or stool.

While watching television, a person should sit on a cushion on the floor, with or without the back against a wall, hugging the knees.

"This is really a relaxing position for the spine and for most of us is a comfortable one," the doctor said.

Sleeping on the back with the legs outstretched or on the stomach is hard on the back, said Dr. Fahrni.

People with back problems should sleep on their sides, with the knees pulled toward the chin, almost in a fetal position.

Dr. Fahrni, assistant professor of orthopedics at the University of B.C., noted that in the jungle, the inhabitants assume natural squatting or sitting positions, which take the strain off the spine.

Belgians Suggest Canadians Denied All-out Air Support

BRUSSELS (CP) — A new Belgian book on a little-publicized but ferocious battle of the Second World War suggests that Canadian pleas for heavy air support were not wholly granted by the Allied command.

The battle raged in and around the key island of Walcheren which commands the Scheldt River approaches to Antwerp.

After taking Antwerp in September, 1944, the Allies still found themselves unable to use the great Belgian port as an entry point for supplies urgently needed by their forces driving against Nazi Germany.

The Germans continued to hold Walcheren and their antagonists—with Canadian troops playing a notable role—spent two months in the blood-soaked process of dislodging them.

The Canadians were most prominent in the necessary operation of first clearing the Germans from the stubbornly-defended terrain leading to the shores adjacent to Walcheren, which forms part of Holland.

Canadian generals who mapped plans for the ever-all assault on Walcheren insisted Sept. 23 "on the necessity for undertaking at the earliest time massive (air) attacks against Walcheren" as part of the softening-up effort, says the new book published in Brussels.

Attacks were made by the British Bomber Command, including a spectacular breaking of dikes along the island's low-lying coast, say authors Albert Baldewyns and Andre Herman Lemaire.

But Canadian generals H. D. G. Crerar and G. G. Simonds were unable to convince RAF chiefs of the need for additional intensive bombing and top Allied military men went along with the air force viewpoint.

This was the case despite Supreme Commander Dwight Eisenhower's promise of exceptional air support designed to achieve complete destruction of the Walcheren objectives, the Belgian authors continue.

They concede that the 19,218 tons of RAF bombs dropped on heavily-fortified Walcheren between Sept. 17 and Oct. 30, 1944, can be seen as "an important effort."

Yet it does not rank with the "fantastic tonnages dropped unceremoniously on the 3,200 tons unleashed in a single attack on Boulogne, the writers maintain.

"Finally it is worth recalling that Bomber Command attacked Cologne Oct. 28 with 763 planes, on the night of Oct. 30-31 with 866 and with 453 on Oct. 31-Nov. 1."

A total of 31,212 tons of bombs was dropped by the RAF on German cities in 30,220 sorties during October, 1944.

Baldewyns and Herman-Lemoine say one RAF chief promised to intervene at Walcheren with all available bombers.

"Perhaps did he mean all those that weren't required for the air offensive against Germany?" ask the two Belgians.

They add:

"It is probable that if Air Marshal Sir Arthur Harris (head of Bomber Command) had been informed of the real needs of Simonds at Walcheren, instead of being 'conditioned' by airmen dreaming only of bombing Germany, he would have sent more planes against the island and a few less against Cologne."

The Belgian book, published by Rossel Edition, Brussels, is called Les Batteries de Walcheren, a reference to the powerful German gun emplacements which commanded the mouth of the Scheldt and effectively blocked Antwerp.

Baldewyns retired from the Belgian army in 1973 as a colonel. Herman Lemoine is a journalist with a special interest in history.

At one point, the authors praise what they term the speed and order with which Canadian troops pressed their Hercegs resisted job of blazing the initial trail to the immediate environs of Walcheren.

The crack German troops were under orders from Hitler to concet every inch of the Walcheren front.

The Nazi leader fully realized the stark importance of denying the Allies use of a port made all the more essential by the perilously over-extended supply lines of their fast-advancing forces.

In one vicious series of actions—dubbed Operation Switchback—the 3rd Canadian infantry division lost 314 men killed and almost 2,000 wounded.

An additional entry read, "Thank God."

British and French commandos made a major contribution to the fina capture of Walcheren, where organized German resistance ended Nov. 8.

Only B.C. French Increasing

PORT ALBERNI, B.C. (CP) — British Columbia is the only province in Canada, including Quebec, where the number of residents speaking French as their mother tongue is on the increase, said Yves Margraff, information officer for the Federation des Francs-Columbiens.

He estimated the number of Francophone British Columbians at 60,000 to 70,000.

Every summer, Mr. Margraff travels the province visiting such places as this community on the west coast of Vancouver Island and tries to make "strangers in a strange land" feel at home.

"There are approximately 1,700 French-speaking people in the Alberni Valley and many of them have been here since the community was founded," he said.

Mr. Margraff said a significant number of French-Canadians came out as voyageurs with Simon Fraser, Alexander Mackenzie and David Thompson.

"As somebody once said, 'If it hadn't been for the voyageurs, whom else could the English have got to paddle their canoes?'"

One of the first families was that of Michel Saurault, who came here in 1883. His records are part of the display at the museum here.

The first school at Tofino was French-speaking and was started by the original Long families.

"They had 20 children between them, so they didn't have to look for enrolment," said Mr. Margraff.

He said Notre Dame parish in Port Alberni was founded by French-Canadians "and it was only last year that they stopped saying the mass in French."

He said he is surprised that there is little community organization among the French-speaking residents of the area.

"We find that the most active community groups outside of Vancouver, where you live in the 4,000 people of Maillardville, are in northern B.C."

He said isolation drives people of all ethnic origins to organize themselves into groups designed to share and spread their culture.

Mr. Margraff would like the government-sponsored federation to act as a liaison between the federal government and French Canadians in British Columbia to promote the exchange of films, performing artists and speakers between Quebec and B.C.

Hamlets Survive

TORONTO (CP)—The southern fringe of the metropolis is still largely in cow pasture and horse country.

Here, within hog-calling distance of the city, rustic hamlets like Teston, Purple, Snowball Corners and Kettleby are dots on a map.

Its rural country and the people want to keep it that way.

Maggie Smith, 85, took time out from the Teston United Church Ladies Sewing Circle to explain why.

"It's just that things haven't changed here. We can still look out the window and see the kind of land the good Lord intended use to see."

It's only when they look south that they can see the tips of the big city skyline.

While her sewing-circle colleagues nodded approval, Mrs. Smith continued: "Phooey, who needs the city? We've got all we need right here in the district."

Harry Parker, 59, is a retired Canadian Forces colonel who bought a 100-acre farm near Kettleby six years ago so he could enjoy country life and still be near Toronto.

But recently his enjoyment had been marred "by these quick-buck artists who want to splatter houses all over the whole landscape."

So he and about 200 people from King Township formed a ratepayers group opposing "the developers who want to cover everything with asphalt from Toronto to Barrie."

"We think it's nice for Toronto people to have some place to come to to see a real, live horse or a cow in a pasture."

Lately a number of part-time country folks have drifted into the area.

"It's worth it," he says. "We've got the best of both worlds."

"It just gives you a fantastic feeling to go shopping and greet the butcher and baker by name. There's more trust in the country."

Death an Impostor Says Nonagenarian

VANCOUVER (CP) — Paul C. Bragg, the man who developed tomato and pineapple juices and the health food store, doesn't smoke or drink, eats fertilized eggs, brain-breathes and can stand on his head for the longest time. He's 82.

And for all those years, he has been outwiting death.

"Death is an impostor! I've declared war on death," said Mr. Bragg, who at 16 was told he had only three months to live because of consumption.

From outward appearances, the tanned and fit biochemist and physiotherapist, in Vancouver recently under the sponsorship of the Canadian Health Food Dealers National Association, appears to be winning the war.

Mr. Bragg, author of more than 50 publications on health foods, launched the first modern health food store in the United States and introduced pineapple and tomato juice to the public.

Sitting in a hotel room, he became animated when he recalled watching pineapple juice dripping down a spout "into the ocean in Hawaii."

"There it was just dripping and then pouring again into the water—pineapple juice—so I asked my friend Jim Diamond about it and he took me over to see Mr. Dole.

"Well, Dole thought I was crazy when I told him about my idea and said if I wanted that stuff I could have it because all he did was throw it away.

"So I ordered 1,000 cases and before long I came back for more and Mr. Dole said no deal because the orders for more pineapple juice were pouring in and he wanted to start canning and selling it himself."

Mr. Bragg spotted similar waste in the tomato industry and turned it into profit.

Mr. Bragg, who gives lectures and works with emphysema, bronchitis and asthma patients in breathing techniques while home in Hawaii, is down on smoking.

"You could call me a breathetarian.

"They (his patients) are, or were, cigarette smokers and now they can't even breathe on their own, some of them. Nothing is as destructive to human cells as smoke."

At his lectures he discusses the art of super brain-breathing through which he can deliberately channel oxygen into parts of the body requiring it most, like the afflicted limb of a stroke victim."

Mr. Bragg exercises for two hours daily, eats lots of fresh raw vegetables and fruits, drinks fruit juices, eats yogurt, enjoys wheat germ and has a daily intake of vitamins, including the B complex there's nothing like.

"But make no mistake about it, vitamins aren't going to do anything for the person who takes them instead of eating wholesome and healthful diet.

"As a supplement they are fine but as a replacement they are not worth anything."

He doesn't drink because he believes liquor affects the brain cells and because he says he gets bored with "alcohol talk."

As the father of five, grandfather of 12 and great-grandfather of, he boasts about their good health.

"Those grandchildren of mine don't eat Easter eggs and other junk foods. Just give me a child under 10 years of age and I'm like the Catholic Church teaching them about good eating habits."

If he dislikes chocolate eggs, he doesn't mind fertilized eggs.

"Sure base," he said, reaching for a dozen eggs. "These are fertile eggs. A rooster has been around them. They've got more nutrition."

Then he reached further into his hotel refrigerator. "And here are natural, unprocessed raw cheeses, yogurts, whole-wheat bread, wheat germ, raisins, grapefruit, apples, carrots and organically-grown spinach that I cut up into my salad."

After the kitchen tour, Mr. Bragg went outside and stood on his balcony naked to the waist in the brisk 49-degree air. Then he stood on his head for the longest time.

Former Head of Imperial Oil Still Spokesman for Industry

TORONTO (CP) — Bill Twaits has all but severed his formal connection with Imperial Oil Ltd., but he has no intention of slowing down.

After 41 years with the company, the last four as chairman and chief executive officer, he has retired, with more than a year to go before the mandatory age of 65.

He won't even stay on as a director because "I can't think of anything worse than having a former chief executive looking over the heads of the people running the company."

But William Osborn Twaits isn't changing his forthright opinions on controversial subjects that made him probably Canada's main spokesman for the oil industry.

His problem in retirement is not what to do but what not to do. For the time being he is moving into a Bay Street office to set up shop as a business consultant.

He is also involved with the British-North American Committee, a group that researches economic issues affecting Britain, Canada and the United States.

Recently he was elected a director of Abitibi Paper Co. Ltd. and he remains a director and vice-president of the Royal Bank of Canada.

Later this year he goes to a trade conference in Moscow sponsored by the Soviet government and the Stanford Research Institute. And there is a world energy conference in Detroit in September.

"I'm not leaving Imperial Oil because I'm mad at anybody," Mr. Twaits said in an interview. "I'm not mad at governments or anyone else."

But, given time to warm up, he touches on some of the issues that have annoyed him.

Like government which is injecting itself more and more into the oil industry.

"The economy today is a lot more complex than just cutting down a tree to make a board.

"Canadians are living with a political system that does not think 10 years ahead. It's a stab-and-cry system that is dealing with the 20th-century market.

"Sometimes I think Canadians don't know where their affluence came from. It comes from a venturesome spirit and the growth in world trade."

Mr. Twaits is scornful of the proposed national petroleum corporation, Petrocan, and says the government's incapacity to handle its own labor relations "is evidence of its managerial capabilities."

The oil industry, he said, should be able to rely on government policy that is both co-ordinated and continuous.

"How can you plan ahead when policy is turning over all the time?"

He said it is essential to form a permanent body of federal and provincial resource ministers and energy industry representatives so that talks on future development can be held with the same set of facts.

On oil company profits, he added:

"All through the 1960s the industry's return on investment was totally inadequate. You can't look at one year; you've got to look at 10 years. Despite recent earnings, we're tight—very tight—on cash because we're selling a product at $3 and replacing it at $10."

What about oil price controls?

"Prices should reflect world market levels. How do we get people to conserve energy unless we feel it's worth conserving?"

Mr. Twaits said Canada must view the total energy tie-up with the United States as one of mutual benefit.

"We have clouded the issue with talks of a continental energy policy. I don't know what that means. But there must be some linkage between Ottawa and Washington.

"Canada and the U.S. have interchanges of coal, electricity, water, oil and natural gas. That's an intricate situation and we must have a communications system between the two countries, a co-ordination of policies."

A strong supporter of the proposed $5.7-billion Mackenzie Valley gas pipeline, Mr. Twaits said it will be a tragedy for Canada if an alternate trans-Alaska project is built.

With worldwide shortages of material and skilled personnel, he said, it is imperative that the two countries not compete with each other.

Building two northern gas pipelines would be a waste of time, material and money.

Stubby Uzi Has Proved Its Worth

TEL AVIV (AP) — Israel Uzi sub-machine-gun, the principal assault weapon of the 1967 Mideast War, is slowly being eliminated for the longer-range, rapid-fire American M-16.

The stubby .38-calibre Uzi still is an excellent weapon for close-quarter combat, Israeli gun experts said, but the October War's long-distance fighting taught the Israelis they needed the added firepower of the American assault rifle.

Israeli paratroopers and infantry also carry Russian-made Kalashnikov rifles, Swedish Carl Gustavs and Belgian FNs. The Uzis are being used more and more by border patrol units and police and as sidearms for artillery gunners and rear-line forces, the experts said.

Before the October War, the Uzi was almost a part of the Israeli landscape. American planes airlifted thousands of the black, plastic-stocked M-16s to Israel during the war.

The soldiers still hitch-hike around the country with Uzis slung from their shoulders. There are one or two on almost every bus. Practically every man—and woman—in Israel, where military service is compulsory, knows how to use one. An average 18-year-old girl can put the weapon together in 30 seconds.

With only seven moving parts, the Uzi is one of the most reliable guns ever made. Bury it in the sand, toss it in water, throw it on the ground and it comes up firing—four unbounced bullets per second.

The Uzi weighs eight pounds. It has a range of 80 yards. The M-16 weighs 6¼ pounds and has a range of 460 yards, firing heavier bullets that roll end over end when they hit something. Uzi bullets spin when they hit, leaving a cleaner wound.

Developed more than 20 years ago, the Uzi is marketed by Israel Military Industries and manufactured under licence abroad by the Fabrique Nationale (FN) in Belgium.

Israel has exported the Uzi to the armed forces of West Germany and Holland and the American Secret Service has used it to guard President Nixon.

Omdurman Story Told

By PHIL THOMAS
The Associated Press

On Jan. 26, 1885, a huge dervish horde of about 50,000 attacked the city of Khartoum and killed many of its British defenders, most notably Gen. Charles (Chinese) Gordon.

It was some 13 years later that the British government, prodded by Gen. Herbert Kitchener, finally sent an army to the Sudan to avenge Gordon's death.

Led by Kitchener, the army of some 30,000 confronted the dervish horde of about 50,000 at the city of Omdurman, centre of the dervish world and located near the ruins of Khartoum, and inflicted an overwhelming defeat on the enemy.

Spurred by Kitchener's pre-battle message to "remember Gordon," the combined British-Egyptian force inflicted extremely heavy losses on the dervish army while taking relatively light casualties. This was due in good part to Kitchener's superior weapons as well as bumbling by the dervish leader.
